The new facility embraces all of the new technology gleaned from eastern seaboard communities by the consulting firm of Gale Engineering Company, Inc., of Weymouth, he said.

Mayor McCauley noted that the project is an important step in the continued upgrading of city facilities.

"This project marks the beginning of the end of the city's sub-standard animal shelter facility and will be a prominent addition to our list of city facilities," he said.

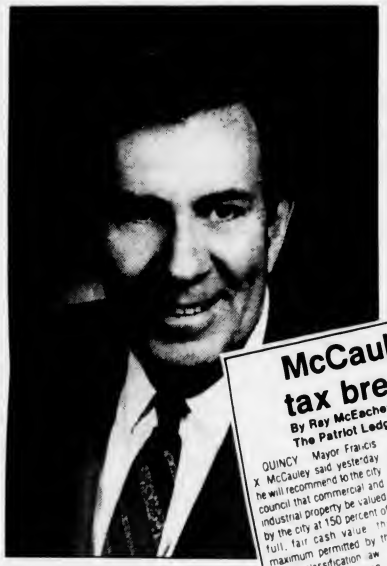
Dealing with stress is a problem many persons face on a daily basis. Three two-hour sessions called "Systematic Stress Management," sponsored by Quincy City Hospital, are designed to teach individuals to cope more effectively with stress in their lives.

The hospital will offer the program, beginning Wednesday, Nov. 4, in the hospital cafeteria. Participants will learn a systematic technology that is designed to prevent and minimize all types of stress. The techniques are effective, easily learned, and can be readily applied in a person's normal living and work environment, according to Mary Ryan, R.N., health educator at Quincy City Hospital, and an instructor certified by the American Institute of Preventive Medicine. Topics covered in the program include how to identify the causes of stress in your life, how to relax your mind and body, and how to recognize erroneous, self-defeating thoughts and replace them with realistic, relaxing beliefs.

Stress is a complex pattern of biochemical and behavioral changes organized by the body in order to cope with any increased demand placed upon it, according to Mrs. Ryan.

"We begin life with a natural stress level and a capacity to adapt to life events. Over time, this adaptation energy is slowly spent fighting emotional and physical emergencies. Every stress event leaves an invisible scar that causes our bodies to become run down," she said.



Calling ours a "nervous age," Ryan cited several reasons for inner turmoil. They include the high cost of living, crime, unemployment, over-demanding work and the changing roles of men and women.

"We pay a heavy emotional price for all this. The costs include tension symptoms, psychosomatic illnesses, physical complaints, and unsatisfying relationships. Developing effective ways to cope with the stresses of life has become a necessity," she added.

The first class in this program will be held Wednesday, Nov. 4 at 7 p.m. in the Hospital Cafeteria.

For additional information on this "Systematic Stress Management" program, or on Quincy City Hospital's "Smoking Cessation" program, which is also under the direction of Mrs. Ryan, please contact the hospital at 773-6100, ext. 3056.

Do you think property taxes are important?

MAYOR FRANK McCAULEY DOES
The McCauley "Property Tax Classification Plan" has saved residential property taxpayers and renters millions of dollars over the past four years.

McCauley proposes tax break for homes
By Rey McEachern
The Patriot Ledger

QUINCY Mayor Francis X McCauley said yesterday he will recommend to the city council that commercial and industrial property be valued by the city at 150 percent of full, fair cash value, the maximum permitted by the state's classification law. The recommendation, up from the current 130 percent, is designed to ease the impact on homeowners and renters of a revaluation that has substantially increased the assessments on residences, the mayor said. Under the state tax classification law, a city or town is authorized to shift some of the tax burden from residential property to businesses by assessing those categories higher than the value determined at the most recent reassessment, called the full, fair value. As a result, residences can be taxed at a lower than their full, fair value. McCauley will outline his tax proposal to councilors at a May 4 hearing on tax classification. With council and state approvals, the city's 22,000 spring tax bills may be in the mail by the middle of next month, he said. The tax bills will cover the second half of the fiscal year ending June 30. Adjustments will be shown for payments for last fall's estimated bills for the first half of the year. When the new bills arrive they will also provide most taxpayers with the results of the city's revaluation of their property. The list of new assessments is also due to be

Jarnis Urges Seniors To Support Schools

School Committee candidate Bob Jarnis has been urging senior citizens to support the Quincy Public Schools.

At luncheons and coffees at nearly every senior citizen housing facility, Jarnis has explained the benefit of a strong school system for all Quincy residents, not only those with school-age children or grandchildren.

"Our schools provide the young citizens of Quincy their start," he said. "The schools not only provide basic education, but also provide exposure and appreciation for the arts, as well as physical education and personal growth and development. The schools instill self-respect that leads to respect for others. It is this self respect that will allow students to become productive adults and good citizens.

"The benefits of a strong school system are enjoyed by the entire city. Products of our schools are the people we meet and deal with every day. Our school graduates work in our local stores, serve within city government, and are our neighbors," explains the first-time School Committee candidate. "It helps everyone when these people are adequately educated."

Jarnis has asked the senior citizens he has met to remember the importance of education as a basis for a full, happy and productive life, and to take an active interest in the election of School Committee members.

"The schools lay the foundation for solid and productive future citizens. Support for our schools today, both financial support from the city and general support from the residents of Quincy, will minimize costs of social programs tomorrow," he said.

Jarnis is the only candidate with children in the Quincy Public Schools and has been active as a parent representative during discussions on the issues of elementary school overcrowding and space requirements of the middle schools.

Jarnis has received endorsement from Q-Vote Associates, the independent political action organization of teachers in Quincy. Q-Vote evaluates candidates with respect to commitment to quality education and endorses those who demonstrate that commitment.

"During the campaign," noted Jarnis, "I have tried to be an advocate for the entire school system; students, teachers and parents. I am pleased that Q-Vote feels I have been supportive of their work and efforts in our schools."

"Our teaching and professional staff play a vital role in the successes of our schools. Because of this key role, we all must fully support our teachers. Support must include a fair and competitive salary package as well as greater opportunity for teacher participation during establishment and implementation of school policy."

Jarnis is a father of two in the Quincy Public Schools and a member of the Citywide Parents Council.

3 NQHS Seniors Designated Commended Students

Three North Quincy High School seniors have been designated Commended Students in the 1988 National Merit Scholarship program and will receive a Letter of Commendation in recognition of outstanding academic promise.

Alfred B. Cawthorne, Ann M. McNally and Patrick J. Murphy placed in the top 50,000 of more than one million participants in the 33rd annual Merit program, announced Principal Peter J. Chrisom.

High performance in this rigorous competition is indicative of exceptional scholastic ability, which schools play an important role in developing, said a National Merit Scholarship Corporation spokesman.

It is hoped that recognition of these young men and women will add to their motivation to pursue higher education and to become productive adult citizens in a society that values talents such as theirs.

Board Upholds Beano Night For QYHA

By KRISTINE STRENGE

Three members of the License Board voted Tuesday to uphold their recent approval of Quincy Youth Hockey Association's request to hold beano games Thursday evenings at the Bryan VFW Post starting in January.

The three members were, City Clerk, John Gillis, chairman of the board, Health Commissioner, M. Jane Gallahue and Building Inspector, Matthias Mulvey. Police Chief, Francis X. Finn and Fire Chief Carl Valenti disqualified themselves from the hearing due to their departments receiving charitable gifts from Sons of Italy.

The Quincy Sons of Italy lodge had requested that the board reconsider its approval to QYHA.

Paul A.M. Hunt, attorney for the Sons of Italy, explained that QYH will be in competition with the Sons of Italy's beano which has been held on Thursday nights since beano began in the city.

"The sons of Italy wants to protect its charities. You only need to lose a few participants in order to lose an awful lot of money," said Hunt.

Quincy Youth Hockey had held its beano game on Friday evenings at the Sons of Italy for the past three and a half years but its contract was not renewed when the Sons of Italy decided to use Friday evenings for social functions.

Robert Carroll, a representative for QYHA said his organization was not able to find another hall that could accommodate 300 to 350 people on Friday evenings. "We (QYHA) banged on every door possible," he said.

They were able to reserve the Bryan VFW Post for Thursday evenings.

"We would have preferred to stay on Friday nights, but we can not find a location available to use," said Carroll.

After reviewing the attendance of the beano games in Quincy, the board agreed that Thursday evening is the least competitive since only the Sons of Italy and Adam Shalom hold games.

Building Inspector Matthias Mulvey, also a member of the board said Thursdays would be the best for the city because beano will be distributed in three areas of the city.

Regardless of what night QYHA holds beano they will be in competition, said Carroll. "It will just make us work extremely hard to build beano back up," he said.

Robert Korzeniowski Honored At Hancock

Robert S. Korzeniowski of Quincy was recenly honored for 25 years of service with John Hancock Financial Services at the 35th annual Quarter Century Club dinner.

American Cablesystems, Continental Execute Merger Agreement

American Cablesystems Corporation (ACN) and Continental Cablevision, Inc. announces the execution of a definitive agreement of merger pursuant to which American would become a wholly-owned subsidiary of Continental and the American stockholders would receive $46.50 per share for each share of Class A and Class B common stock of American held by them.

American has an aggregate of 10,359,806 shares of Class A and Class B common stock outstanding or reserved for issuance upon exercise of stock options or conversion of outstanding convertible notes. American is taking steps to convert promptly all of the Class B common stock into Class A common stock.

American, through its subsidiaries and limited partnership affiliates, operates cable television systems in California, Florida, Illinois, Massachusetts and New York. As of October 1, 1987, those systems had more than 1,385,000 homes in franchised areas, 1,165,000 homes passed and 505,000 basic subscribers. Continental, through its subsidiaries and affiliates, operates cable television systems in each of these states (except New York) and nine other states. As of October 1 Continental was the third largest company in the cable industry and served approximately 1,475,000 subscribers.

Consummation of the merger is subject to the approval of a majority of the American shares at a special meeting scheduled to be held later this year and to the approval of various regulatory authorities.

Steven B. Dodge, chairman and chief executive officer of American, said, "While the decision to merge a company that we have worked so hard to build was a very difficult one, we believe that the merger is in the best interests of our shareholders. As well, we are confident that our employees, subscribers and franchise authorities will be in very good hands with Continental, which has an outstanding reputation for quality and reliability. We look forward to a smooth transition and to a closing in early 1988."

Amos B. Hostetter, Jr., chairman and chief executive officer of Continental, said "I have the greatest respect for what Steve Dodge has built at American over the past decade. It is an extraordinary company with talented people and an unequalled reputation for customer service. We're enthusiastic about continuing that legacy and view it as both an opportunity and a responsibility."

In connection with the execution of the Merger Agreement Continental also entered into agreements with certain major stockholders of American, including Dodge, who own in the aggregate approximately 37 percent of the American common stock. Under such agreements, each of those stockholders granted to Continental an option to purchase their shares at $46.50 per share and granted to Continental a proxy with respect to the voting of such shares in connection with the merger and other major corporate transactions.

Raiders Travel To Waltham Saturday

By TOM SULLIVAN

North Quincy finished its football series with Brockton last Friday night at Veterans Memorial Stadium and the finale had Raider coach Ken McPhee smiling despite a 25-6 loss.

North's defense, on the field for most of the game, was outstanding and the Raiders (2-4) kept Brockton's (6-0) first offensive unit in for the entire game. The game was one of the Boxers' toughest of the season.

North Quincy will travel to Waltham Saturday afternoon for a 1:30 p.m. game. Waltham is 4-2, having defeated Revere, Quincy, Cambridge Rindge and Latin and Brookline, while losing to Malden and Springfield Catholic. Waltham defeated the Raiders, 12-6, a year ago.

"Brockton is like a university out there but we gave them all they could handle," said McPhee. "We did the best we could and the defense was superlative. It was on the field nearly the whole game and I'm proud of the way we played against the 10th-ranked team in the country."

Brockton, favored to win the Super Bowl this year, controlled the ball as it ran off 60 plays to 28 for North Quincy. The Boxers threw only two passes, both incomplete.

North Quincy Scoring

	TD	PAT	Pts.
McCormack	4	0	24
MacDougall	3	4	22
Lawless	3	2	20
Ainsley	1	4	10

The Boxers ground out 370 yards on the ground with Darnell Campbell (five touchdowns against Quincy the previous week) rushing for 230 yards and Rudy Harris for 141. Each had two touchdowns.

"People ask why we don't throw," said Brockton coach Armand Colombo. "When you have those two, you give the ball to them and they do the rest. Darnell and Rudy are great football players and our offensive and defensive lines are playing just as well.

"North Quincy played a very good game but couldn't do anything against us except for that one big pass play."

Ryan Craig, held to 27 yards rushing, was brilliant on defense and figured in 24 tackles. Also playing outstanding defense were Jack Mullen, Mike Ainsley, Shawn Clancy, Matt McNamara and Scott Collins, who had seen little action in the past.

Dave Lawless, who recovered a fumble, did some excellent punting, averaging 49 yards on kicks of 56, 45 and 52 yards.

In the second quarter Campbell scored from the one and minutes later Mulvey led MacDougall down the left sideline for a 54-yard bomb to cut the Boxers' lead to 12-6.

Runs of 16, 10 and 19 by Campbell set up a two-yard touchdown plunge by Harris to make it 18-6 at the half.

North's fine defense held the Boxers scoreless in the third quarter. Brockton went to the North eight but Mullen hit Campbell for a six-yard loss and Ainsley downed Harris for a loss of four to give the Raiders possession on the 18.

With 4:17 left in the game Campbell drove over from the one and Jim Butler kicked the extra point.

Mulvey completed only the scoring pass, but in the fourth quarter he threw another bomb to MacDougall, which missed by inches of being complete for a long gain.

North Jayvees Suffer First Loss To Malden

By PETE ZOIA

The North Quincy junior varsity football team suffered its first defeat at the hands of Malden, 13-8, dropping its record to 4-1.

The Raiders, who had defeated Milton, Arlington, Newton North and Weymouth South, had a golden opportunity to win their fifth in a row when Mike Iacobacci blocked a punt on Malden's 33 in the last quarter. However, a pass interception on the 19 ended North's hopes.

The much bigger Malden team held North in check during most of the first half and neither team had a serious scoring threat as both clubs played flawless defense. North did reach Malden's 35 thanks to the hard running of Jeff Sullivan and Dave Hutchins.

Malden reached North's 17 but four passes went incomplete, thanks to the play of Tim Baker.

Malden drove 74 yards early in the third quarter to score its first touchdown. A 41-yard run around the left side set up the score. A kick was good for the conversion.

Following the ensuing kickoff North fumbled the ball away to set up Malden's second touchdown. An 18-yard pass play accounted for the score.

North came back quickly and a fine runback of the kickoff by Hutchins to Malden's 44 fired up the Raiders. Successive passes by Jim Bryan, the first to Sean McDonough for 26 yards and the second to Baker for 29 brought the ball to the one from where Bryan scored. Sullivan rushed for the two-point conversion.

Brian Healy of North pounced on a Malden loose ball on the Malden 38 and an eight-yard run by Sullivan and a 15-yard pass to McDonough put North on the 15. However, a quarterback sack and two stray passes curtailed any further penetration for North.

"This was our toughest game and the boys did an outstanding job," Coach Kevin Cobban said. "Our remaining five games will also be tough but I am confident we will win our share."

Stevenson Named Head Basketball Coach At Quincy

From Greater Boston League all-star to coach of his alma mater is the road completed by Ted Stevenson, who last week was named by the Quincy School Committee as boys' head basketball coach at North Quincy High.

Stevenson succeeds Eddie Miller who, after 11 years, didn't reapply for the North job and took the coaching position at Marshfield.

"Ted knows North Quincy basketball," said Quincy athletic coordinator Marty Finnegan, a member of the screening committee, which recommended Stevenson over four other candidates. "He does an outstanding job teaching kids and has a great relationship with young people."

Miller was delighted with the appointment. "I was hoping Ted would be appointed, as he knows all the players and I know he will do a fine job. He has several players returning from last year's varsity as well as some fine prospects from his junior varsity team," he said.

"I played here and this is fantastic," said Stevenson. "It is like a lifelong dream to come back."

Stevenson, 42, was a two-time Greater Boston League all-star and the Raiders' captain in 1964 when he averaged 19.9 points game for Coach Ken Rickson's squad. He played two years at Boston State before joining the Army reserve.

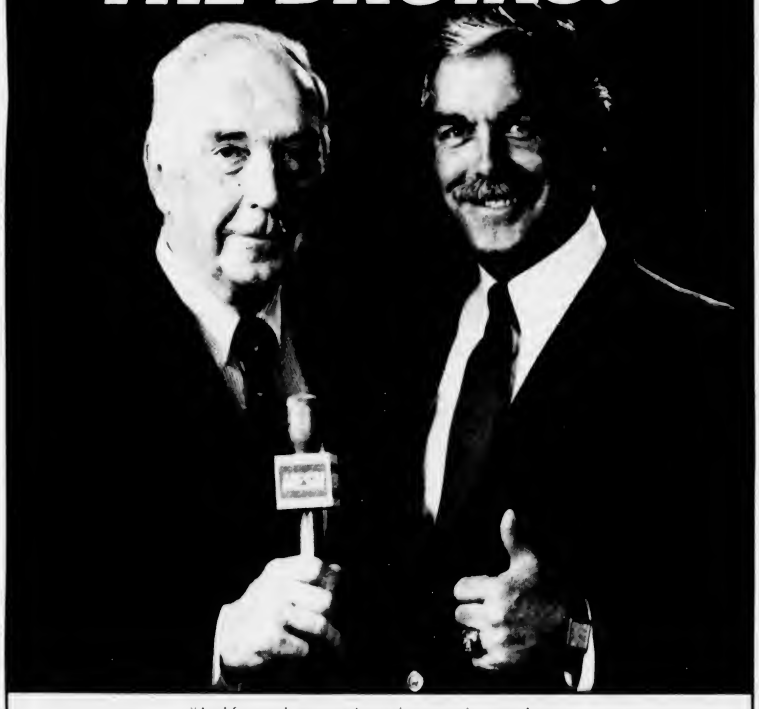
Ted is not a teacher (he is employed as a postal worker). He coached the boys' freshman team for two years and was the girls' assistant coach for two before serving the past three years as Miller's assistant and jayvee coach.

He knows his varsity candidates pretty well, having coached youth basketball for many years.

"I've coached most of these kids since the fourth or fifth grade," he said. "We have five of the top seven players back from last year."

His son, Ted, an end on the Raider football team, figures prominently in the North plans for the approaching hoop season.

Stevenson said he does not foresee wholesale changes in North's immediate future. "I like to run the ball a little more, so we will probably push the ball up the floor with a quicker pace. Mainly, I want to continue to build on the program Ed has left behind."



Ted admits it is difficult playing in the Suburban League. "The thing that is wrong is there's not one power but two. Cambridge or Brockton have played for four of the last six state championships. You can afford to play one team a year like that but two makes it very tough."

Medford 33, Quincy 8

Presidents Face Weymouth N. Friday Night

By TOM SULLIVAN

Greater Boston League football teams have been feasting on Quincy and North Quincy this season.

Arlington and Malden earlier had decisively beaten North Quincy and last Saturday night at Veterans Memorial Stadium Medford roared to a 33-8 lead and handed Quincy its sixth straight loss, 33-22.

The Presidents have games remaining with two other GBL powers, Arlington and Somerville.

Friday night Quincy will travel to Legion Field in Weymouth to meet Weymouth North at 7 p.m. The game had been originally scheduled for Saturday afternoon.

Weymouth North is 4-1-1, having defeated Braintree, Taunton, Plymouth-Carver and Silver Lake, tying Bridgewater-Raynham and last week losing to Randolph by one point. Last year Quincy rolled over the Maroons, 33-14.

As usual, Quincy was unable to move the ball on the ground against Medford, although it showed a bit of improvement with the insertion of Jim Dennett who, along with Peter Olivieri, has been playing with the junior varsity.

The Presidents had a net of only 60 yards rushing and Dennett gained 45. The rushing yardage was cut down again as quarterback Chris Noble was sacked four times.

Noble had another good night passing, completing 10 of 15 passes for 207 yards and two touchdowns, his sixth and seventh of the season. His favorite target, Sean Munroe, had six receptions for 176 yards and his sixth and seventh touchdowns of the year.

In his six games Noble has hit in 58 of 109 passes for 868 yards and seven touchdowns, plus a pair of two-point conversions. Munroe has 30 receptions and seven touchdowns.

Quincy Scoring

	TD	PAT	Pts.
Munroe	7	4	46
Grant	2	0	12
Noble	1	0	6
Light	0	4	4
Logan	0	2	2
Dennett	0	2	2

As was the case with Brockton the previous week, Medford stuck to the ground and had 316 yards rushing. Quarterback John Meagher passed only twice and completed both for 34 yards.

Once again the long plays hurt Quincy with runs of 51 and 95 yards setting up Mustang scores.

"We are still a passing team and we have to improve our running game," said Quincy coach Jack Raymer. "Jimmy Dennett showed promise and he and Olivieri will be used more in the future.

"Our offensive line still has to improve and the defense is still making too many mistakes. We have used just about every defense possible but the other teams are still running through us. The kids are playing the best they can and never once have they given up. We are making too many mistakes and penalties continue to hurt us. Also, we are still being killed by the big gainers."

Scott Grant, who caught his first touchdown pass, was involved in one of the game's most spectacular plays. In the fourth quarter, with the ball on his own five, Medford's Rick Ricciardi broke loose and raced down the right sideline. Grant pursued him and finally brought him down on the Quincy five.

Quincy received the opening kickoff and, with Noble completing three straight passes, drove to Medford's 35. But a 15-yard penalty set the Presidents back to midfield, forcing a Noble punt.

Medford scored its first touchdown when David Morey raced around left end for 51 yards to Quincy's nine and two plays later he scored.

Medford recovered a fumble on Quincy's 33 and Peter McCoy scored from the two after going 12 yards to that point.

Quincy staged its best drive following the kickoff and Noble hit Munroe with a perfectly thrown 41-yard scoring bomb as Munroe outran the secondary. Dennett rushed for the two-point conversion.

Medford drove 70 yards for its next score and McCoy scored from the eight and also rushed for the two-point conversion.

An intercepted pass set up the next Mustang touchdown as they drove 62 yards, including the only two passes.

They picked up four first downs and Jason Francis went over from the three.

A Noble to Munroe pass for a long gainer was nullified by a penalty and the half ended with Medford in front, 26-8.

In the third quarter Noble hit Munroe for a 46-yard pass to Medford's seven, but the Mustangs held and took over on the five.

Later Quincy again reached Medford's five but was stopped.

Ricciardi then got off his 95-yard run and he scored on the next play. Mike Mazzone kicked the final Medford point.

Medford coach Bud Kelly, unlike some other coaches, gave his reserves plenty of action and the Presidents made things interesting.

Noble passed to Grant for 19 yards and a touchdown and then hit Ernie Light for the two points.

Late in the game, following a fumble recovery, backup quarterback Scott Campbell threw a pretty pass to Munroe for 39 yards and the final points of the game.

JIM DENNETT, who started his first game for the varsity and was the leading ground gainer for Quincy against Medford, takes a handoff from quarterback Chris Noble and picks up good yardage.

North Girls Clinch First Title

The North Quincy girls' volleyball team (16-0) clinched its first Suburban League championship Monday with a hard-fought 2-1 win over second place Boston Latin.

North faced Quincy, which had been the perennial league champion, last night and will wind up the regular season Friday at home against Brookline at 3:30.

North Quincy, which went to the South Sectional finals last year in its first Easton Mass. Tournament appearance, will be one of the top-seeded teams this year.

The Raiderettes defeated Latin, 15-3, in the first game Monday, lost only their second game of the season, 9-15, in the second and had to overcome an 8-0 deficit to win the third game, 17-15.

Deirdre Murphy had 14 kills, Jill Caldwell nine and Holly Rendle eight for North, while Debbie Panaro was all over the court.

"This was our most important win of the season and I'm very happy for the girls as they have worked awfully hard and it has paid off with their first league championship ever," Coach Jim Rendle said.

Last Friday the Raiderettes defeated Newton North, 15-10, 15-10, with Murphy having nine kills and Rendle five. Caldwell served five aces and Christine Venezia played strong defense.

Earlier in the week North lost its first game of the season as it defeated Brockton, 15-2, 13-15, 15-8.

Rendle has done an excellent job with the North Quincy program. A former Quincy High three-sport star and a football star at the University of Massachusetts, Rendle, who became interested in volleyball when he was named physical director at the Quincy YMCA upon graduation from college, inherited a 3-15 team at North in 1985.

He improved the record to 10-7, barely missing the tournament, then last year the Raiderettes went 13-5 and qualified for the tournament for the first time.

North Quincy's junior varsity team is also 16-0 and the freshman team is having an excellent season.

Sailors Move Into Top Tie With Panthers

The Squantum Sailors moved into a top tie with the Quincy Point Panthers in the Quincy Youth Football League when they topped the Panthers, 6-2, Sunday at Veterans Memorial Stadium.

The win avenged an earlier loss to the Panthers and the teams have 4-1 records.

In the second game the North Quincy Apaches and the Houghs Neck Manets played to a 6-6 tie.

Next Sunday at the stadium the Panthers will face the Apaches at 1 p.m. and the West Quincy Elks will meet the Manets at 2:30.

Mike Picarello, Mike Lally and Billy Lydon led the Sailors' offense, picking up yardage on the way to their lone touchdown by Picarello in the second quarter. Lally threw the key block. The Panthers' Ally Sleiman and Matt McLarnon stopped the try for the conversion.

The Panthers took possession and marched into Sailor territory, but were forced to punt. The Sailors fumbled Joe Crespi's kick and Sleiman recovered. The Panthers drove to the two-yard line on some fine second efforts by Derek Tardanicco. On first and goal there was a controversial fumble call and the Sailors took over. The Panthers scored their only points as the defense downed the Sailors' ball carrier in the end zone for a safety.

The Sailors received the second half kickoff and were forced to punt quickly as Sleiman, John Slack and Paul Shipley led the Panther defense.

The ball exchanged hands twice more as Wayne Bradley, Chris Nelson and Dan Savage made some key plays for the Sailors and Crespi, Tardanicco and McLarnon helped the Panthers.

In the fourth quarter the Panthers were stopped but a Sailor fumble gave the Panthers a last chance. However, a penalty call against the Panthers gave the ball back to the Sailors, who ran out the clock.

Mark Nantel was a standout for the Sailors. He was questionable before the game with a back injury, but played the entire game. Leading a strong defense were John McAdams, Savage, Chris McCallum, Ugene Kwong, Pat Faherty, Picarello, Nelson, Nantel, Lydon and Bradley. Lally, Ken Cunningham and Bill Degan also had excellent games.

In the second game the Manets scored early, but the Apaches came back to tie it up. Late in the game the Apaches threatened inside the Manet 10, but time ran out.

Veterans Stadium Track To Be Repaired

Work is expected to begin in late spring on resurfacing the running track at Veterans Memorial Stadium.

According to Raymond Cattaneo, acting executive director of Park, Forestry and Cemetery Departments, work on the fifth of a mile track should take two to three days.

"It can't be done now because temperatures around 70 degrees are needed," he said.

The work will be done by Derbes Brothers of Quincy who were the low bidders at $45,475.

The City Council appropriated $41,000 in June for the project, and the balance of $4,475 at the last meeting.

"Over the years, because of the extreme use and weather conditions, the track has become almost a hazard for the high schools and Quincy Track Club that utilize the facility," Cattaneo said.

"Within a few years, it will almost be a necessity to repair the track and the cost at that time would be thousands more than the price Derbes Brothers has submitted," he said.

Seymourian said the school's intent is to provide a family alternative to trick or treating. There will be a snack bar and games where the faint-of-heart can wait for the braver members of their family to join them. All proceeds from the event will benefit the Woodward Scholarship Fund.

Several rooms in the spooky-looking, 93-year-old building will be transformed into spine-tingling scenarios. Small groups will be personally escorted through the maze of horrors by parent volunteers in costume.

Woodward students will get into the act and bring the scenes to life. Background sets have been painted by the students in Jane Johnston's art class. Many of the costumes will be provided by Diane Purdy's Drama Workshop, which holds classes at the school.

The Witches' Mansion will be held at the school from 6 to 9 p.m. Thursday and Friday, Oct. 29 and 30 and from noon to 9 p.m. on Halloween Day, Saturday, Oct. 31. There will be a witch's toll of $1.50 for touring the mansion.

PISCES – February 20 - March 20
Praise for your work arrives from an influential party. Work tensions ease and you can get on with the job. Think about taking a course with a favorite friend.

ARIES – March 21 - April 20
Mysteries appear in letters that arrive this week; the solutions are more obvious than you realize. Creative pursuits are highlighted and may be more profitable than expected.

TAURUS – April 21 - May 22
Relationships with neighbors are improving, but don't rush the process. Watch leaning toward procrastination. Small surprises cheer you after the weekend. Coworkers respect your ideas.

GEMINI – May 23 - June 21
Carefully weigh pros and cons before making any decision, especially if it relates to household or career matters. Diet and fitness programs benefit from a more sensible approach.

CANCER – June 22 - July 22
Younger relative helps you over a personal hurdle. Hunches are generally strong in career, but leave nothing to chance. Monday-Wednesday accent financial reviews and planning.

LEO – July 23 - August 22
Week may find you traveling to interesting locales. Detective work is accented as you solve a major mystery by Wednesday. Being observant may lead to financial gains.

VIRGO – August 23 - September 22

Holy Spirit, you who solve all problems, light all roads so that I can attain my goal. You gave me the divine gift to forgive and forget all evil against me and that in all instances of my life you are with me. I want in this short prayer to thank you for all things and to confirm once again that I never want to be separated from you and even in spite of all material illusions. I wish to be with you in eternal glory. Thank you for your mercy toward me and mine. This prayer must be said for three days and after three days the favor will be granted. The prayer must be published immediately.

Victory Margin 474 Votes

McCauley Captures Fourth Term, Cahill, Chretien, Phelan Win Seats

By NANCY McLAUGHLIN
ROBERT BOSWORTH and RICK RYAN

Mayor Francis McCauley edged challenger Joseph LaRaia Tuesday in one of the closest Quincy elections in recent years to win a fourth term.

McCauley's margin was a slim 474 votes as he polled 11,436 votes to 10,962 for LaRaia.

Asked if he might file for a recount, LaRaia said: "I don't know."

City Clerk John Gillis said all ballot boxes were placed under police protection in the basement of City Hall for 24 hours as a precautionary measure.

The voter turnout was 52 percent.

The lead see-sawed back and forth most of the night with LaRaia holding a 10-vote advantage with just five precincts to be heard from.

LaRaia tallied only 21 more votes than McCauley--621 to 600--in an area that had been considered LaRaia Country.

That gave McCauley a 331 vote margin with only Ward 6, Precinct 5 left to come in. That precinct, traditionally McCauley's, boosted him to a 474 margin victory.

It was the closest mayoral win since 1975 when LaRaia ousted Mayor Walter Hannon by 483 votes in a recount.

City Council President Stephen McGrath, Patricia Toland and newcomer Tim Cahill won the three City Council at-large seats,

FRANCIS McCAULEY
Mayor

finishing in that order.

Ward 4 incumbent James Sheets breezed by challenger Philip Baldassini 2,886 to 648 votes.

Charles Phelan Jr. took the Ward 5 City Council seat, defeating John Keenan.

The three incumbent School Committee members were all re-elected with Christopher Kennedy topping the field. Kennedy's vote of 13,079 was also tops on the entire ballot.

Stephen Durkin and Frank Anselmo polled 12,114 and 11,063 votes respectively to nail down the other two School Committee seats.

LaRaia conceded the election at midnight at his headquarters at Chevy's. Disappointed, but smiling he said:

"We don't have an election win tonight. But we can all be proud of the campaign.

"I'm proud of you and the work you put into this campaign," he told his campaign supporters.

As for the slight margin of victory, he said: "Luckily we had a plurality and I'm delighted with the outcome."

Ward Councillors Michael Cheney (1), Ted DeCristofaro (2) and Thomas Nutley (6) were re-elected without opposition.

A second computer was brought in to count the remaining 25 precincts.

In the City Councillor at Large race, McGrath topped the voting with 12,479 followed by Toland, 10,253; and Thomas Koch, 8,787.

Chretien defeated MacKay for the Ward 3 council seat with a tally of 2,332 to 1,555.

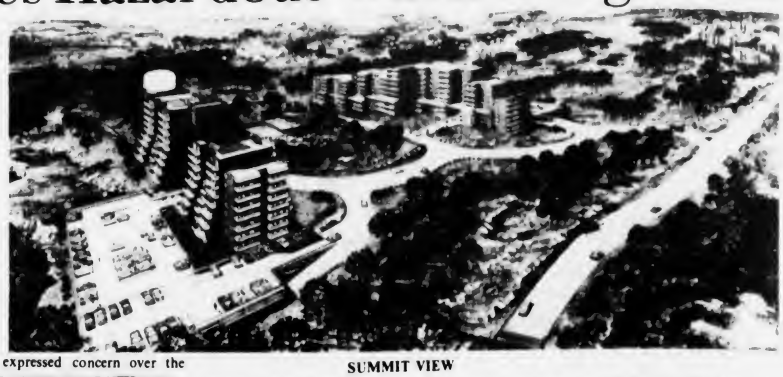
Cites Over 4,000 Tests, Measurements

Ricciardi Refutes Hazardous Waste Allegations

The Ricciardi Co. of Quincy has refuted allegations of hazardous waste on Quarry Hill where it plans to build Summit View, a 1,050 unit development.

According to Ricciardi, more than 4,000 independent tests and measurements conducted by three engineering firms and four laboratories have led state environmental officials to conclude that the former quarry site is safe for construction.



It is not a health threat to workers and residents, added Ricciardi.

The Mass. Environmental Protection Agency and the state Department of Environmental Quality Engineering have each issued statements and correspondence approving the major condominium development based on tests performed since 1975, the Ricciardi Co. said.

The Ricciardi Co. said the state agencies required in 1985 that it conduct deep monitoring water tests.

"These tests indicated that the water from the wells exceeded in all but one case, Federal Drinking Water Standards," said Steve Ricciardi. "That's healthier than what most people get out of their tap," he added.

City Council officials have expressed concern over the potential health threat from waste disposed at the site up until 1971, which is when all filling activity ceased.

SUMMIT VIEW

Other community concerns include rodent populations, radiation levels, metal deposits in the soil, and a health risk to construction workers.

Ricciardi addressed each issue and cited independent tests of each:

- A 1986 rodent survey revealed that a large population of Norway rats inhabited areas containing recently discarded refuse. While dumping officially ended in 1971, residents are illegally dumping at the site, according to Ricciardi. Rats are living off fresh refuse; once illegal dumping stops, the population will die, he said.
- A 1984 site test by Goldberg-Zoino & Associates (GZA) as part of a mandated 21E environmental site assessment concluded "insignificant" levels of arsenic, barium, cadium, chromium, lead, mercury, selenium and silver. The only risk was high concentration of lead in some areas, Ricciardi said. However, to address the lead levels, GZA simply recommended dust masks for construction workers. Ricciardi said any developer would provide them regardless of testing results and construction will not be done in the small area that revealed a presence of lead.
- According to Ricciardi, a GZA survey of 1800 surface exposure measurements on the site concluded "the radiation levels at the Quarry Street site are typical of natural background values for the region."

On Sept. 3, the Mass Housing Finance Agency issued a letter stating "our conclusion that the site is suitable for housing." The statement was part of a verification and suitability analysis for the Comprehensive Permit process.

The Comprehensive Permit process mandates the developer to reserve 40 percent of the project for affordable housing.

At least 536 of the 1,340 units will be affordable as defined by the state.

In addition, Ricciardi said he will guarantee that 75 percent of the affordable units will be reserved for Quincy residents.

About 25 percent of the affordable units will be sold to eligible families with household incomes between $18,000 and $30,000. The remaining 75 percent will be sold to eligible families with incomes between $31,000 and $41,000, he said.

These income levels are defined by the state.

"We're extremely concerned about the affordable housing issue in Quincy and we're working closely with the state to ensure that these units will stay affordable into the 21st century," said Ricciardi. "We've been committed to affordable housing from the very beginning," he said.

Ricciardi Company officials will testify before the Zoning Board of Appeals Thursday, Nov. 12 as part of the Comprehensive Permit Process.

The MBTA has eliminated the visibility problems at the corner of Newport Ave and Billings Rd. at his request, Senator Paul D. Harold announces.

All bush, weeds and overgrowth have been cut and removed to eliminate a potentially dangerous condition at the intersection. In addition, repairs have been made to the concrete stairs, said Senator Harold.

"I am pleased that the MBTA responded so readily to my request to improve the safety at this corner," Senator Harold added.

Q: What's up and coming in health care?

No Plans To End Ambulance Contract Because Of Indictment

Mayor Francis McCauley said the city has no plans to end its contract with Bay State Ambulance which was indicted after allegedly bribing a former Quincy City Hospital official to obtain the city's ambulance service contract in 1984.

"You can't terminate a contract because of an indictment," said McCauley, referring to an opinion from Atty. Paul Barbadoro of the city solicitor's office.

"We'll look at the overall situation again if the ambulance service and its president are found guilty," he said.

The 29-count federal indictment issued last Thursday alleges that Bay State paid bribes and kickbacks to John L. Felci, 37, of 67 Ocean St., Squantum, in return for his help in securing the city's exclusive ambulance service contract in 1984.

Bay State president Michael G. Kotzen of Lexington was indicted along with Felci and the ambulance company, the largest such service in the state.

Felci was the hospital's director of training and education from 1982 to 1986. He resigned in May, 1986, to go to work for Bay State.

The indictment alleges that Felci provided false and misleading information to the hospital's Ambulance Service Bid Review Committee to influence the award of the three-year contract.

Felci allegedly received nearly $10,000 and two cars, between May and December 1984, for helping Bay State, according to Assistant U.S. Attorney Gary Crossen.

Both Felci and Kotzen are charged with defrauding the Medicare system, mail fraud, conspiring to commit mail fraud, paying bribes, and providing kickbacks and making false statements to law enforcement officials.

The two men have been ordered to an initial court appearance and arraignment probably late this week, according to Crossen.

If convicted, Felci faces up to 95 years in prison and $700,000 in fines. Kotzen, up to 100 years in prison and $400,000 fine, and Bay State, a maximum fine of $400,000.

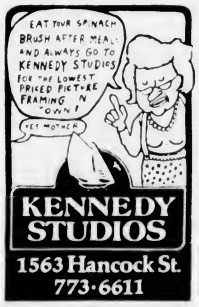
McCauley said he was informed by federal authorities two years ago that an investigation involving Felci was being conducted.

Felci was removed from the hospital's business dealings with Bay State after hospital officials were notified of the investigation, McCauley said.

"Quincy City Hospital gave its complete cooperation," said McCauley. "The hospital and this administration acted responsibly."

According to McCauley, Bay State was first awarded the ambulance contract for the city in 1981 under Mayor Arthur Tobin. The contract was renewed in 1984 and 1987, he said.

"They have provided good ambulance service at no cost to the city," said McCauley, who noted that bills are sent to third party payers.



Prior to 1981, the Police Department provided ambulance service at a cost of about $600,000 a year.

"The ambulance service released police personnel from that duty," McCauley said.

Quincy Lions Club Free Glaucoma Clinic Nov. 18

In cooperation with the Quincy Health Department, the Lions Club will co-sponsor a Glaucoma Screening Clinic Wednesday, Nov. 18, 2 to 4 p.m. at the J.F.K. Health Center, Hancock St., Quincy.

Quincy dentist Dr. James Will is project chairman for the Quincy Lions Club.

Glaucoma is an eye condition in which vision is lost due to a build-up of pressure within the eye, he said.

Two vital eye components, the cornea and the lens are cleaned and nourished by fluids that circulate in the eye, according to Dr. Will.

If the flow of these vital fluids is blocked, or not allowed to drain off, pressure builds and eventually the eye's fragile structures are destroyed, he said.

Undetected and untreated, glaucoma leads to total blindness, Dr. Will said.

"There may be no symptoms at all. Only a periodic check-up by a qualified eye specialist can detect the presence of glaucoma," says Dr. Will.

All Quincy residents are welcome. It is recommended that anyone over 40 years of age should take advantage of this free service, he noted.

Those persons who already have glaucoma will not receive treatment, since the purpose of this examination is to detect the disease, added Dr. Will.

Call 773-1380 ext. 238, for an appointment.

Roots Of Words

Sequin: People who wear sequins on their clothes like to think they look like a million dollars. Actually, they're closer to the thought than they realize: the word comes from zecchino, a gold coin from Venice. That word comes from zecca, an Italian word for mint. That word comes from sikka, an Arabian word for coin.

Sequoia: The name of the majestic giant pine is the same name as the one borne by the enlightened half-Cherokee, half-Caucasian Indian chief who devised an alphabet for the Cherokee language. Sequoia actually is an anglicized form of Chief Sequoia's name which, in Cherokee, is Sikwayl.

We're Glad They Stayed

You might say Rev. Peter Corea misfigured a little – say by about 37 years.

PETER

ALICIA

He and his wife, Rev. Alicia Corea, were recently officially congratulated by the City Council on the 40th anniversary of their team ministry at Houghs Neck Congregational Church.

Their's is one of the first husband and wife team ministries in the New England area.

CHENEY

"They've made a significant difference in the quality of life in Houghs Neck," observed Councillor Michael Cheney who represents the Houghs Neck area.

The Coreas came to Houghs Neck in September, 1947, the year Rev. Dr. Corea was ordained.

His wife still had a year to go with her studies at Andover-Newton Theological School where they had met as students and married.

His starting salary was $24 a week.

She graduated in 1948 and was ordained a year later.

They have been quite busy.

They estimate they have:

Conducted more than 6200 worship services, performed over 420 weddings, baptized more than 400 and officiated at 2,000 funerals.

There was a $10,000 church mortgage when they arrived. Now the church is debt free and there are 100,000 in captial assets.

They have been actively involved in their community.

A community of summer homes back then, Houghs Neck is now one of year-round homes with owners deeply interested in their community -- a community that works together -- and sticks together.

"We had expected to be in Houghs Neck about three years," Rev. Dr. Corea told the City Council. "But as you can see, we've been here quite a while.

He went on to praise the City Council.

"I can only add one word to that," said Alicia Corea "Amen."

To which we would like to add that the Houghs Neck community -- and the city -- are glad the Coreas decided to stay a little longer than three years.

And, amen, to that.

FORMER Mayor-Senator James McIntyre has been gone more than three years now, but he is fondly remembered.

McINTYRE

When you think of Jim McIntyre, you usually think of his brilliant political career. But McIntyre was involved in many worthy causes and one dear to his heart was scouting, especially Camp Massasoit in Plymouth.

Camp Massasoit observed its 60th anniversary recently and paid tribute to McIntyre with the dedication of the James R. McIntyre Lodge.

Among those on hand for the dedication were Erik Nystrom, Scout Executive Greater Boston Council; Harold Crowley, Jr., chairman Massasoit Development Committee and McIntyre's wife, Sheila.

Mediators Helping To Expedite, Satisfy Small Claims Matters

By NANCY McLAUGHLIN

Quincy District Court offers parties with small claims cases a way to have their "day in court" before having to air their differences in a courtroom.

With the help of a mediator, the two parties discuss their problem informally and work toward a solution both can live with.

"We try to make it a win win situation," said Lorraine Rosenblatt, one of the trained mediators at the district court. "In court, there is a winner and a loser.

"We aren't arbitrators who decide a case," she said. "We come up with options.

"We try to get people to communicate, to listen to each other, and to make the best of the situation.

"It's a very positive experience for most people," she said.

During Mediation Day held recently to publicize the process, Judge Albert Kramer, presiding justice, said small claims cases, which involve amounts up to $1,500, represent 54 percent of noncriminal business.

Such cases typically involve things like contractors who don't deliver or cleaners who damage garments.

"We have consistently shown that all these cases can be mediated with a 67 percent success rate," said Kramer. "It's a process that is less expensive, less intimidating and provides every bit as good a resolution as a court trial.

"Some cases shouldn't be mediated, but a lot should.

"We intend to expand mediation to our entire civil caseload through the use of lawyers as mediators. We recommend this also be instituted system-wide."

Kramer explained that the court system in Massachusetts is in a "severe crisis."

"Massachusetts rates 48th in ratio of judges to populations," he said.

"We need an immediate infusion of additional judges. But this alone will not be the answer.

"We must also undertake bold imaginative initiatives.

"We need to adopt methods of settling disputes outside of the courtroom."

Kramer advocates that Dispute Resolution Centers, similar to those in New York, be established throughout Massachusetts to mediate all types of noncriminal cases, and some disputes involving minor criminal charges.

He said that small claims sessions with trained mediators, who also include student volunteers from Harvard University, Emerson College and the University of Massachusetts, generally last about 30 minutes.

It costs about $37 to train each mediator, Kramer noted.

The sessions are held in private rooms in other areas of the courthouse. If they are successful, an agreement is signed.

If not, the next step is to appear before a judge.

Kramer noted that four or five courts in the state offer mediation, but Quincy is the only one which requires it as a first step.

"Mediation sessions allow release of anger, emotional ventilation," he added.

In another part of the courthouse, Dr. Bernadette MacPherson mediated a problem concerning family members and finances after the death of the mother.

Dr. MacPherson listened to the family members together, then to the two sides individually, before uniting them again.

"You let them know that you feel strongly about where they are coming from," she said.

"There was hate and mistrust between the brothers and sisters."

But, after an hour and 15 minutes, a solution was reached that was acceptable to all, and the session ended with the signing of an agreement and the sharing of coffee.

"I'm sure their mother is able to rest easier with the knowledge that they were sharing coffee," said Dr. MacPherson.

Good Old Fashioned Stew With Dumplings

Here was that old nip in the air again and my thoughts turned to something hot, steamy and substantial. That's how it was on that first cool day recently. And when I decided on a good hearty stew with dumplings. All cooked in one pan and so satisfying. This day, though instead of using beef, I used veal and since have also used lamb, so take your pick!

VEAL STEW WITH DUMPLINGS
1 Lb tender veal cut in one inch pieces
1 medium sized onion
salt and pepper
A couple of Tbsps of white wine
2-3 potatoes, cut up in small pieces
2 carrots, also cut
2 Tbsps oil (any kind) or butter if you prefer
2 cups water

In hot oil, brown the onions and veal. When the meat turns a little brown, add the wine and stir, then add the cut up potatoes, carrots and then the water. Cover and cook on low heat until all vegetables are done. Set aside while you make the dumplings. If you want a thicker stew, add a little flour and water to thicken.

TRIED AND TRUE DUMPLINGS
1 cup flour
½ tsp salt
1½ tsps baking powder
a half Tbsp oil
1 egg beaten
6 Tbsps of either water or milk

Place flour, salt and baking powder in a bowl. Add the water or milk. Add the oil and the egg and stir until blended. Drop from tablespoonsfull on top of the stew. Cover and cook about 20 minutes. Make enough dumplings so each person gets at least one on top of their hot stew.

Marie D'Olimpio is the author of "Simply Italian-And Then Some," a collection of her own recipes. Copies of the book are available at That's Italian, Franklin St., South Quincy; Previte's Market, Sumner St., Quincy Point , Samoset Pharmacy, Samoset Ave., Merrymount and Winfield Gift Emporium, Hancock St., Quincy Center.

Old Favorites, New Melodies At Point Congregational

Members and friends of Quincy Point Congregational Church will gather at 10 a.m. Sunday, Nov. 8, for worship, Christian education and the celebration of 150 years of hymnody.

The church is marking its 150th year of worship and mission. The first congregation was gathered in Quincy Point in 1838 as a Methodist Episcopal Church. In 1884, church members voted to affiliate with the Congregational Christian Churches; and in 1957, the church voted to become a member church of the United Church of Christ.

For this Sunday's service of worship, the Reverends Fred and Carol Atwood-Lyon, pastors of the local church, and Herman Weiss, organist and choir director, have prepared a service celebrating 150 years of hymn singing. Three hymns will be introduced and sung to illustrate the hymns the local congregation was learning back in the mid-1800's, such as "Rock of Ages," "Dear Lord and Father of Mankind," and "O for a Thousand Tongues to Sing."

Five additional hymns will be introduced to represent the church as it responded to the world's agenda over the 150-year period. The hymn of American revivalism will be "Leaning on the Everlasting Arms." "Once to Every Man and Nation" will illustrate the church's engagement in social justice. The hymn denoting modern industrialization will be "When Through the Whirl of Wheels." "Where Cross the Crowded Ways of Life" will illustrate the church's mission in the city; and a hymn representing the mission movement overseas will be "O Zion Haste, Thy Mission High Fulfilling."

The offertory anthem by the Chancel Choir will be "Sing a New Song" by Eddleman as the congregation learns melodies and hymns of the future. The Chancel Choir will also sing contemporary renditions of the "Gloria Patri," the "Doxology" and an older hymn with a new melody, "Breathe On Me, Breath of God." Two hymns illustrating the growing interest in inclusive langugage in contemporary hymn singing include "The Church's One Foundation" and "Rise Up, Ye Saints of God." Contemporary hymns and songs for future use in worship will be taught to the congregation, including "There's A Church Within Us, O God," "Earth and All Stars" and "When In Our Music God Is Glorified."

All church members and friends, and especially first-time visitors, are invited to attend the music service. Child care is provided in the Crib Room and Nursery which have been newly furnished.

Church School classes are provided by the teaching staff for young children through young people in high school during the morning service. Following the morning service, refreshments and fellowship are enjoyed in the social hall. Parents wishing to register their children and young people in the church school may do so by asking for Glenn McGhee, Superintendent, or by calling the church office at 773-6424.

'Pilgrim' Preaches At Squantum First Church

Worshippers at each morning service of the First Church of Squantum Sunday heard a "Pilgrim" preach the sermon.

Taking the role of Pilgrim William Bradford, the Rev. Dr. Gene Langevin, pastor of the church, told the story of the Pilgrims' decision in 1620 to leave their home of 12 years in Holland and set sail for the New World.

The sermon was entitled "Seeking the Right Way." The scripture used as a text was based by the Pilgrims' own pastor, the Rev. John Robinson, when he and other Separatists in Holland saw the Pilgrims off on their journey to America.

During the first service, guitarists Andy Ogilvie and Mary Ruth Scott accompanied the singing of the congregation. During the second service, the Chancel Choir gave a choral call to worship by singing, "Lead Me, Lord."

The Lord's Supper was observed as part of the service. Seated with the pastor at the Lord's Table were Deacons Gretchen Bumpus, Lew Townson, Barbara Anderson, Stewart Scott, and Tom Williamson.

Special prayers were offered this week for Michael Sweet and his family, Jens Thornton, Carl Anderson, and Ida Von Reigers, all recovering from surgery, Robert Von Reigers, now in the hospital; Carrie MacIntyre, Dave Mildram, Olive Brooks, and Clara Cole, all now in nursing homes; Jens Thornton, Sr., at home; Pete Williamson's daughter, in the hospital in California; Grace Holmes' sister, in the hospital in Weymouth; and Valerie Gorrill, whose father died in England last week.

David Ahearn and Mindi Hurd were the ushers at the first service; Stewart Scott and Tore Wallin, at the second. May Lewis and Edna Swanson were the greeters. The Fellowship Hour after the second service was hosted by Helen Miller and Drusilla Warnes.

The benediction spoken at the end of each service was originally written by the Rev. John Robinson to Pilgrim John Carver, on July 27, 1620, as the Pilgrims were about to begin their famous voyage.

In the afternoon, young people from The Way Up cleared leaves from the church lawn, cleaned several rooms in the church, and helped to set up for the church fair to be held in Fellowship Hall on Saturday, Nov. 7, from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. The Way Up is a specialized youth ministry for young people not otherwise connected with the church.

There will be a meeting of the Church Council at 7 p.m. on Sunday, Nov. 8. On Saturday, Nov. 14, Evening Friendship is sponsoring a Ham and Bean Supper in Fellowship Hall.

The Nominating Committee will meet again Sunday, Nov. 15, at 7:30 p.m. The Board of Christian Education will meet at 6:30 p.m. on Sunday, Nov. 8, before the Church Council meeting. The Board of Trustees will meet Monday, Nov. 16, at 7:30 p.m. The Board of Deacons will meet Monday, Nov. 23, at 7:30 p.m.

There will be two worship services again this Sunday, the guitar service at 8:30 a.m. and the traditional service at 10:30 a.m.

An Open Letter to the Residents of Quincy about Summit View

WE'VE LISTENED AND LEARNED: NOW HELP US DO IT RIGHT

We knew there would be community concern about Summit View when we purchased the site on Quarry Street in 1985. There was talk about traffic, water, sewage disposal, and even hazardous waste.

But we had a vision.

Our family has lived in Quincy for over 60 years. Since our father was in the granite business, we grew up around our famous Quincy quarries. We learned the land. That's why we saw the possibilities atop Quarry Street, one of the most magnificent locations in our city.

Over the past decade, truly affordable housing has all but disappeared in Quincy. Continually rising prices have pushed young Quincy couples and families away from our community.

To transform the 73-acre site into a comfortable, pleasant, beautiful, and affordable living environment became our goal.

But we also realized that there was a potential for problems on site. Immediately, we hired an independent geological survey firm to analyze thoroughly and completely the condition of the property. All this was above and beyond the 3,000 tests which had been performed since the City of Quincy ceased landfill there in 1971 . . . 16 years ago.

We want to share with you the results of all these detailed studies.

"Proposed structures can be safely built on the site."
Haley & Aldrich, Geotechnical Engineers, 1973

"Little or no combustible gas concentrations were present."
Haley & Aldrich, Geotechnical Engineers, 1982

"The radiation levels at the site are typical of natural background values for the region."
Goldberg, Zoino & Associates, Inc., 1984

"The types and concentrations of contaminants encountered at the quarry road site can be effectively dealt with by strict attention to normal prudent health and safety procedures and sympathetic design."
Goldberg, Zoino & Associates, Inc., 1985

Based on a Department of Environmental Quality Engineering recommendation, deep monitoring wells for periodic water samples were installed in 1985 to deal directly with the possibility of hazardous waste. Goldberg, Zoino & Associates concluded that the water from the wells exceeded, in all but one case, Federal Drinking Water Standards.

Additional studies have been completed and submitted to the Department of Environmental Quality Engineering which has stated, "Department scientists and engineers in the Division of Solid Waste and the Division of Hazardous Waste have reviewed the scope of work and approved its implementation."
DEQE, July, 1987

As Quincy residents with a business and personal commitment to the city, we will only propose a project that is beneficial to the city. That's why we have invested time, money, and effort in making certain that Summit View can be the best possible residential development in the city!

That is why we have eagerly sought to work with and comply with the rigorous requirements set forth by the state's Department of Environmental Quality Engineering and the Massachusetts Environmental Policy Act. All of this information is available to you now at our office or the Planning Department at City Hall.

There is also the question of sewage disposal. Will a development atop Quarry Street cause problems for the residents below? That is a legitimate question.

Due to the construction of the new Fort Square Sewage lift station, it has been concluded that with minor exceptions, "the estimated peak flow which will occur when the project is completed is 35 percent of the average carrying capacity of the sewer line."
Briggs Engineering, 1986

With regard to off-site drainage, the site, upon completion, will discharge runoff at a peak rate 50 percent less than what occurs now.

When it comes to traffic, the state Office of Environmental Affairs requires improvements in four intersections and the availability of shuttle bus service to the MBTA station in Quincy Center. We have agreed to meet these conditions without cost to the taxpayer. Quarry Street is currently rated, by state standards, at a level of service (LOS) A, which is the best in terms of road usage.

Yes, there are rats on the site. A rodent survey in 1986 indicated that "a significant population of Norway rats appears to be present within localized areas containing recently discarded refuse that were sampled." As you might guess, this open area continues to be used by some people to dump their trash! A rodent control program will be instituted before, during and after construction.

Based on all these tests, studies and official recommendations, we believe you will agree that the Quarry Street site has been analyzed thoroughly over a long period by a wide variety of public and private agencies. All agree that the site is most appropriate for housing.

With all this detailed background, we come to Summit View itself. Our company is proposing to build over a seven- to ten-year period a total of 1,340 condominium and rental apartment units on the 73-acre site — nine-tenths of a mile long by one-fifth of a mile wide. What does this mean? Summit View will have, by far, the lowest density of any existing or proposed development in the City of Quincy. It means beautiful wide open space (74.4% of the land, or 50 acres), extensive landscaping, six gracious buildings (not to exceed 90 feet in height) that befit this magnificent location, and most parking spaces will be covered (1.75 spaces per unit). It means delightful living in an urban environment.

That's only the beginning. Along with one- and two-bedroom condominium and rental apartments, there will be three- and four-bedroom units. If we are to keep families in Quincy, more and more of these larger units are desperately needed in the city.

As a Quincy resident, your most important question about Summit View is this: Is it really affordable housing? Here are the facts. According to state guidelines, families with as much as a $41,000 annual income may qualify. Now, here are just a few examples of affordable housing at Summit View:

- One-bedroom condo: $86,000
- Two-bedroom condo: $110,000
- One-bedroom rental: $475 per month
- Two-bedroom rental: $550 per month

We have proposed that 536 condo and rental units be classified as affordable. We have proposed further that a total of 402 or 75% of these units, the maximum number permitted by law, be set aside for Quincy residents only. In addition, these units will qualify for state-backed mortgages with about a 6% to 7% annual interest rate.

Even more important, all units designated affordable will remain affordable by actual deed. Although the state's guidelines may change over the years, both selling prices and rentals must stay within those guidelines. In other words, there will always be affordable housing at Summit View!

Our current market rate projections indicate that a two-bedroom market rate condo will sell for $165,000 and a two-bedroom unit will rent for $850.

As developers, we are going one step further. We have established what is called a "proof point." When 750 units have been built, we must re-examine all the studies on the land, sewage, traffic, and water that were done in 1986 for their validity before proceeding with the development. If new studies present situations which cannot be rectified, no further development will take place. We want every Quincy resident to know that we are totally committed to making absolutely certain that Summit View is in the best interests of the city.

On Thursday, November 12, a Public Hearing will be held at 7:00 p.m. at Quincy City Hall by the city's Zoning Board of Appeals concering our Comprehensive Permit application for Summit View. We hope you will attend the meeting to listen, ask questions, or express your thoughts.

As with our other projects in Quincy, we want to work with the community. We have listened; we have learned. We want Summit View to be the pride of the City of Quincy. Now, you can help us do it right.

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

In this century, American forces have been engaged in four wars. Millions of Americans have served their country in those wars. Thousands died on foreign soil and over 1,000,000 were injured or wounded. Those men and women have been through the particular and horrible hell of war, and those who returned have had their lives permanently touched by what they did or saw while serving their country.

These veterans whom we now honor were no one special, as a rule. They were simply Americans of all walks of life, of every social and mental strata, that gave of themselves so that we could remain free and have the life style which we enjoy. They did not render this service without a high personal cost.

On this Veteran's Day, let us stop for a moment and reflect on the contributions made to this country by its veterans. Let us stop and say a quiet prayer of thanks for what the veterans of this country's armed forces have done ... We owe them more than we are willing to admit ...

Quincy Tenants Organization Eyes Candidate For City Council

About 25 tenants attended.

Dennis Tardo, leader of the organization, said tenants should attend Zoning Board of Appeals and City Council meetings. "The tenants should make their voices heard everywhere," he said.

The long range goal is to have a tenant representative sitting on the City Council two years from now, according to Tardo.

Main theme of the tenants was rent control. They said they are tired of being chased from their homes because of huge rent increases. They have gone from apartment to apartment looking for affordability and they refuse to be chased from the city, Tardo said.

Jane Reikard, executive secretary of the Rent Grievance Board, was guest speaker at the meeting. Her topic was "Condos and Condo Conversions" which she said have affected tenants everywhere.

Mrs. Reikard said the building in which she lives is being converted to condos. "Everything anyone has ever said about the horrors and harassment during condoing is true," she said. Landlords do not like the Condo-Conversion law and will do everything they can to try to circumvent or ignore it, Mrs. Reikard added.

Council Moves For Ban On Maryland Clams

The City Council moved Monday night to ask Quincy's health commissioner to ban all clams imported from Maryland where it said seafood standards are not as strict.

The council's action was in the form of a resolve submitted by Councillors Michael Cheney and Patricia Toland and unanimously adopted by the council.

The resolve noted that the clam industry has been a long-standing tradition in Quincy and in Massachusetts, and provides an income for thousands of residents.

However, millions of dollars in revenue have been lost due to pollution in Boston Harbor and Quincy Bay, according to the resolve.

"The importing of clams from Maryland has had a further impact on the local clam diggers," stated the resolve.

"Clams imported from Maryland are not held to the same standards as local clams, sometimes exceeding the acceptable fecal coliform count by as much as 24,000 parts per million.

"The department of Public Health has determined that clams with a fecal coliform count exceeding 230 parts per million are not fit for human consumption.

"The general public has no way of determining which clams are fit for human consumption."

The resolve asks that the ban be in effect until clams from Maryland meet the same standards that local clams meet.

"It's a double standard," said Cheney. "Maryland clams are not held to the same standards."

Local clam digger Chester Bragg said that clams dug in Quincy are brought to Newburyport for testing and if the coliform count is 1600 the area is closed.

"It's very unfair putting our people out of business," said Councillor Toland. "We should make sure the same standards are for everyone."

Councillor John Lydon said that Ipswich Shellfish, a large distributor, should be notified of the council's action.

Cheney said if the council's action is not successful, he will draft an ordinance with stiff fines.

Straight Talk To Teens About Street Safety

All your life you've gotten warnings about being careful.

"Don't do this", Don't go there," "Never walk alone at night." It gets boring. But there are "why's" behind the "don'ts," and they have to do with more than keeping from worrying or giving grief. The facts speak for themselves: there are over 2000 violent crimes committed by strangers against teenagers every day.

Even if you think you know how to stay safe, review these reasons behind the warnings:

- "Always let someone know where you're going and what time you'll be back." It may seem like an invasion of privacy, but it's plain common sense. If you're in trouble and no one knows you're missing, no one's going to look for you. If you have an accident or get assaulted, an hour or two can make a life or death difference.
- "Never hitchhike or accept a ride from a stranger." Your friends may do it "all the time" and never have a problem. Many hitch-hikers aren't so lucky. Some get kidnapped, raped, even killed. There is no way to tell if someone is dangerous or harmless from looks alone; anyone, old or young, male or female, good looking or not, can be a threat - and at 60 MPH there's no way out.
- "Don't take deserted shortcuts - especially at night." You may go through the parking lot, the ball field, or the alley every day - but things are different at night. Who you can't see, can hurt you. Criminals don't want to get caught - so they're much less likely to try something on a well lighted street with lots of people around. Taking a few extra minutes to go the long way can save you your money - or life.
- "Never walk alone at night." You know the old saying about safety in numbers. A single person is a much easier target for a thief or criminal. It may seem easier to go on your own than to wait for a ride or find someone to walk with, but it's much more of a hassle to get robbed or hurt.
- "If you do get mugged or robbed, don't take unnecessary risks." A few dollars, a radio, even a car - it's not worth risking your life. It has nothing to do with being chicken. It's a matter of being smart. It's especially true if you're outnumbered, or your attacker is armed. But if you really think your life is in danger, you may have to defend yourself or run.

Look out for yourself, your friends, your community, and help McGruff "TAKE A BITE OUT OF CRIME."

Quincy City Hospital Offers Community Health Screenings

In conjunction with its physician referral service, Quincy City Hospital is now offering community health screenings, each Wednesday afternoon.

The screening consists of a comprehensive blood chemistry analysis, which will evaluate blood glucose, cholesterol, BUN, creatinine, calcium, hemoglobin, and several other parameters. A urine specimen will also be taken for analysis.

A registered nurse will review the results of the screening test with the patient. Copies of the test results will be given to the patient, and copies will be sent to the patient's personal physician.

If the individual does not have a personal physician, the nurse will assist the patient to select one, through the Quincy City Hospital Doctor Directory (Physician Referral Service).

Community Health Screening will be offered weekly on Wednesdays from 1 p.m. to 3:30 p.m., in the out-patient department. Patients will register for the testing through the Out Patient Registration area in the Admitting Department. The fee for the screening is $10, and is due at the time of service. Cash, check or bank cards are accepted for payment.

North Girls Complete Undefeated Season

By TOM SULLIVAN

The North Quincy girls' volleyball team, which had earlier won its first Suburban League title ever and qualified for the state tournament for the second year in a row, completed its season undefeated (18-0) last Friday with a victory over Brookline.

Jim Rendle's Raiderettes, who ended Quincy's five-year reign as league champion, will be the top-seeded team in the Central East sectional championships.

Friday North swept Brookline, 17-15, 15-1, to end unbeaten. The first game was one of the season's most exciting as the Raiderettes trailed, 8-0. They came back to within 12-11, and tied it at 14-14. The score remained there for some time before North finally pulled it out.

Deirdre Murphy and Holly Rendle displayed strong play on the net and Christine Venezia served well and Debbie Panaro passed and dug well.

Earlier in the week North defeated Quincy for the second time, 15-1, 15-10. Murphy and Jill Caldwell dominated net play in the first game with good blocking and hard spiking. In the second game North opened up a 13-4 lead before Quincy battled back.

North Quincy had to go three games in only two matches this season, sweeping the rest in straight games. Brockton and Boston Latin won the only games.

"We are strong at all positions," said Rendle. "With a starting unit of Murphy and Caldwell as middle hitters, Rendle, Panaro and Christine Venezia, outside hitters, and Barbara Carroll as setter, we really have no weaknesses. To be undefeated in the strong Suburban League is a real credit to the girls and how hard they have worked.

North, which could receive byes in the first two rounds of tournament play, may not play until Nov. 10 when it will be host team.

Rendle is concerned about a 10-day layoff waiting for a tournament match but said, "our depth should really help us. Our second unit of Julie Detwiler, Karen Reister, Eileen Campbell, Denise Marnell, Robin Guilfoy, Angela Venezia and Tresa Gray should push the first team and keep them sharp during our wait for the tournament."

Last year the Raiderettes made the tournament for the first time ever and shocked Braintree and top-seeded Durfee to make the sectional finals, where they lost to league champion Quincy.

Quincy Girls' 5-Year Reign Comes To End

The Quincy girls' volleyball team had its five-year reign as Suburban League champion ended by North Quincy, but the First Ladies managed to ease their way into the state tournament again when they defeated Waltham.

Quincy, which had won the league and South Sectional championships the last five years, had to win its finals to qualify for the tournament again with an 11-7 record.

The First Ladies, who won the state championship in 1982 and 1984, lost to Stoneham in the state semifinals in 1983, lost to Chelmsford in the finals in 1985 and bowed again to Chelmsford in last year's semifinals.

Quincy swept Waltham, 15-2, 15-11, last Friday to qualify for the tournament, after losing for the second time to Quincy, 15-1, 15-10.

Shaughnessy Throws 3 TD Passes

Quincy's Bill Shaughnessy, who transferred this fall from UMass to Curry College, threw three touchdown passes last Saturday as Curry rolled over Maine Maritime, 42-14.

Two of his passes were to Weymouth's Mike Waithe for 13 and 60 yards. The other was to Ed Foster for six yards.

Curry is 6-1, a game behind perennial New England Conference champion Plymouth State. Plymouth handed Curry its only loss.

Fennessy, Burke Shine For B.C. High

Jamie Fennessy, starting sweeper, and Tom Burke, forward, both of Quincy, played key roles for the Boston College High soccer team, which recently won the Catholic Conference title outright for the first time and finished undefeated in conference play.

Both boys are seniors and both are graduates of the Quincy Youth Soccer League.

B.C. High is rated in the top five in Division 1 and will be one of the top-seeded teams in the state tournament.

The Casey Club knocked Timmins Contracting from a first place tie in the Jaehnig Basketball League with a 71-70 decision to highlight last week's action.

The Mount took over sole possession of first place with an 86-73 win over the Quincy Nets, led by Mark Millane's 34 points. Bruno Giles added 25. Rick Stoltz had 21 and Kurt MacDonald 18 for the Nets.

Paul Forbes had a season-high 26 points as Joe's Pub pulled out a 76-69 win over the Question Marks. Bill Dacey had 20 and Dean Coletti 18 for Joe's. George Kieswetter scored 25 and Steve Connolly and Steve Phelps 16 each for the Question Marks.

The Jaehnig Club defeated Lower Mills, 57-49, with Mark Jaehnig scoring 17 points, Chuck Jaehnig 10 and Rich Maguire blocking five shots. Shawn Driscoll led Lower Mills with 10.

The standings: Mount, 5-0; Timmins, 4-1; Joe's, 3-2; Casey Club, 2-3; Nets, 2-3; Lower Mills, 2-3; Jaehnig, 2-3; Question Marks, 0-5.

Presidents Face More Trouble At Arlington

Things don't get any better for coach Jack Raymer and his frustrated Quincy football team.

Last Friday night Weymouth North converted three Quincy turnovers into touchdowns and handed the winless Presidents their seventh straight defeat, 33-8. Weymouth (5-1-1) assured itself of the first winning season since Weymouth split into two schools.

And Quincy faces even further trouble Saturday when it travels to Arlington to meet the Spy Ponders in a 2 p.m. game. Arlington is 6-1 with wins over Burlington, North Quincy, Medford, Brookline, Peabody and Everett and only a loss to Malden. Last season the Presidents upset Arlington, 12-0.

"It was the same old story, we dug too big a hole for ourselves and couldn't come back," said Raymer. "Two fumbles and a pass interception set up three of their touchdowns. The kids had a tough break when, just before our first fumble, Chris Noble hit Sean Munroe with a perfect pass but Sean, in the clear, dropped it. He is an exceptional receiver and doesn't drop many, but we could have taken the lead for the first time this year. It might have been a different story if we had scored that touchdown.

"We played much better in the second half, but they had already taken a 33-8 lead. We moved inside their 20 twice but were stopped. Late in the first half we reached their 13 but an interception stopped us."

Quincy Season Scoring

	TD	PAT	Pts.
Munroe	8	4	52
Grant	2	0	12
Noble	1	0	6
Light	0	4	4
Logan	0	2	2

Quincy's offensive line showed vast improvement and gave Noble more protection than he is used to. The junior quarterback was 10 for 21 for 153 yards and his eighth touchdown pass of the year. Munroe had five more receptions, for 48 yards, including one for his eighth touchdown.

The Presidents' ground game showed a little improvement. Dave Nourse ran for 48 yards and Scott O'Brien, who has played strong defense but has been used sparingly on offense, ran for 25 yards.

On the play after the missed pass, Noble, back to punt, fumbled on his own 29 and Ron Dowd recovered for Weymouth. Six plays later Barry Bourassa scored from the four for the first of his three touchdowns. Tim Stevenson kicked the extra point.

Sean McBirney intercepted a Noble pass and returned it all the way to Quincy's 32. On the next play McBirney took a nine-yard pass and pitched out to Bourassa, who swivel-hipped past Quincy defenders for the score.

After driving Quincy from its own 23 to the Weymouth 46, Noble fired on the run to Munroe, who went in for the only Presidents' touchdown. Jim Dennett rushed for the two-point conversion.

Soon after, Bob Chiavaroli raced 23 yards for a touchdown and Bourassa rushed for the two points and Weymouth led, 21-8, after the first quarter.

Bourassa scored his third touchdown early in the second quarter on a 33-yard run.

Another fumble recovery on the Weymouth 45 set up the Maroons' final touchdown. McBirney caught a 40-yard pass for the score.

"We still don't have a solid running game and depend on Noble's passing," said Raymer. "Chris still has a lot to learn, but he is a fine player and gets better every game. Tonight was the first time he had been given good support from the offensive line. Usually he is running for his life."

Confident Raiders Host Cambridge Saturday

By TOM SULLIVAN

North Quincy football coach Ken McPhee, following successive losses to powerhouses Malden (Greater Boston League leader) and Brockton (unbeaten Suburban League leader), said he was confident the Raiders could wind up with a 6-4 record.

If the team plays like it did last Saturday at Waltham, his hopes could be realized, as the Raiders turned in their finest two-way performance to roll over Waltham, 30-14, and improve their record to 3-4.

If it doesn't suffer a let down after the big win, North should even its record Saturday when it hosts Cambridge Rindge and Latin in a 2 p.m. game at Veterans Memorial Stadium.

Cambridge (1-6) has only an opening day win over Quincy, while losing to Medford, Brookline, Everett, Waltham, Newton North and Malden. Last season North Quincy topped Cambridge, 18-13.

"This was just a superb team effort and everyone did his job today," said an elated McPhee. "The offensive line did an excellent job and the defense was outstanding. This was a big win for us and should give us some momentum for the rest of the season."

Dave Lawless had his best game of the season. He scored three touchdowns, played his usual strong defensive game and had another fine day punting. He averaged 44 yards on five punts, his longest being 52 yards. He wasn't thrown for a loss and picked up several first downs on his own raw power.

North Quincy Season Scoring

	TD	PAT	Pts.
Lawless	6	2	38
MacDougall	4	4	28
McCormack	4	0	24
Ainsley	1	4	10
Mulvey	1	0	6

Billy MacDougall also had an excellent day. He intercepted a pass and returned it for a touchdown, made a great play, knocking down a pass in the end zone and had another fine day as a wide receiver.

Quarterback Joe Mulvey was six for nine passing for 119 yards and a touchdown and scored a touchdown himself.

Mike Ainsley and Dave Hutchins also had pass interceptions as the North defense sparkled.

"Our defensive ends, Shawn Darcy and Shawn Clancy, were outstanding," said McPhee, who also hailed the defensive play of Matt McNamara, Dave Joyce, Paul Hogan, Mike Shields, playing his first game at nose guard; Brian Tobin, playing his first game for the varsity at linebacker; Scott Collins, Jackie Mullen, Lawless and MacDougall.

He also had good words for Joyce, Hogan, McNamara, Paul Nimeskern, Ainsley, Dan Steele and MacDougall in the offensive line.

Ryan Craig, who also sparkled on defense, ran for 57 yards and Lawless carried for 41. Paul McCormack ran well in the opening quarter, but was injured early in the second quarter and sat out the rest of the game.

The teams were very even statistically. North ran for 165 yards and Waltham for 164. Waltham quarterback Steve Ianelli was 10 for 26 for 104 yards and a touchdown and each team had 12 first downs.

The Raiders had a 30-6 lead before Waltham scored against the North reserves.

Later in the first quarter Lawless scored from the three and in the second quarter Lawless scored on a 10-yard pass from Mulvey to make it 18-0. Waltham scored late in the half on a 27-yard run by Jerome Fuller.

In the third quarter Lawless completed his hat trick with a three-yard run and early in the fourth quarter MacDougall ran back his pass interception 57 yards for the final score.

Ianelli threw a 42-yard scoring pass to Fuller late in the game to complete the scoring for the day.

South Boston took a three-goal lead in the second period but in the third session Quincy fought back with four goals. Sullivan scored again on a fine centering pass from Eric Wood, then Wood took the puck in alone for an unassisted goal. Goalie Tim Sheehan stopped a flurry of shots in front of the net.

Eric Joyce, John Barron and Chris DiMattia were strong at the points and in the corners, keeping the puck out of reach of the Southie forwards. Bracken, Betsy Stone and John Dobbins provided the team with excellent playmaking tactics, but South Boston scored again to lead, 7-4.

With less than a minute left on the clock, Robbie Winter picked up a Timmy Wood pass and scored. Then, in a dramatic rush down the ice, John Manning passed to Billy Barron, who scored with one second remaining, but Quincy fell one goal short.

The five-day clinic is free and will be scheduled in two locations. The clinic will be conducted from 3:15 to 4:45 at each site.

Under the supervision of varsity coaches John Franceschini, Paul Bregoli, Ted Stevenson and Ray Papile, the basketball clinic is an instructional program geared towards boys and girls with a genuine interest in the sport. Scrimmage games will be conducted with instructions pointing out proper techniques.

Recreation Director Barry J. Welch points out that "many youngsters of elementary age will shortly be playing in various leagues around the city. I am pleased that the high school coaches are available and willing to give pre-season fundamentals in a fun filled, noncompetitive environment, so youngsters may have an opportunity to improve through practice. This program is somewhat different from our past winter offerings and I hope we will have a large turn out."

The clinic is being sponsored at both ends of the city, however, youngsters may go to either program. Youngsters are encouraged to attend as many of the sessions as possible, even if they can not attend for the full week.

Meeting On Affordable Housing Plans At Summit View

The Quincy Housing Partnership Projects Committee was scheduled to sponsor a meeting yesterday (Wednesday) on affordable housing plans for Summit View, a development proposed by the Ricciardi Co. for Quarry St., West Quincy.

The meeting was to take place at 3:30 p.m. in the second floor conference room at City Hall Annex.

Another meeting had been held Monday.

The Ricciardi Co. is proposing the development under Chapter 40 B, also referred to as comprehensive permit, Chapter 774, and Anti-Snob Zoning.

According to information submitted to the projects committee by Stephen Ricciardi, the proposal calls for 1,340 units with 536 committed to affordable units, each of which would be privately financed by the Ricciardi Co.

Some 20 special conditions were requested by the neighborhood committee and they were accepted by the developer, according to Ricciardi. They include rodent control programs, working hour restrictions, mini-bus service, tot lot, additional neighborhood parking, setbacks, security and landscaping requirements.

The Ricciardis applied for a comprehensive permit through the state which requires an open process through the city's Zoning Board of Appeals. The permit also requires affordable housing.

The one-bedroom affordable unit would sell for a maximum of $86,000, the two, three and four bedrooms for a maximum of $110,000, according to Ricciardi.

Prospective buyers would have to be income eligible, he noted.

Most of the units will be sold, but some rentals in the affordable range will be available. A one-bedroom unit would cost about $460 per month, two bedrooms, about $520 per month, Ricciardi said.

A special feature of the proposal is that the developers are seeking local support which would allow a percentage of the affordable units, both sales and rentals to be reserved for Quincy residents; as high as 70 to 75 percent, he said.

Park and Forestry Departments, $75,680 for a dump truck, three portable mowers, one riding mower, building repairs, rain cannon, two, 20-inch cut rotary mowers, three quarter ton pickup truck, one ton dump pickup truck, and four-door sedan.

Fire Department, $280,400 for a pumper, 40 air mask cylinders, furniture and roof repairs.

Health Department, $5,090 to the Health Department for an IBM Word Processor, air conditioner, two steel bookcases, two typewriter tables, and two large filing cabinets.

To the Sewer, Water and Drain, $454,500 for new, 12-inch water mains from Sea St. to Albatross Rd., instrumentation on Ricciuti Drive for a pump station, tidegate and outfall rehabilitation, Cranch Hill Tank overflow pipe.

Highway Department, $250,000 for seawalls.

Police Department, $314,920 for 11 marked cruisers, two unmarked detective cars, police wagon, maintenance van, safety holsters and protective vests, word processor, bird dog device, information system computer, mini van and nightscope.

The committee will also consider an appropriation request of $59,300 to general services from parking meter receipts for an enclosure, pickup truck, cross-walk striper, small sweeper, welder, steam cleaner, booth and chain link fence.

"I wish I'd known that before"

We hear people we serve say this often.

QEA Head Hopeful Contract Will Be Ratified

The president of the Quincy Education Association said he is hopeful that the membership will ratify a tentative contract agreement with the city at a meeting Monday at 3:15 p.m. at the Bryan VFW Post, Quincy Center.

"The majority of teachers I have spoken to have been positive about the agreement," said Walsh, president of the 725-member teacher's union.

He noted that a minority of teachers have had problems with the agreement.

The three-year contract amounts to $7,560,000 and includes 1979 raises which were negotiated but never received after Prop. 2½ went into effect.

The tentative agreement was reached last week, averting a threatened strike.

FLAMES DWARF Quincy firefighters as a wind-swept fire blackened six acres of marsh land behind Broad Meadows Middle School last week. Dep. Chief Thomas Gorman said the fire was difficult to fight not only because of the wind, but also because of low volume of water due to small water mains in the area.

Hearing Thursday

Summit View Goes Before Zoning Board

By NANCY McLAUGHLIN

One of the hottest issues ever before the Zoning Board of Appeals is expected to draw a large crowd at City Hall tonight (Thursday) at 7 p.m. as the Ricciardi Co. of Quincy requests a comprehensive permit for Summit View.

The project, proposed for West Quincy, would include 1,340 units, 536 of which would be low and moderate housing.

The comprehensive permit would mean that the developer would not be subject to local zoning such as height limitations. Six, 10-story buildings are planned.

Issues have been raised concerning such things as density, traffic and sewage.

Mayor Francis McCauley said he will ask the City Council next Monday night to appropriate $10,000 to hire a consultant to assist the Zoning Appeals Board in the comprehensive permit process.

"Thursday night's meeting will be a preliminary meeting," explained McCauley. "No decision will be made."

According to McCauley, only one other comprehensive permit has been requested in the city.

That was in 1975 when a permit for 100 units of elderly housing was proposed on Copeland St., West Quincy, said Planning Director Richard Meade.

It was turned down because the city exceeded the required 10 percent of low-moderate income housing for such a permit, explained Meade.

Meade said the Zoning Board has received about 100 pages of information from the developer including the application and such things as traffic studies and environmental tests.

In addition, the Zoning Board of Appeals will solicit input from the public as well as the Health Commissioner, Planning Board, Conservation Commission and City Council.

"I'd be surprised if it was settled before the end of the year because of the amount of information involved," said Meade.

The five-member zoning board meets twice a month, he noted.

According to Meade, the board must make a decision within 40 days of the close of public hearings.

If the permit request is denied, the developer may appeal the decision to the state housing appeals committee, Meade said.

He noted that of 81 recent appeals, the committee has overturned 74.

Iacobucci Also Seeks Recount

Mayoral Recount Will Probably Start Nov. 18

Recounts of the Nov. 3 election in two races will likely begin Wednesday, Nov. 18, at City Hall after requests from mayoral challenger, Joseph LaRaia and councillor-at-large candidate Ronald Iacobucci.

The recounts will be done separately, according to City Clerk John Gillis. The mayor's race will be counted first, followed by the councillor at large race.

Both took out papers last week. They must be returned by Nov. 13, with signatures of 10 registered voters from each of the city's six wards.

LaRaia, who lost to Mayor Francis McCauley by 473 votes, said he took out the papers after hundreds of calls from residents since the election.

He said supporters wanted to double check to be sure the vote totals were accurate.

In 1975, LaRaia won the mayor's seat after requesting a recount when he lost by 134 votes to incumbent Mayor Walter Hannon. He won by 484 votes on the recount.

Iacobucci, who lost the third spot for councillor at large to Timothy Cahill by 217 votes, said he decied to ask for the recount by hand because of the high number of blank ballots cast and some alleged irregularities election night.

He suffered his third straight close election loss.

In 1985, Iacobucci asked for a recount when he lost by 300 votes.

However, he asked that the recount stop after one ward showed a negligible change. Iacobucci said he would do the same thing this time.

Some 4.5 percent of those who cast ballots did not vote for either mayoral candidate.

In the councillor at large race, 21.2 percent were left blank. However, blanks are not unusual in a three-way race, because of "bulleting" whereby voters cast only one of three possible votes to avoid helping the other candidates.

City Clerk John Gillis said that the recounts will be conducted separately.

He said he expected both men to request the recount to begin in Ward 2. Both candidates won that ward, and there was an especially high number of blanks.

During the recounts, election workers will inspect each ballot to determine whether the voter tried to punch the ballot but was not successful in a way which would enable the computer to register the vote.

Gillis said the recounts will take about one full day for each ward.

QEA Ratifies 3-Year Contract

The membership of the Quincy Education Association voted overwhelmingly Monday to ratify a three-year contract agreement with the city reached two weeks ago.

The contract amounts to $7,560,000 and includes 1979 bonuses which were negotiated but never received after Prop. 2½ went into effect.

Of the 456 teachers union members attending the meeting, a total of 371 voted in favor, 84 voted no, and one abstained.

The opposition vote came from teachers concerned about elementary teacher preparation time, coaches' salaries and the exclusion of retired teachers to receive the 1979 raises, according to QEA president Thomas Walsh.

"I was pleased to hear that the QEA ratified the contract," said Mayor Francis McCauley, who noted that the next step is for the school committee to ratify the contract.

He congratulated the negotiating teams for both sides.

McCauley said he expected both sides to sign the contract in the next few weeks.

Finance Committee Meeting Nov. 16

The Finance Committee of the Quincy City Council will meet Monday, Nov. 16, at 6:15 p.m. in the Council Chambers at City Hall.

The agenda will include capital outlay items referred to committee last week, and a loan order for $1,160,000 for improvements to the sanitary landfill.

$4,345,000 Collected In Taxes

A total of $4,345,000 has been collected so far in estimated tax bills which are due Nov. 23, according to Mayor Francis McCauley.

About 22,500 of the fall bills were sent out about three weeks ago.

McCauley Seeks $1.6 Million For Landfill

Mayor Francis McCauley said he will ask the City Council to appropriate $1.6 million from the surplus account to comply with Department of Environmental Quality Engineering requirements at the landfill.

McCauley had earlier asked for authorization to borrow the money but no action was taken by the council and the item was placed in committee.

The mayor said he hoped the city would be allowed to use the landfill again once the DEQE requirements are met.

Since then, the city's residential rubbish has been trucked out of town.

McCauley said he was hopeful the council would pass the appropriation order Monday night.

A total of $4,076,740 has already been proposed by the mayor for 10 city departments from the city's $10.1 million surplus. The remainder of the surplus will be kept in reserve, McCauley said.

Council On Aging Receives $44,748

The Executive Office of Elder Affairs has awarded the Quincy Council on Aging a formula grant of $44,748, state Senator Paul D. Harold announced recently.

Harold said the grant is part of $2.3 million in formula grants awarded statewide to communities which applied for the funds. Grants are based on the senior citizen population in each community, at the rate of $2.30 per senior.

Quincy's grant is to be used to continue the Social Services Technician (transportation) position, hire Senior Corps Workers, provide for general operation, program and equipment costs for the senior center, and pay for other administrative costs.

McCauley Opposes T-Plan To Contract Cab Services

Mayor Francis McCauley has written to MBTA general manager James F. O'Leary to express his "strong opposition" to plans for a bidding process for the right to pick up passengers at Quincy's four Red Line stations.

No implementation date has been set. However, the procedure is already in operation in such communities as Braintree and Newton.

"At no time was I informed of the MBTA's intentions to contract out cab service at the four MBTA stations," wrote McCauley, who is chairman of the MBTA Advisory Board Executive Committee.

"There are four cab companies in Quincy, the largest being the Yellow Cab with 63 licenses.

"There are three smaller companies, namely, Shore Taxi with 17 licenses, Marina Bay Taxi with six licenses and Quincy Cab Co. with two licenses.

"Because of its size, it is a foregone conclusion that Yellow Cab would outbid to win this business. The result would be to diminish competition among the taxi services in Quincy.

"I am strongly opposed to this procedure, and urge your office to reconsider this ill-advised action," McCauley stated.

A KISS for the winner is bestowed on Mayor Francis McCauley by his wife, Sandra, at his election headquarters at the Quincy Neighborhood Club.

Safety Improvements For West Acres

Improving safety conditions at the West Acres housing facility was discussed at a meeting attended by Rep. Michael Morrissey's office, the Quincy Housing Authority, Quincy and Massachusetts Departments of Public Works.

The meeting was held at West Acres, located next to the Furnace Brook exit of the Southeast Expressway.

Discussion included an occasion when a vehicle went over the guard rail and was learning against a chain link fence about 15 feet from a West Acres housing unit.

In response to the housing authority's concerns, the state DPW agreed to:

- Install more signs prior to the exit to warn motorists of ramp speed.
- Install a heavier guard rail at the side of the exit area for added safety. The rail will be higher than the current one.
- Install a second guard rail at the bottom of the embankment to protect QHA property and fence in the event anything rolls down the hill.
- Remedy some of the erosion that has occurred along the side of the road.

"The state DPW has indicated that it will take immediate steps to remedy this situation," said Morrissey.

"We believe there is only a slight likelihood of a similar occurrence, but the tenants in West Acres deserve to have every precaution taken on their behalf," said Morrissey.

HN Council To Hear Health Commissioner

Overseas Christmas Gifts Should Be Mailed Soon

Christmas may seem like a long way off, but now's the time to plan for holiday mailings overseas, especially for relatives in the armed services stationed in foreign countries.

November is the month when parcels shipped via Parcel Airlift Mail (PAL) should be sent. PAL packages are airlifted domestically to a gateway facility, then airlifted on a space available basis from the gateway to the APO (Army or Air Force Post Office).

Packages up to 30 pounds and 60 inches in combined length and girth may be sent by PAL mailers pay the regular third-or fourth-class parcel post rate. based on weight, to the U.S. exit port or from the port of entry plus a fee for air service. The air service fee is 30 cents for parcels weighing 2 pounds or less; 60 cents for up to 3 pounds; 90 cents for up to 4 pounds; and $1.20 for up to 30 pounds.

Another option for military parcels mailed in November is Space Available Mail (SAM). Items shipped by SAM are transported by land in the continental U.S. and then flown overseas on a space available basis. Packages weighing 15 pounds or less and not exceeding 60 inches in combined length and girth may be sent by SAM for regular parcel post rates to the U.S. exit port.

For later mailing of holiday messages and parcels to military bases overseas, the Postal Service now offers Express Mail Military Service to more than 200 APO/FPO military addresses. The same rates as domestic Express Mail service apply for this two-day service - $10.75 for up to 2 pounds and $12.85 for more than 2 pounds and up to 5 pounds. The weight limit is 70 pounds. This new service is available at post offices in the Greater Boston area.

Area post offices have a complete list of suggested mailing dates, rate information and mailing options that customers can consult to ensure their parcels and cards arrive in time for Christmas.

Gillis: Results Won't Change

City Clerk John Gillis is getting ready for two city election recounts but doesn't expect them to change the final outcomes.

GILLIS

He thinks incumbent Francis McCauley will still be the mayoral winner and Tim Cahill will retain the third City Council at-large seat.

The by-hand recounts are sought by mayoral challenger Joseph LaRaia who lost to McCauley by a 473-vote whisker and Ron Iacobucci who was edged out by Cahill by a scant 217 votes.

LaRAIA

Gillis acknowledges that the votes are close enough for LaRaia and Iacobucci to seek recounts. But when they are over he doesn't see anything changing much.

IACOBUCCI

"I don't think there will be more than a five vote change per ward," he says.

With six wards, that would be 30 votes.

"And I don't mean," Gillis says, "one candidate picking up the five votes. They will shift back and forth."

The two recounts will be done separately and on different days.

Gillis estimates the mayoral recount will take three or four days and would probably start Nov. 18.

The candidate seeking the recount must submit the signatures of 10 registered voters in each ward on his recount request.

Deadline for this is Friday (the 13th) at 5 p.m.

Gillis estimates the mayoral recount will cost about $4,000.

But there is an added cost: the ballot boxes have been under around-the-clock police guard since election night (Nov. 3) at a cost of about $16 per hour. They will remain under guard through the two recounts.

If the mayoral recount starts Nov. 18 and continues three or four days that could total up to 432 hours at $16 per and $6,912 (or more) on top of the $4,000. Or an approximate $11,000 (possibly more) cost for the mayoral recount.

Gillis estimates the City Council at-large recount itself will cost $8,000 or twice as much as the mayoral recount because there are six candidates whose votes will have to be counted. He figures this will take a good week to complete.

With the two recounts being done separately, it means the ballots would have to remain under police guard until the City Council at-large recount is over.

If that recount takes a week to complete it would keep the ballots under police guard for another 120 hours at an added cost of $1,920.

So, the two recounts together could cost somewhere in the neighborhood of $21,000.

Both LaRaia and Iacobucci point to the number of blanks cast as a main reason for seeking their recounts.

There were 1,066 (4.5 percent) blanks for mayor and 14,968 (21 percent) blanks for City Council at-large.

They believe that a good number of punch-card ballots were not punched strongly enough by voters to register on the computer counter.

By examining these ballots in a hand count, they feel it will be shown that many of the blanks were not blanks after all but show an actual vote.

But some observers think otherwise.

They believe a lot of the blanks for mayor was due to the fact that voters didn't vote for either McCauley or LaRaia.

Apparently, they theorize, some of those 1,066 blanks were cast by voters dissatisfied with McCauley for one reason or another but not dissatisfied enough to vote for LaRaia.

McINTYRE

And, some observers believe, some of those blanks came from the still staunch followers of the late Mayor James McIntyre who wouldn't vote for either McCauley or LaRaia. They are saving their votes for their own candidate – maybe two years from now.

As for the City Council at-large blanks, observers think there was a lot of "bulleting' going on with some voting for just one candidate instead of taking three choices. By leaving two of the choices blank, it makes the vote for one of the three candidates the equivalent of three votes.

The results of the two recounts should make interesting reading.

IN SUCH A close election, sometimes the little things that were done or not done can make a big difference. Or, at least, appear to.

DeCRISTOFARO

Precinct 2 of Ward 2 is the largest voting precinct in the city and the voting place is at the seniors facility at 1000 Southern Artery.

When Mayor McCauley had a campaign function there he made it a point to invite Ward 2 Councillor Ted DeCristofaro who accepted.

When Joseph LaRaia had a function there, he didn't make it a point to invite DeCristofaro so the latter didn't show up.

DeCristofaro has a lot of clout in Ward 2 and is particularly popular and active at 1000 Southern Artery.

This turned out to be the precinct that guaranteed McCauley's close win.

Considered a big precinct for LaRaia the vote there turned out to be a virtual standoff with LaRaia getting 621 votes to McCaules 600 – just 21 votes difference. The expected big LaRaia vote there could have made the difference for him.

COMER

REASON FOR THAT big smile former Ward 1 Councillor Leo Kelly has been sporting since election day: City Council President Steve McGrath finished on top in the City Council at-large race, making his first city-wide run.

KELLY

Kelly was his campaign manager. And, McGrath carried every precinct in Ward 1 – Kelly's back yard -- where Kelly personally campaigned with him.

Kelly, incidentally, is still eyeing a run for the state representative seat Thomas Brownell will soon vacate to accept appointment as a judge at Plymouth District Court.

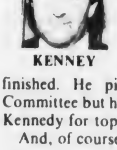
SPEAKING OF McGRATH, he and Santa Farerri, his media adviser, and Ward 5 winner Charles Phelan, turned up at the Wollaston MBTA station the day after the election where they had gone during the campaign.



PHELAN

They now wanted to say thanks. The voters thought it was a nice gesture and it gave them a chance to offer congratulations.

KENNEY

He picked every winner and just missed the exact order by one.

He had all six City Councillor at-large candidates in the way they finished. He picked all three winners for School Committee but had Steve Durkin ahead of Christopher Kennedy for top spot.

Knowing His Honor's reputation as the Jack Benny of Quincy, everyone figures it will be a big night at McDonald's.

Wollaston Factory Being Converted To 144 Condo Units

Renovation began recently on the 145,000 square foot Corrugated Box Co. building, formerly part of the historic Tubular Rivet & Stud Factory on Linden St. into 144 one and two bedroom condominiums.

The $20 million project, which is being developed by A & S Development of Quincy, will be called Mellen Bray House, named after the inventor of the rivet and hook setting machines.

Completion of the E-shaped complex is scheduled for spring, 1989.

Prices start at $83,000 and range to $168,000. Condominiums are available with 1-bedroom, 1-bedroom with study, 2-bedroom and 2-bedroom with study. Most 2-bedrooms will feature two full baths.

Mellen Bray units will feature large living area space, high ceilings, restored oversized windows, and refurbished red brick exterior up to 18 inches thick.

A fourth floor will be added to the building to match portions of the building originally constructed with four floors in 1893. The added floor will be adorned with skylights and multi-colored slate siding for a Back Bay-Beacon Hill look.

The developer will pay the buyer's property taxes through February of 1990. Moreover, A&S will cover the bank appraisal and bank attorney's fees through the developer's financing package.

Its sister complex, Whittemore Mills, was completed in August of 1987. Whittemore Mills is a 100-unit condominium complex renovated last year from a separate L-shaped building and carriage house that was also part of the former Wollaston factory. Buyers, half of them from Quincy, began moving into their new condos last August.

Most of them were purchased in a frantic rush in November and sold out by December of 1986, said Diane Hanley, vice president of marketing. "It appears that history will repeat itself," she said.

The marketing program has not begun and 37 units were reserved by word of mouth or from a waiting list.

The Mellen Bray building was built eight years after the Whittemore portion to handle the factory's booming business near the turn of the century.

Mellen Bray dissolved his Boston manufacturing firm into the Tubular Rivet Company and the Lacing Stud Company, which later merged into the Tubular Rivet and Stud Company and moved to Quincy in 1893, according to the Quincy Historical Society.

The stud was a brass hook used primarily in the manufacturing of Army shoes and leggings.

During the Spanish American war, the demand for these products boomed and Tubular Rivet and Stud Company expanded production space to include the two Linden Street buildings and one on Weston Avenue, totalling 305,000 square feet.

Coolidge Tops Dever Here In Recount

Nov. 13-19, 1950
37 Years Ago

Upon re-checking the votes of last week's election, City Clerk Hattiemay Thomas announced that Arthur Coolidge defeated Paul Dever for Governor by 82 votes in Quincy.

A re-check of the returns showed a 500-vote mistake. Mrs. Thomas said the mistake probably resulted when blank votes were being transferred. Ballots were impounded because Fred Ayer, candidate for Attorney General was considering a recount.

SQUANTUM WOMEN URGED TO FIGHT POLUTION OF BAY

Mrs. William Voight, president of the Squantum Women's Club, urged members to attend the public hearing on pollution of Quincy Bay in the State House.

"Pollution is such a vital problem to the people of Squantum that residents should make a special effort to attend the hearings," she said.

"Years ago the sewerage at Moon Island was dumped into the water only on the turn of the outgoing tide. Today with added accumulation, dumping occurs about every two hours with the result that the shore and waters of the bay are a disgrace."

SNUG HARBOR BUILDING SOUGHT FOR COMMUNITY CENTER

Members of the Snug Harbor Improvement Association petitioned Frederick Roche, chairman of the state housing board, for use of the Sailors' Snug Harbor building for a community center. The association proposed to maintain the building at its own expense, with no cost to the housing authority.

The Quincy Housing Authority meanwhile was considering the possible use of the building as an administration and maintenance headquarters.

BIDS TO BE MADE FOR FENNO ST. FILLING

Public Works Commissioner Charles Herbert announced the city will advertise for bids to pump sand and gravel from Quincy Bay to fill the site for the new Fenno St. school. Herbert said if the bids were too high, truck-hauled fill would be used instead. It was estimated that the level of the Fenno St. site had to be raised eight feet.

Unbaked Butterscotch Cookies
When You Haven't Got Time

One day as I was going through some of my recipes, I came across some of the unbaked variety. They aren't bad, especially when you haven't got the time for some serious baking.

UNBAKED
BUTTERSCOTCH COOKIES

2 cups sugar
3/4 cup margerine
2/3 cup evaporated milk
1 box (small)
butterscotch instant pudding mix
3½ cups quick oatmeal

Mix sugar, margerine and evaporated milk in a saucepan and bring to a boil on low heat, stirring constantly. Remove from heat and add pudding mix and oatmeal. Mix until well blended. Cool for a couple of minutes and drop by teaspoonsfuls onto waxed paper. Let set until cool. Makes about four or five dozen depending on the size. (You may also use chocolate lemon or coconut instant puddings if desired. Here is another recipe for lovers of butterscotch. (like me!)

INSTANT COOKIES

1 package butterscotch chips
½ cup peanut butter
six rolled graham crackers
3½ cups cornflakes, crushed
½ cup chopped nuts

Melt the butterscotch chips and peanut butter. Add the graham crackers, cornflakes and nuts. Mix and drop on wax paper to harden. I like a large cookie so I only got about a dozen and a half of these.

Tony Siciliano Honored As State Municipal Employee Of Year

Anthony (Tony) Siciliano, general foreman in the General Services Division of the Quincy Police Department for the past 15 years, was honored Saturday night as the Massachusetts Municipal Association's 1987 Outstanding Municipal Employee of the Year.

About 1500 people attended the MMA's annual meeting awards banquet at the Boston Marriott Hotel/Copley Place.

Siciliano had been nominated by Mayor Francis McCauley for his "overwhelming dedication and commitment to serving the community, not only in his full-time position with the city, but also int he innumerable hours of volunteer time which he offers on a daily basis."

Brockton City Councillor George Cataldo, incoming MMA president, listed Siciliano's titles such as Deputy Director of Civil Defense and former Quincy Auxiliary Police Chief, and cited his achievements.

"These are titles of honor carried by one man, he earned them by long, hard hours of work, many without pay," said Cataldo.

"His dedication has rebounded greatly to his city's benefit at times of major fires and hurricans, and even serving on his city's centennial committee."

Siciliano thanked the MMA for the award, as well as "Frank McCauley, mayor of the city for nominating me, members of the City Council, my volunteers who work diligently, Capt. (Joseph) Pearson and all the volunteers of the Civil Defense Agency."

He also thanked my family, my friends, the Massachusetts Auxiliary Police Association, a dedicated force which is called upon to do some tremendous work in the communities they serve.

"But I'm here because of the volunteers and all the good they do for the people of Massachusetts. I want to thank them very much," he said.

The Outstanding Municipal employees who have made exceptional contributions to their cities and town.

The nominees are judged on their length of service to the municipality, significant achievements made within the scope of their regular jobs, and special contributions made outside of their routine responsibilities which demonstrate outstanding initiative, perserverence or dedication.

Christmas Festival Set For Downtown

By KRISTINE STRENGE

Quincy residents can enjoy three days of pre-Christmas activities and shopping during this year's Thanksgiving holiday weekend after action by the License Board Tuesday at City Hall.

The board granted a request from the Quincy Center Business and Professional Association to hold its first annual Christmas Festival promotion Saturday, Nov. 28, from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Hancock St. will be closed Saturday from Granite St. to Revere Rd. to permit continuous entertainment, said Kenneth P. Fallon, Jr., QCBPA executive director. "Depending on the weather, some of our merchants may do some sidewalk selling," he said.

The festival will consist of strolling Christmas carolers; piped in Christmas music; a moon walk; petting zoo; pony rides; ice sculpture demonstration; Quincy High School seven-member combination band; antique auto show.

Santa will arrive at approximately 12:30 p.m. at Cummings Clothing Store. There will also be a tent on the corner of Hancock St. and Cottage Ave. where food will be sold.

The QCBPA hopes to create a festive occasion with all the activities," said Fallon.

The Christmas festivities will run three days starting with the lighting of the Christmas lights Friday Nov. 27, at 7:30 p.m., the Christmas Festival Saturday Nov. 28 and the Christmas Parade Sunday, Nov. 29 starting at the intersection of Hancock St. and School St. at 12:30 p.m.

Fallon said, "We (Q.C.B.-P.A.) are hopeful to get a big turn out. Quincy Center is not a big shopping center but it does have small shops with big values."

Fundraiser For Cheney Saturday

The Committee to Re-elect Ward 1 Councillor Michael Cheney will hold a reception fundraiser for him Saturday night from 7:30 to 11:30 p.m. at the Quincy Yacht Club, 1310 Sea St., Houghs Neck.

There will be refreshments and music.

South Shore Red Cross Annual Volunteer Recognition Nov. 17

The South Shore Region of the American Red Cross of Massachusetts Bay will hold its annual volunteer recognition Tuesday Nov. 17 at 7 p.m., at the Neighborhood Club, 27 Glendale Rd., Quincy.

Volunteers from 14 South Shore communities, including Quincy, will be thanked and recognized for their volunteer service in over 20 Red Cross programs including disaster, health & safety, medical transportation, blood, and service to the armed forces, their families and veterans.

Robert J. Quinn, South Shore regional chairman, and senior vice president of the South Shore Bank said,

"It's too infrequently that we thank fellow volunteers formally for their heroics, whether for three o'clock in the morning disaster work assisting families and victims of housing fires or airplane crashes, their many volunteer hours teaching CPR or First Aid, or their contributions to a smooth run blood drive."

Quinn continued, "In this age of mergers, high technology, and complex organizations, I think we lose sight of the fact that even the most simple kindness and services are needed and valued, and we must not discount them."

Several special presentations will be made during the evening including the highest award given by the Red Cross, the Clara Barton Award. Also to be awarded will be the Irene V. Favorite Award for outstanding service. This award has not been given since 1967.

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

Thinking and thanking are two words that belong together ... Think abut this! If you think enough about what you have, instead of complaining about what you don't have; If you think enough about the good that has happened to you, instead of feeling sorry for yourself about all the 'bad luck' you have had, you will thank God for His goodness and His mercy.

Couldn't it be said that it's not so much what happens to us, but how we choose to react and respond? The trouble is that most of us don't do enough positive thinking ... We moan and groan about the bad things, and take the good things for granted ... We complain that the cup is half empty, instead of thanking God that it is half full.

Years ago there was a popular ballad entitled: "Aren't You Glad You're You?" It went something like this: "Every time you're near a rose, aren't you glad you've got a nose ... When the meadow lark appears, aren't you glad you've got two ears ... And when the dawn is fresh with dew, aren't you glad you're you?"

Dedication Of Two Infants At Squantum Church

The highlight of the later service at the First Church of Squantum Sunday was the dedication of two infants, Kenneth Weston Young and Brianne Joan Young, children of James and Denise Young.

Assisting the pastor with the dedication were Deacons Dana Olson, Gretchen Bumpus, Mary Ruth Scott, Kate MacRitchie, and Stewart Scott. Special friends of the family who also participated in the service were Robert and Jennifer Rutherford, Deborah Oldham, Edward Young, David and Adrian Gustafson, and Murray Kerr III.

The service began with Psalm 100 sung by the Chancel Choir to the tune used by the Pilgrims when they first came to Plymouth. For the anthem, the choir sang "Rejoice in the Lord Alway" by Henry Purcell. Mary Ruth Scott directed.

The Rev. Dr. Gene Langevin, pastor, preached on the topic, "Separated Unto God," at both morning services. Each worshipper received a picture of Brewster Manor in Scrooby, England, where the Pilgrims first gathered for their Separatist meetings in 1605.

During the early service, Deborah Stohlberg and Marci Hurd were the ushers. During the second, the ushers were Harry Holmes and Tore Wallin. Stewart and Mary Scott were the greeters. The Fellowship Hour after the second service was hosted by Virginia and Barbara Sorensen.

These services were the second in a series of four this month based on the Christian beliefs and experiences of the Pilgrims, the spiritual forebears of the Congregationalists (United Church of Christ) and the Baptists of today, whose churches derived directly from the events of that time.

At a meeting of the Church Council, Rene Johnson and Adelaide Nelson were in charge of the refreshments. Sally Johnson presided. Members of the Council were pleased with the success of the annual church fair held the day before. Katherine Hansen had been the chairperson of the fair this year.

Cardinal Law In Tribute To Good Counsel Church Anniversary On 50th

By NANCY McLAUGHLIN

Cardinal Bernard Law called the recent 50th anniversary celebration of Our Lady of Good Counsel Church, Merrymount, "a testimony to the vitality of the church in this area."

Cardinal Law, who celebrated a Mass of Thanksgiving at the church Sunday, explained, "There wasn't a decision to put a parish in this area, and the people came.

"But rather, it was a response of faithful Catholic laymen who needed a place of their own, closer to where they live, to worship.

"It's a sign of growth of the church, a sign of the vitality of faith of those who pioneered this parish.

"I come to give thanks to God for those who, 50 years ago, were part of making this happen."

He also discussed such topics as Nicaragua, shelters for the homeless and the upcoming holidays.

Cardinal Law emphasized the role of the media in covering such events as the war in Nicaragua.

"I just hope that we don't back off of being concerned about the situation too quickly assuming that it is all set when it isn't," he said.

He said that "the press has a very important role for keeping the spotlight on what occurs so that it's not going to be possible for the various parties to fall back to earlier positions once world attention has been diverted to someplace else."

Cardinal Law said he was "delighted" that a Nicaraguan cardinal was asked to step into peace negotiations.

"A lot of us are joined in prayer that this very tentative step toward a settlement might result in, finally, a peaceful region."

Asked whether communion was a threat to the church in that region, Cardinal Law replied, "well, the church was around for 1900 years before Marxism came into being, and the church will still be vital when Marxism is an interesting footnote in history.

"But in the short term, certainly the system that is militantly atheistic is obviously a threat to all of us that God exists.

"Right now, I have hope that there is some basis, however fragile it is, that a degree of freedom, stability and demilitarization might occur in Nicaragua, the process of democratization might continue in El Salvador and Guatemala."

In a subject closer to comer, the cardinal said the problem of providing for the homeless is not as simple as just providing shelters.

"I think as we approach a solution, what we have to do is divide the question. We have to look at who it is who is homeless, and not too quickly assume that the problem can be solved with shelters, which it cannot.

"Obviously as a temporary measure, shelters are essential to keep people out of the cold, to give them necessary nourishment.

"But a shelter is not what a human being needs to maintain dignity.

"We need to look at who the homeless are, and what are the particular needs different groups of homeless.

"Some may be homeless because of temporary economic hardship; some may be homeless because of emotional and pyschological trauma.

"So it may not be the shelter that is the big thing, but for persons like that, it's meeting their own psychological and emotional needs.

"I would hope that we would divide the question of homelessness a little bit more carefully and then try to come up with solutions for specific populations of homeless," he said.

Cardinal Law also reflected on the upcoming holidays.

"I hope as we come into Thanksgiving, and we approach Christmas, that we are conscious of the spiritual significance of these days that we observe, and not get totally caught up in the other aspects of the event which are nonethe of the event which are nonetheless very pleasant."

Quincy's First American Legion National Commander:

Comer Would Rather Talk About Peace

By RICK RYAN

John P. ("Jake") Comer can talk much about war. After all, he's lived through it.

However, he'd much rather talk about peace. Because he's lived through that too.

In fact, as the new National Commander of the world's largest veterans organization, he'll travel to Central America to examine the implementation of the Arias Peace Plan, and determine if, in his view, it's working in the war-torn region.

Comer, who is the first veteran from Quincy and the second from Massachusetts to be elected National Commander of the American Legion, will provide Congress and President Reagan with hard facts about the peace plan, as well as evidence of a growing presence of Soviet and Cuban advisors in Nicaragua.

Comer has already conferred once with President Ronald Reagan and has plans to meet with him again this week.

A Korean Conflict veteran, Comer previously visited Nicaragua, El Salvador and Guatemala as part of a fact-finding team last summer. His findings, which were discussed with Reagan and top foreign policy advisors, revealed a growing communist threat to the region and in turn, the western hemisphere.

"One of the biggest misconceptions that the media portray is that Nicaragua is a democracy," said Comer during a Quincy Sun interview. "That is completely false. You have to be there to see just what's going on," he said.

Comer returned to Quincy last month for a three-day visit as part of a homecoming. He is on a one-year leave of absence as executive director of Quincy's Housing Authority, having been unanimously elected to the Legion's top post at the national convention in San Antonio, Texas, last August.

Most argue the appointment was well-earned. He joined the Legion 25 years ago at Thomas J. Roberts Post 78 in West Roxbury, where he was awarded a life-time membership for his prior community service.

Since then, he's served on the Legion's National Economics Commission, the National Legislative Council and the Americanism Commission.

His dedication to the Legion is synonymous with his dedication to the community.

"A strong commitment to the local community is what makes the Legion a dynamic and vibrant force," said Comer in a recent article published in "American Legion Magazine," the organization's monthly national publication. "It prevails in our posts, departments and at the national level as well. Some of our best work is with those who are less fortunate," he said.

In addition to his Legion duties, Comer also serves on the Massachusetts Hospital School for Handicapped Children and has raised some $3 million for underprivileged children statewide through the Horizons for Youth program.

Known best as "Jake," Comer has received numerous awards and recognition from the South Shore Mental Health Center, Inc., which is the nation's largest and oldest community mental health facility.

His college education began at the former Bentley School of Accounting, now Bentley College, in Waltham, and later the Lee Institute of Real Estate Brokerage. For the past five years, he served as executive director of the nation's ninth largest housing authority - Quincy's. In the post, he's aggressively pursued affordable housing for the elderly and lower-income families in a high-priced real estate market.

Comer also served for 12 years on the Quincy Board of Assessors, and two years as an administrative assistant for the budget arm of the state House Ways and Means Committee.

A devoted grandfather, Comer credits his family for its support and help in his many accomplishments. His wife, Eileen, and two daughters, Margaret Hughes and Nancy Zagrodney, serve in the Legion Auxiliary. His son, John, and grandson, Sean Hughes, are members of the Sons of the American Legion.

Comer says that although the Legion is a strong voice on national issues, it would be nothing without the community.

"We're the little guy. The guy trying to make a buck and send his children to school," said Comer during a visit to Post 40 in Plymouth last month. The visit was part of the "Homecoming" for the newly-elected national commander. "Helping the community is a priority with us," he said.

However, at the helm of what many considered is the world's largest, most influential veterans group, Comer will have his hands full of servicing the community on the local, national, and international levels.

The Legion aggressively pursues and advocates veteran's interests, defense policies, foreign policies and holds sacred, world peace.

While the clock winds down on a lame duck presidency, the Legion will hold fast for a consistent policy on these issues, regardless of who or which party inherits the White House in January of 1989.

In an article in "American Legion Magazine," Comer outlined several top issues that the Legion will address in the coming months:

- Membership: Comer hopes to break the three million mark by this time next year. Currently, the Legion boasts a 2.8 million membership - the largest since the mid-1950s. Further recruitment, says Comer, must come through the community level at the 16,000 Legion posts worldwide
- National defense: James Madison wrote: "The threat to freedom and liberty at home will undoubtedly come from abroad." The Legion will advocate a strong

Thomas Roberts Is Comer's Home Post

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

John P. ("Jake") Comer, the American Legion National Commander, began his Legion career when he joined the Thomas J. Roberts Post American Legion No. 78 in West Roxbury 25 years ago.

Comer, the second national American Legion commander in the history of Massachusetts, joined the Roberts Post in 1962 and was nurtured by their membership to the ways and purposes of the American Legion.

His Post honored him for the innumerable contributions he had made to the American Legion by voting him a life member and awarding him a Gold Life Membership Card.

JOHN GRIFFIN, of Waltham, is the present commander of the Thomas J. Roberts Post American Legion No. 78 in West Roxbury, whose membership includes John P. "Jake" Comer, the Legion's National Commander.

Comer served as commander of the Post from 1966-67 before moving on to state and national positions. Among those positions are Commander of Suffolk County Council District 7, (1972-73), Department Commander (1975-76) and member of the National Executive Committee (1980-present).

Roberts American Legion Post, the membership who had supported and encouraged his rise in the Legion, were honored and proud when Comer was sworn in this past August as commander of all legionnaires.

Jake Comer Prefers To Talk About Peace

national defense in the wake of increasing terrorist attacks in the Middle East, Soviet occupation of Afghanistan and Cuban involvement in Angola. Comer argues that a strong national defense entails a careful eye on changing technology, including adopting the Strategic Defense Initiative (SDI), or Star Wars. While the Legion advocates that Star Wars is a necessary nuclear deterrent, scientists argue it is not feasible and costly.

• POWs/MIAs: Comer is optimistic that the Vietnamese government will speed up the process of locating and returning the thousands of prisoners and lost soldiers believed to be living in Southeast Asia. A report, produced from a recent fact-finding mission by fellow Legionnaires, has documented proof that Americans are still held there against their will. The report also will help locate some 8,000 missing Korean veterans.

• Women veterans: It's seldom mentioned that nearly 11,000 women served in Vietnam Today, women comprise nearly 10 percent of the U.S. armed forces. The Legion has strived for major improvements in health care to women veterans, and with much success. The Legion is also pursuing a project to erect a Vietnam Women's Memorial statue in Arlington Cemetery, adjacent to the Vietnam Memorial wall.

• Veteran's benefits: The Legion carefully watches VA programs and the many changes currently underway in health care. A new law requires veterans to pay a portion of their health care, which is considered by the Legion as a dangerous precedent, leading to further cuts in benefits. To counter, the Legion will lobby Congress to change the "burdensome regulations," and will work to obtain additional funds.

Said Comer:

"Another serious threat to veterans is the proposal to turn public employment service over to the states. When I was department commander, we went to the Supreme Court over this same issue. Employment service is the cornerstone of the federal government's programs to help veterans find jobs. The Legion is against the proposal," Comer pointed out that if the states decide the future of employment service programs, it would set a trend toward an erosion of veterans preference throughout the nation.

• Congressional interaction: "We might not agree with Congress on every issue, but I believe we're working toward the same goal," Comer said, referring to the Legion's working relationship with Capitol Hill leaders. The Legion is indeed the veteran's growing voice in the lawmaking process.

• Foreign policy: Comer has strong reservations about flexing military muscle without considering all the diplomatic options for peace. He echoes Gen. Douglas MacArthur's sentiment that it is the soldier who, above all others, values peace.

In an essay entitled "Sparing Our Sons and Our Daughters from the Horror of War," Comer wrote that "it is for peace, perhaps more than anything else, that I will pray on November's other special day as my family gathers to give thanks for the blessings we enjoy as Americans."

"Yes, America's sons and daughters have given their lives in the struggle. There is no guarantee that future generations might not be called upon to do the same. But I am comforted by knowing that freedom and democracy still thrive in much of the world because of what they did," Comer wrote in the essay, which was published in the November issue of "American Legion Magazine."

One nation where Comer said democracy is bleak is Nicaragua. A new peace plan proposed by President Oscar Arias of Costa Rica is currently in the negotiating stage. Some aspects have been implemented in the region and Comer will visit several key nations to discover for himself if promises have been kept.

Although Arias has received the Nobel Peace Prize for fathering the peace plan, many experts charge that it cannot be implemented until the Sandinista regime of Nicaragua sits down to the negotiating table with the U.S. backed Contra rebels. Comer and fellow Legionnaires will travel to Central America next week to meet with officials, view rural and urban conditions and file a report with President Reagan.

On his visit last summer, Comer witnessed an impoverished Nicaragua in the control of a Soviet-backed Marxist regime.

"We tried to take a picture and a guard approached us with an AK-47," said Comer, referring to the Soviet-bloc manufactured automatic rifle. "That didn't come from America," he added.

The ongoing crisis in Nicaragua, says Comer, is the Soviet intention to build a submarine base and air strip on the Pacific coast. The strategic location of such a military move would give the Soviets complete surveillance capability of the U.S. west coast, which in the long term would change the balance of global power.

"There is no way the U.S. can allow the Soviets to build an airbase," said Comer, somewhat echoing Reagan's ongoing stand in support of further funding of the Contras, or freedom fighters.

The Contra issue has spawned much infighting between liberals and conservatives on Capitol Hill. For the most part, the left argues that the freedom fighters have no public support and are comprised largely of former national guardsmen from the Somoza regime.

The right argues that without the contra thorn in its side, Nicaragua will be open to spread its revolutionary model throughout Central America.

Said one Legionnaire, who served during Vietnam, "we do support the Contra effort, but more of a strategic tool than a policy."

Comer admits he falls somewhere in the middle. "You have to be there," he says. "The people are very poor. Children had no leather for shoes and many were not allowed to shop in the super market," he said. "But there are many atrocities committed by both sides," he added.

The Legion, says Comer, leans neither right nor left, but tries to work with lawmakers and officials and examine all sides in hopes of reaching some middle ground.

His upcoming visit to Central America is a case in point. The Legion will evaluate the effects of the peace plan on all of the region's 27 million residents. Hopefully, their findings will strengthen the U.S. awareness of the issue, Comer said.

"I spoke with a Connecticut senator, and he said we should dump the Contras and then, if things go to hell in a henbasket, we send in American boys," Comer said. "That, to me, is crazy," he said.

A Veterans' Day Message

By JOHN P. COMER

National Commander The American Legion

During 1987 our nation celebrated the 200th birthday of our Constitution. Since 1787, the U.S. Constitution has been the document that serves as the foundation for our government...a government "by the people" and "for the people."

This Veterans Day has a very special meaning to the millions of Americans who have worn the uniforms of our nation's Armed Forces. America's veterans know first hand what the Constitution means to this country and sacrificed to keep our foundation solid.

Veterans over time were called upon to serve and defend the Constitution and they did so without reservation. Beginning with our struggle for independence, citizens have taken up the challenge...serving in such places as Valley Forge, Gettysburg, Mexico, Bella Woods, Tripoli, Wake Island, Inchon, Da Nang and Beirut. Millions of America's veterans defended the constitutional ideal to the end.

The sacrifices of veterans have touched the lives of more than just their families. The fathers, mothers, brothers, sisters and children of this nation have also felt the effects of their service. The results are the freedoms we have today and that are enjoyed by all our citizens.

Through our veterans selfless dedication to the ideals of freedom, this nation remains a beacon of hope for freedom loving people. For more than 200 years, the citizens of the world have come to our shores to share in the liberty that is America.

Veterans Day 1987 is a time to be proud of the men and women who have worn the uniforms of our nation's military services. For without those men and women, we would not have been able to celebrate the 200th birthday of our Constitution.

Hello, Remember Me?

Some people call me Old Glory, others call me the Star Spangled Banner, but whatever they call me, I am your Flag, the Flag of the United States of America . . . Something has been bothering me, so I thought I might talk it over with you . . . because it is about you and me.

I remember some time ago people lined up on both sides of the street to watch the parade and naturally I was leading every parade, proudly waving in the breeze, when your daddy saw me coming, he immediately removed his hat and placed it against his left shoulder so that the hand was directly over his heart . . . remember?

And you, I remember you. Standing there straight as a soldier. You didn't have a hat, but you were giving the right salute. Remember little sister? Not to be outdone, she was saluting the same as you with her right hand over her heart . . . remember?

What happened? I'm still the same old flag. Oh, I have a few more Stars since you were a boy. A lot more blood has been shed since those parades of long ago.

But now I don't feel as proud as I used to. When I come down your street you just stand there with your hands in your pockets and I may get a small glance and then you look away. Then I see the children running around and shouting . . . they don't seem to know who I am . . . I saw one man take his hat off then look around, he didn't see anybody else with theirs off so he quickly put his back on.

Is it a sin to be patriotic anymore? Have you forgotten what I stand for and where I've been . . . Anzio, Guadalcanal, Korea and Vietnam. Take a look at the Memorial Honor Rolls sometimes, of those who never came back to keep this Republic free . . . One Nation Under God . . . when you salute me, you are actually saluting them.

Well, it won't be long until I'll be coming down your street again. So, when you see me, stand straight, place your right hand over your heart . . . and I'll salute you, by waving back . . . and I'll know that . . .

YOU REMEMBERED!

Raiders Seek Third In Row At Brookline

By TOM SULLIVAN

North Quincy's football team is putting everything together and last Saturday evened its record at 4-4 with a 28-14 victory over Cambridge Rindge and Latin, its second win in a row.

This Saturday the Raiders will try to make it three wins in a row going into the Quincy finale when it faces Brookline at 1:30 p.m. at Northeastern's Parsons Field.

Brookline, which won its first three games, has lost four of its last five and is 4-4 with wins over Wellesley, Quincy, Cambridge and Revere and losses to Peabody, Arlington, Waltham and Brockton.

Last week's score was not indicative of the difference between the two teams as North Quincy dominated. With a 28-0 lead, Coach Ken McPhee went with his reserves and kept them in as Cambridge scored twice.

"The defensive players wanted a shutout, but I wasn't concerned with that and wanted to give these kids a chance to play," McPhee said. "They practice hard every day and deserve a chance to play when I get a chance to use them. I think we could have shut them out if I let the starters play, but that was the least of my worries."

Ryan Craig had a banner day, rushing for 145 yards on 13 carries in little more than a half, and Paul McCormack rushed for 66 yards on seven carries. Craig had two sizable gains nullified by penalties. He also was a standout on defense.

Rushing for a net of 246 yards, North kept mainly to the ground and Joe Mulvey completed two of four passes for 50 yards and two touchdowns.

North's defense was outstanding as it held Cambridge to a net of 58 yards on the ground. Dennis Vigilante completed two of five passes for 29 yards for Cambridge.

"Shawn Darcy had his best game of the season defensively," said McPhee. "He blocked a punt that was recovered for a touchdown, had two sacks and was in on several other tackles. He, Shawn Clancy and Chris Mendes, who recovered the blocked punt for the score, played well at defensive end. Mulvey played his usual solid game at quarterback and Mike Malloy, playing in his first game after suffering a pre-season injury, played a fine game. And Dave Lawless again was superb on defense."

McPhee had good words for Paul Hogan, Matt McNamara, Dave Joyce, Paul Nimeskern ("he hasn't received the recognition he deserves"), Mike Ainsley and reserve backs Paul Brown, Chuck Peck and Keith Gott. Also coming in for their share of praise were B.J. Sylva, Bill MacDougall, Jackie Mullen, Mike Shields and Scott Collins.

North halted Cambridge following the opening kickoff and drove from its 46 for its first score. Mulvey passed to Craig for 28 yards and the touchdown.

Cambridge again could do nothing and punted for the second time, the punt going only to Cambridge's 36 against the wind, but North was stopped and Cambridge took over on its 30.

Four plays later Darcy blocked a punt and Mendes recovered in the end zone. Mulvey passed to Ainsley for the two-point conversion.

Cambridge made its only threat against North's starters midway in the second quarter when Vigilante went around left end for 17 yards to the one but Lawless stripped the ball from him and the ball went for a touchback as North got the ball on the 20.

From there the Raiders drove downfield sparked by Craig's 32-yard run and another by Craig for 17. McCormack scored from the two and Mulvey passed to Lawless for the two points and a 22-0 halftime lead.

In the fourth quarter Mulvey threw a screen pass to Lawless, who went 22 yards for a touchdown to end North's scoring.

"I felt bad scoring that touchdown, as I wasn't trying to roll up the score," McPhee said. "I just wanted the first down."

North's subs took over and Vigilante, who had an excellent game, scored from the one to put Cambridge on the board, and late in the game, Vigilante lateraled to Ramon Neves, who raced 32 yards for a touchdown. Vigilante rushed for the final two points of the game.

RYAN CRAIG, who had a big day for North Quincy with 145 yards rushing, goes through the right side for one of his many gains.

Kelly On Bentley First Line

Kelly last season scored 11 points on six goals and five assists as Bentley finished with a disappointing 9-13 record.

Coach Tom Aprille expects better things this season as the Falcons open their season Saturday at Stonehill College at 5 p.m.

North, Quincy Girls In East Central Tourney

The North Quincy girls' volleyball team, undefeated (18-0) Suburban League champion, opened its quest for the East Central Sectional championship Tuesday night when it hosted Quincy, which just made the tournament with an 11-7 record.

North, which made the tournament for the first time last year and went to the South Sectional finals when it lost to league champion Quincy after upset wins over Braintree and top-seeded Durfee, ended Quincy's five-year reign as league champion.

If North Quincy won Tuesday, it will host the Boston English-Boston Latin winner tonight (Thursday) at 7:30.

If Quincy upset North, it will play at either English or Latin tonight.

The sectional championship game will be played Saturday night at 7:30 at Eastern Nazarene College.

"I expect plenty of trouble from Quincy," North coach Jim Rendle said. "We beat them twice this year, but they gave us one of our toughest games (17-15) and they are tourney-wise. We will have to be at our very best to beat them."

Quincy will be after its sixth straight sectional title. It won the league and sectional championships the past five years.

The other teams in the East Central sectionals are Pope John, Boston Tech, Brookline and Newton North.

Braintree (18-0) is the top-seeded team in the West Central sectionals. The other teams are Lincoln-Sudbury, Milford, Dedham, Wellesley and Natick.

The West championship game will be played Saturday night at 7:30 at Lincoln-Sudbury High.

Parkway scored again in the third period but Quincy defensemen Jimmy Casinelli, Timmy Wood and Chris DiMattia played solidly, stopping the Parkway forwards at the blue line.

Winless Presidents Host Somerville

With no running game, the Presidents have depended upon the passing of Chris Noble and the receiving of Sean Munroe for their offense. Last Saturday at Arlington the strong winds stymied Noble's passing and the Spy Ponders, controlling the ball for most of the game, handed the Presidents a 59-22 walloping, believed to be in the most points ever scored against a Quincy team.

This Saturday Quincy (0-8) not only has its last chance for a win before the North Quincy game but will be seeking the first victory of the year for either Quincy team over a Greater Boston League foe when Somerville visits Veterans Memorial Stadium for a 1:30 p.m. game.

Quincy has lost to Arlington and Medford of the GBL and North Quincy bowed to Arlington and Malden.

Somerville, which defeated Quincy, 36-14, last year, has a 4-4 record with wins over Everett, Revere, Medford and Peabody and losses to Winchester, Brockton, Malden and Waltham.

"We just couldn't do anything the way the wind was blowing," said Quincy coach Jack Raymer.

"We just don't have a running game and when Noble can't pass, we are in deep trouble. Everything seemed to go wrong for us and it seemed Arlington had the ball during practically the entire game." (Arlington blocked two Quincy punts, recovering one in the end zone for a touchdown and a pass was intercepted and returned for another score).

Quincy

Munroe	9	4	58
Grant	3	2	20

Noble	1	0	6
Dennett	0	4	4

Noble was four for 10 for 73 yards and his backup, Scott Campbell, was six for 10 for 96 yards.

"We were behind, 21-0, before we knew what hit us," Raymer said. "It was 34-6 at the half and they just ran through us in the second half. Our tackline was very sloppy and, all told, it was just a day we want to forget."

Noble did complete one long pass to Munroe to set up a score and backup Campbell hit Scott Grant with a 48-yard scoring bomb.

Ernie Light had a good day for Quincy and sophomore wide receiver Chris Fay did well.

Arlington started the scoring early when Maurice Blair recovered a blocked punt in the end zone. Tim Legere kicked the extra point.

Bob Coveno scored on a four-yard run and Legere passed to Shawn Prendergast for the two-point conversion.

Arlington made it 21-0 in the opening quarter when Jerry Tabler ran 23 yards for a touchdown.

Legere made it 27-0 early in the second quarter with a 26-yard run and Blair raced 30 yards for a score and John Haley kicked the point to make it 34-0.

Quincy which had the ball only twice in the quarter, got on the board when Munroe scored on a four-yard run on a reverse for his ninth touchdown, his first rushing.

In the third quarter Jake Vartabedian scored on an eight-yard pass from Legere and Prendergast increased the lead to 46-6 when he intercepted a pass and returned it 35 yards for a score.

Next it was Leo Theriault who scored on a 35-yard run and Haley kicked the extra point.

Ernie Light culminated a drive by scoring from the one and Campbell passed to Scott Grant for the two-point conversion.

Campbell hit Grant with a 48-yard touchdown pass and then hit Tom Logan for the two-point conversion to end Quincy's scoring.

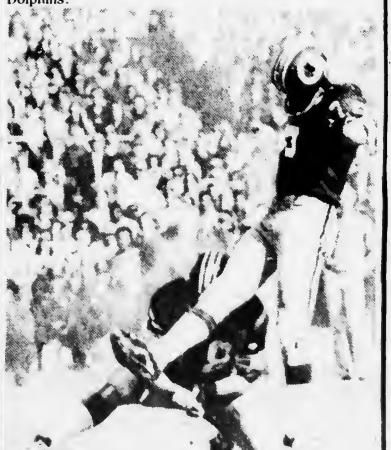
Scuba Course At Lincoln Hancock School

The Quincy Recreation Department and the Quincy Underwater Recovery Dive Team are co-sponsoring an introductory scuba course as part of its swimming programs at the Lincoln Hancock Community School Pool.

Recreation Director Barry J. Welch said, "This course (which has begun) has been designed to give the average family access to the sport of scuba with no cost to the participant. The dive team provides the necessary equipment and instructors for the six week course, and it enables residents of Quincy an opportunity to become knowledgeable about the sport, equipment, and safety in a controlled and orderly fashion. Although the course does not lead to certification, at its conclusion, participants may elect to enroll in a certification program. It is our hope that a program of this type will prevent persons from "borrowing gear to give it a try," a dangerous practice which can end with injury or death."

There are three weeks of classroom programs and three weeks of pool experience. The classroom lessons are held Tuesdays at 7 p.m., and the in-pool experience is on Mondays at 7 p.m. The course is open to all ages from children to adults, and family groups are encouraged to enroll.



Registration is limited and can be made immediately.

Crime Watch

By ROBERT HANNA
Crime Prevention Officer
Quincy Police Department

Good Neighbors Can Cut Crime

Crime and fear of crime threaten a community's social fabric - people become afraid to use streets and parks, suspicion erupts between young and old, and shops leave. Crime in turn feeds on the social isolation it creates.

You and your neighbors can prevent or break this vicious cycle, and in the process, build your community into a safe, friendly, and caring place to live.

- Get to know your neighbors. Areas of low crime are areas where neighbors interact frequently.
- Keep an eye on your neighbor's children and ask them to keep an eye on yours.
- Join or start a Neighborhood Watch, Block Watch or Apartment Watch program.
- If your neighbor is on vacation or late getting home, pick up the newspapers and mail.
- Keep each other alert and informed. A neighbors garage door left open, keys left in a car, someone snooping around homes for no apparent reason, a stranger stopping to talk to a child or senior citizen are all opportunities for a crime to happen. Remind your neighbor about the garage door, and call the police and your neighbors fast about a prowler.
- Visit a neighbor who has been a victim. Be supportive. Offer to help in babysitting, getting to court, and locating a victim assistance program.
- Make sure neighborhood teens have something constructive to do and someplace to go.
- Make sure your neighborhood is as "crimeproof" as your home. Organize a campaign to clear out debris and brush from parks and wooded areas and clean up other things that attract crime, like litter, dirty alleys, broken lights and windows. Enlist teens and kids to help. Turn a vacant lot into a community garden.
- Above all report anything suspicious to police immediately.

WEEK OF: November 12, 1987

BIRTHDAY THIS WEEK
When you believe in a cause or care about a person, you do so with great passion. A major new cause appeals to you, probably by mid-'88. Friendship circle expands somewhat later that year. Travel options broaden over the next 12 months.

AQUARIUS — January 21 - February 19
Insurance and accounting tasks may preoccupy you before the weekend. Saturday-Tuesday favor small, education-related trips. Domestic harmony reigns after weekend. Variety is accented all week.

PISCES — February 20 - March 20
Job responsibilities become more intense. Romance is on the upswing, but leave nothing to chance. Partnership ventures require careful review of each participant's tasks.

ARIES — March 21 - April 20
Diversification is the key in a week that sees you expanding interests and developing a new friendship. Plan for delays during much of this period. Creative writing proves fruitful.

TAURUS — April 21 - May 22
Cooperative enterprises prove rewarding provided they include touches of imagination. Sense of humor is important to romance relationship. You excel in the role of mediator through the weekend.

GEMINI — May 23 - June 21
Keeping a low profile in career environment may be your best bet during this frantic week. Relationships thrive especially on an intellectual plane. Financial favor comes your way.

CANCER — June 22 - July 22
Week sees you involved in interesting research activities. Decorating activities are favorably spotlighted, accenting soft shades. Competetive events are included in the weekend's program.

LEO — July 23 - August 22
Instincts are unusually sharp and you can tell almost everyone but yourself where a relationship is headed. Financial news brightener may arrive when you least expect it.

VIRGO — August 23 - September 22
Neighbors are more cooperative and adaptable. Family members are more responsive to your ideas. This is a generally upbeat week, but financial reviews are essential through the period.

LIBRA — September 23 - October 22
Partnership events are highlighted both in career and in friendship. Resist over-indulgent streak which is trying to surface around the weekend. Budget reviews are important through period.

SCORPIO — October 23 - November 21
Opt for a subtle approach when making a pitch on the job. Romance does not demand bold tactics, but check that in this area you're not being overly subtle, either.

SAGITTARIUS — November 22 - December 22
Minor delays through the week can be worked to your advantage; the key is to be super-organized. Being observant to changing trends can prove beneficial to career.

CAPRICORN — December 23 - January 20

The MBTA Board of Directors has approved a $4.7 million contract with the Solimando Construction Co. Inc., for rehabilitation of the Quincy Center Red Line station parking garage.

"Maintenance and improvement of facilities at Quincy Center garage is an important part of the MBTA's modernization program, and will result in improved safety and parking conditions for daily commuters," MBTA General Manager James F. O'Leary said.

The work consists of rehabilitation of deteriorated concrete and water-damaged areas on all five garage levels, ramps, and the adjoining exit structure. It also involves painting and resurfacing of reconstructed areas; relocation of fire protection systems and hose connections in stairways; replacement of doors, and repairs in the garage stairs.

Work under this contract is expected to take approximately eighteen months; and it will require the use of 50-60 parking spaces at any one time for construction staging.

Preliminary work at the garage, which began in July in preparation for this reconstruction contract, included installation of new lighting fixtures, new wiring, additional fire alarm post stations, relocation of lighting distribution and fire alarm control panels, and installation of a new steel picket fence on the busway along Burgin Parkway for increased security.

Who Will It Be?

Nominations Open For 'Citizen Of The Year'

Nominations are now open for The Quincy Sun's third annual "Citizen of The Year Award."

The award was established in 1985 to recognize an individual for outstanding community service.

This is not a popularity contest. A person receiving the most nominations is not necessarily sure of being the final winner. Any one nominated just once has an equal opportunity to being named the winner.

First winner was Tony Siciliano, Deputy Director of Civil Defense and Auxiliary Police Chief. He was selected from 31 nominees.

Last year's winner was Ruth Wainwright of Houghs Neck, long-time community volunteer, who was selected from 43 nominees.

Those nominated the last two years are eligible to be nominated again this year.

Deadline for nominations is Thursday, Dec. 31.

Nominations can be submitted now.

Sun readers have the opportunity to nominate the person they feel is the most deserving.

After the nominations close Dec. 31, a judging panel will be selected to make the final choice from the nominations submitted.

A nomination ballot to help the selection process is on Page 4.

If you know someone you would like to see recognized with this award, please fill out the form and mail it to:

Citizen of the Year Award.
The Quincy Sun
1372 Hancock St.
Quincy, Mass. 02169

Nominations may also be dropped off at The Sun office.

Those submitting nominations may also attach to the form a letter describing in more detail the reason for the nomination.

Nominees can be someone in elective office, a member of an appointed board, a member of the clergy, a teacher or school principal, a police officer or firefighter, someone in the business community, a sports figure or someone next door who has given freely of his or her time to a worthy project or cause.

Remember, the deadline for nominations is Thursday, Dec. 31.

Hamper Snow Efforts

Police To Crack Down On Illegal Overnight Parking

By NANCY McLAUGHLIN

Mayor Francis McCauley said Tuesday that police will step up ticketing of cars parked illegally overnight after they contributed to delayed snowplowing efforts in last week's snow storm.

At a Tuesday afternoon press conference, McCauley said that by the end of the week those who violate the odd-even parking ordinance should be prepared to receive tickets.

The odd-even parking ordinance, in effect from Oct. 15 to April 15, calls for parking on odd numbered sides of the street in odd numbered years such as 1987.

In 1988, parking will be allowed on even-numbered sides of the street.

In addition, no parking is allowed on main arteries at any time.

"We are going to start enforcing the ordinance a little more rigorously," said McCauley.

"We don't want to go to extremes, but we need the cooperation of residents so that if a storm occurs, we can plow the streets."

In addition, the city may tow, at the owner's expense, illegally parked cars during a declared snow emergency, McCauley said.

Public Works Commr. Paul Anderson estimated a $25-30 charge for towing, as well as a storage charge and a parking ticket.

The mayor said that the timing of the storm, one of the earliest on record, meant that the many private contractors were not prepared to answer the city's call for help.

Only 11 of Quincy's 19 pieces of equipment were ready for the storm, McCauley said, since many are used for different purposes during other times of the year.

"We called 63 private contractors, and got about 26," said McCauley. "Many contractors had not yet equipped their vehicles with plows."

Highway Supt. Robert Federico said that 90 percent of the contractors guaranteed that they would be ready for the next snowstorm.

Federico noted that private

Gillis Doesn't Expect Outcome To Change

A recount of the Nov. 3 mayoral contest began yesterday (Wednesday) in the second floor conference room at City Hall, according to City Clerk John Gillis.

The recount, which started with Ward 5, was requested by Councillor Joseph LaRaia who lost to incumbent Mayor Francis McCauley by 473 votes.

LaRaia won the mayor's seat in 1975 after requesting a recount when he lost by 134 votes to incumbent Mayor Walter Hannon. He won by 484 votes on the recount.

A recount of the councillor at large race, requested by Ronald Iacobucci who lost the third spot in that contest to Timothy Cahill by 217 votes, will start Monday at 9:30 a.m., Gillis said.

Gillis estimated that the 25 workers could count ballots from at least two wards, and possibly three, each day.

The cost will be about $1600 a day, he said.

The ballots have been guarded by police since the election, Gillis noted.

Gillis said he didn't expect much of a change in the results.

"But you never can tell," he added.

• McCauley Says:

U.S., State Should Help Pay Harbor Cleanup

Mayor Francis McCauley said Tuesday he thinks the federal and state government should help pay for the cleanup of Boston Harbor and Quincy Bay to help reduce the expected heavy impact on taxpayers.

"The cleanup of the harbor and bay will benefit everyone in the state," said McCauley.

"It's not realistic that the 43 communities (served by the Massachusetts Water Resources Authority) should bear the cost," he said.

The mayor noted that the state is in good shape financially, and picked up half the cost of the MBTA's deficit a few years ago.

McCauley also said he filed legislation in October that would have the state assume half the cost of the sewer and water assessment.

State officials announced this week that Boston families could pay an average of $1,133 for water and sewer services by the year 2,000 and similar fees would be assessed to communities such as Quincy, to pay for the harbor cleanup and to rebuild water and sewer pipes.

Total cost for the project over the next 12 years could be $6.6 billion, they said.

Public Invited To Reception To Welcome Dr. Ricci

Parents, staff and community members are invited to a reception to welcome Dr. Robert Ricci as the new superintendent of the Quincy Public Schools Tuesday, Nov. 24.

Sponsored by the Quincy School Committee and the Quincy Public Schools Leadership Team, the reception will be held at the Neighborhood Club of Quincy from 3 p.m. until 7 p.m.

Pianists Erik Gustafson and Johnny Yeung, students at North Quincy High School, will play selections by Bach, Beethoven, Mozart, Chopin and Debussy. Refreshments will be served.

Dr. Ricci was selected from a large field of applicants to head the city's school system. Prior to coming to Quincy, he spent almost 20 years as a teacher, counselor, assistant superintendent, and superintendent within the public schools of Providence, R.I.

Dr. Ricci also spent five years as the chief of planning for Rhode Island's State Department of Education.

Veterans Day Speaker:

'Dedicate Yourselves To Freedom And Liberty'

Quincy's Veterans Day speaker urged those in attendance to dedicate themselves "to the freedom and liberty we enjoy and to the stars and stripes we hold in such self esteem."

"This flag is the people's hopes, sacrifices, struggles and achievement," said Joseph Walsh of the World War I Barracks who spoke during the ceremonies moved from Adams Academy to Quincy Vocational Technical School because of rain.

"Our flag is recognized throughout the world as a symbol of peace and freedom," he said. "So let the colors fly high and mighty so we can all see the proud glory she displays."

Walsh, former Quincy Deputy Fire Chief, also talked about World War I.

"Early in 1917, America joined forces with our European allies to assist in terminating a war that had been in progress for three years," he said.

"Approximately five million of that generation of our young men and women were called to participate.

"World War I during 1917 and 1918 of the United States Forces there were 116,000 deaths and 321,000 casualties.

"Today, there are only 178,000 of this 5 million veterans of World War I still alive. Most are over 90 years of age. The death rate is now 10 per day."

Walsh continued, "In 1917, our youth were most anxious to join. Patriotism and Americanism was spirited.

"Our young army quite untrained in warfare tactics faced seasoned veterans with at least three years of battlefield service.

"What our young army did not lack was courage and determination to do their best – as they well proved.

"With Germany in a state of defeat, a congressional committee was appointed and an agreement was reached with Germany that the war would cease on Nov. 11, 1918.

"The term armistice was used. World War I, a war that was fought and ended with hopes of no future wars to follow.

"This was the war to end all wars.

"However, World War II and subsequent military actions all over the world caused the word armistice to be changed to Veteran's Day.

"But the date Nov. 11, the same month, the 11th day and the 11th hour is still the time we pay tribute to all our veterans of all wars."

The Rev. Sheldon W. Barrett of United First Parish Church gave the invocation.

Mayor Francis McCauley gave remarks.

The commander of the Quincy Veterans Council, Alice Scribner, also spoke.

A prayer was given by the Rev. William McCarthy, pastor of St. John's Church, Quincy Center.

Rabbi Jacob Mann of Congregation Beth Israel gave the benediction.

Ceremonies were held by the Quincy Veteran's Council.

ALICE SCRIBNER, commander of the Quincy Veterans Council, was among the Veteran's Day speakers.

WORLD WAR I veteran Joseph Walsh was the principal speaker at the Quincy Veterans' Council Veteran's Day ceremonies.

Crane Library Trustees To Appoint Building Committee

The trustees of Quincy's Thomas Crane Public Library have decided to appoint a building commitee to help publicize the library's critical need for additional space.

At a recent meeting, the board instructed Library Director Warren E. Watson to draw up a charge for such a committee to be acted on at the Board's December meeting. At that time, it is anticipated that names for membership on the committee will be considered.

Trustees are also seeking funds for preliminary architectural drawings for approximately 34,000 square feet of new space called for in a recent space-planning study which the library board commissioned.

The library has sought means for expansion for over 20 years.

Board Threatens Pizza Hut With License Suspension

By KRISTINE STRENGE

Doing business without a manager may cause Pizza Hut, 627 Washington St., Quincy to lose its liquor license.

The License Board voted Tuesday morning for Pizza Hut representatives to return next week to show cause why their wine and beer license should not be suspended for doing business without a manager.

According to City Clerk John Gillis, chairman of the board, Pizza Hut has been operating without a manager since Oct. 15.

The board received a letter from former manager, Barbara Nemet of East Weymouth revealing her termination.

"If it was not for the letter sent by Miss Nemet the board would not have known that Pizza Hut did not have a manager. It was Pizza Hut's responsibility to inform the board of Miss Nemet's termination," Gillis said.

Representing Pizza Hut was Richard Hawes, an area supervisor, of Northbridge for Pizza Hut of America. He said at the present time the establishment does have a manager, Andrew Jaffee.

No request for a change in management was made and Jaffee has not been before the board for approval, stated Gillis.

Before leaving the hearing Hawes told board members he would have Pizza Hut stop all alcohol sales immediately

In Wake Of Snow Storm

City Hall Hot-Line, New Equipment Asked By Councillors

Last week's early snow storm, the first of the season, spurred a flurry of comments and suggestions to the Public Works Commissioner during Monday night's City Council meeting.

The discussion began with the re-introduction of a resolve by Councillor Thomas Nutley proposing establishment of a 24-hour hotline at City Hall during and after snowstorms or other emergencies.

"We have to come into the 20th century regarding communication," said Nutley.

"People are not frightened if they are communicated with," said Nutley who first introduced the resolve last February.

He also suggested that residents be warned that their cars will be towed if they interfere with plowing while illegally parked.

Councillor Michael Cheney suggested purchasing new snow fighting equipment, and installing a method of communication with private contractors hired to plow streets.

Councillor John Lydon, Jr., said the DPW did "an excellent" job in Ward 3.

"I didn't receive one complaint," he said.

Councillor James Sheets said that a plan is needed to deal with towing dead-end streets.

Councillor Patricia Toland said that with the odd-even number parking designation, there may not be enough room for everyone to park on one side of the street.

She suggested that open areas be designated for parking.

DPW Commr. Paul Anderson said that his department was hampered by 18 city employees who called in sick the day of the storm.

"That's a major part of our operation," said Anderson. "It was irresponsible and I'm disappointed with that group."

He said that those workers will not get paid for the Veteran's Day holiday which preceded the storm.

Anderson said that private contractors did an "outstanding job" in some areas, but didn't work out in others such as in Ward 2.

"If our own people had shown up, we wouldn't have gotten behind," he said.

Anderson noted that there wouldn't have been as many problems if the storm had struck after Thanksgiving when more private contractors would have already fitted their trucks with plows.

Q. What is the usual fee that an attorney charges on a Personal Injury Case?

K.K. Weymouth

A. A personal injury case is a civil law suit filed on behalf of a party who sustained a physical and/or emotional injury, the unjured party usually claims that negligence or carelessness of another caused the injury. The most common cases are automibile accidents. Passengers sue drivers or drivers sue other drivers. Other cases, often called slip and fall cases involve injuries sustained while on anothers carelessly maintained property, such as a wet floor at a grocery store.

Attorneys usually accept these cases on a contingent fee basis. That is, the client is not responsible for paying a fee to the attorney unless the attorney collects money for the injury. If money is collected most attorneys charge one-third (1/3) of the recovery.

Q. Recently I consulted an attorney on an automobile accident case. I wanted to go to him with my medical records "in hand" but had difficulty obtaining these records from my doctor. What are my rights as far as this is concerned?

T.M. Quincy

A. One has an absolute right to his or her medical records. A simple statement or letter signed by the patient should be sufficient to receive the records. The doctor or hospital does have a right to charge a reasonable fee for the photocopying of the records. In the event the doctor or hospital refuses to release the records contact a local attorney, the attorney general's office or the Board of Registration in Medicine.

This week's guest is Attorney John E. DeVito with Cormier and DeVito, 376 Washington St., Wellesley.

A Date With History

Patricia Toland apparently has a date with Quincy history.

TOLAND

She has more than enough votes to be elected City Council president when the 1988-89 council organizes in January.

This will make her the first woman council president since Quincy became a city in 1888.

The only woman who came close to that honor was Edna B. Austin, who in 1943 was the first woman elected to the Quincy City Council.

She was vice-chairman of the City Council in the 1950's under Plan E. In those days, the mayor was elected by the City Council, presided over it and was the ceremonial head of the city while the city manager was the chief executive.

Toland is the third woman elected to the City Council. Joanne Condon was the second in 1977. Toland was elected in 1981 after serving on the School Committee.

Toland reportedly has six firm votes including her own to be elected council president in January. Only five are needed. It will probably be made unanimous by then.

Toland will also be making a little history in another way: she may be the only councillor in history to want to be council president and not to use it as a stepping stone to the mayor's office.

She's not interested in being mayor. "I have never considered wanting to be mayor," she says. "I like the legislative branch of government."

The City Council, of course, is the legislative branch of the city of Quincy's government.

And, the House of Representatives is a legislative branch of the state government.

And, Rep. Thomas Brownell will soon be vacating his House seat to accept appointment as a judge at Plymouth District Court.

The election to fill that vacancy will come up next fall.

Toland has previously expressed interest in making a run for the Brownell seat.

Being City Council president wouldn't hurt.

The council presidency is considered the second most powerful elective post in the city -- second only to the mayor.

The council president names the various city council committee chairmen, runs the council meetings and is usually the councillor called on for media quotes on major issues affecting the city. And, sometimes, of course, stands on the opposite side of the mayor on an issue.

It is a prestigious post, affords extra publicity and a lot of political mileage. As a result, it is considered by many as the springboard to the mayor's office.

But the latter is debatable because only relatively few council presidents have actually sprung -- directly or indirectly -- to the mayor's office.

Since Quincy became a city almost 100 years ago, only nine council presidents have gone on to become mayor while 25 didn't.

Those who made it:

Henry O. Fairbanks (1891-1893); Charles M. Bryant (1902-1904); Joseph L. Whiton (1917-1920); Charles A. Ross (1933-1934 and 1943-1949); Thomas S. Burgin (1935-1942 Plan A and 1950-1951 Plan E); Amelio Della Chiesa (1954-1957 Plan E, 1958-1965 Plan A); James R. McIntyre (1966-1971); Joseph LaRaia (1976-1977); Arthur Tobin (1978-1981).

Among the mayors who were never city council presidents: Walter Hannon and Francis McCauley.

But if you ask just about any city councillor if he (she) would like to be council president, quickly step back. You'll see them jump.

"HE'S JUST WONDERFUL," says Ann Marie Kenney of the City Clerk's office staff. She means Bernard Cardinal Law.

LAW

The Cardinal was the principal celebrant at the recent Mass celebrating the 50th anniversary of Our Lady of Good Counsel parish.

Ann Marie is married to Michael Kenney, brother of Peter Kenney, the mayor's executive secretary. Their parents, Barbara and Philip Kenney who have been married 42 years, were selected to bring the Communion gifts to the altar at the Mass.

Ann Marie attended the Mass.

After the Mass, a coffee hour was held downstairs so those attending could meet the Cardinal.

Ann Marie got a chance to talk with him and told him her uncle, Arturo Rusconi of Columbia St., who is 86 and a patient at Carney Hospital, wanted to be a Jesuit Missionary priest when he was a young man. But family obligations prevented it.

She asked the Cardinal if he would autograph one of the 50th anniversary Mass cards that had been distributed and she would give it to her uncle.

The Cardinal had another church anniversary in Connecticut to attend and was afraid if he signed one card he would be obliged to sign them all and he just did not have the time then.

He told Ann Marie to give the card to an aide who was with him and he would sign it later and send it back to Our Lady of Good Counsel Church where she could pick it up.

She did.

The Cardinal hurried off to Connecticut.

But that night, coming back from Connecticut, he detoured a little on his way home and went to Carney Hospital to visit Ann Marie's uncle. And while there, visited with every elderly patient on the entire floor

A day or two later, the autographed Mass card arrived at Our Lady of Good Counsel church for Ann Marie to pick up.

"He's so wonderful," she said. "He's so busy but he found the time to go out of his way to visit the hospital and cheer up my uncle and the other patients."

AT THE Montclair Men's Club dinner honoring Boston Herald sports columnist Tim Horgan, Councillor Joseph LaRaia got to present a city citation and was introduced as "Mayor LaRaia."

LaRAIA

"After the recount," LaRaia said, "I will be."

Head table guests included, among others, Red Sox General Manager Lou Gorman and Dick (The Monster) Radatz

Gorman said he really believes the Sox will be a winning team next season.

Radatz, one of the best relief pitchers Fenway Park has ever seen, now on a WBET radio sports show in Brockton, looked like he could go out there next spring and still blaze the ball by any batter.

The consensus: "Maybe once -- but not a second time."

GILDEA

The annual dinner as usual was a great take thanks largely to the work of perennial chairman Joe Gildea.

The Montclair Men's Club has honored many sports greats and others down through the years.

One of these years soon we would like to see the tables turned on Gildea and have him honored. He really deserves it.

DON'T LOOK NOW but is Mayor Francis McCauley ready to change his image as the Jack Benny of Quincy?

McCAULEY

McCauley promised he would take the winner of the office election pool to dinner. It was won by his executive secretary, Peter Kenney, who picked every winner and all but one in exact order.

McCauley reserved the right to name the restaurant and some figured knowing his tight fistedness reputation when it comes to spending money, it was going to be "a big night at McDonald's" for Kenney.

But McCauley fooled them all.

He took Kenney, the latter's wife, Kathy, and his wife, Sandra, to dinner at -- the Top of The Hub. (honest)

Now they're calling him Diamond Frank.

Merrymount Teacher Brings Enthusiasm To The Classroom

By NANCY McLAUGHLIN

Mary Hanlon began her 25-year teaching career in a one-room schoolhouse in North Randolph, Vt., where she taught 20 children in grades one to eight.

"It was a good way to start," said Mrs. Hanlon, now a second grade teacher at the Merrymount School. "You had to learn to solve your own problems.

"We were lucky to have running water and electricity, but I was very happy," she said.

She began each school day by ringing a bell 15 minutes before classes. Students walked as much as two miles to the schoolhouse in all kinds of weather, according to Mrs. Hanlon.

"There was no such thing as cancelling classes then," she said of her one-year assignment in the early 1940's.

"The children were very well behaved," said Mrs. Hanlon. "They didn't have much and they were there to learn."

Paid a yearly salary of $800, she lived for $12 a week in a tourist home.

"I loved it," she said.

Enthusiasm is characteristic of Mrs. Hanlon who still wakes up every morning eager to go to school.

"I was like that as a child, and I still am," she said.

"I'm still learning," Mrs. Hanlon explained.

"There is something every day to make you feel good, and something every day that you could have done better.

"You learn by your mistakes."

The grandmother of three walks one mile a day, enjoys horseback riding once a week and is planning to be a golfer.

An avid traveler who has visited several European countries as well as the United States including Alaska, who hopes to go to Antarctica with her friend and Quincy Public Schools colleague, Barbara DeWolfe.

"It's the last frontier," she explained. "No one lives there, but nine different countries have stations. It's the only place in the world where everyone (the scientists) has to share information."

But she is most at home in the classroom, particularly at the Merrymount School which she attended as a student when it opened in 1929.

She returned there to do her student teaching, and is now instructing its second graders.

"When I was little, the school looked enormous to me," Mrs. Hanlon said.

"When I was a student teacher, the classrooms looked small.

TEACHER MARY HANLON gives a math lesson to Merrymount School second graders Jared Downey and Christy Myers.

"But when I returned here in 1982, they had added a whole new wing and it looked big to me again."

Teachers run in Mrs. Hanlon's family.

Her father, Frank O'Rourke, was a teacher at Quincy Vocational School for 40 years, her husband, the late Lawrence Hanlon, taught and was principal for a total of 30 years in Quincy, and two of her children Gregory, 38, and Rosi, 36, were certified as teachers.

She also has another son, Jeff, 34.

"I love teaching," she said with enthusiasm. "I love working with kids."

A graduate of Bridgewater Teachers' College who also attended Boston University, she spent her second year teaching retarded students at the Fernald State School.

With her required two years teaching experience in hand, she was hired by the Quincy Public Schools in 1943 and taught fourth graders at the Massachusetts Fields School for seven years.

"The principal, William Morrison, was way ahead of his time," said Mrs. Hanlon. "He gave a lot of leeway to teach."

She married in June, 1947, and lost her tenure which married women teachers were denied.

"It doesn't make me angry now," she said. "That was the law of the land."

She became a permanent substitute and essentially continued her same job for three years, then left for 21 years to raise her children.

"I missed teaching while I was out," said Mrs. Hanlon. "I missed being in the mainstream of the workforce, but I liked being home where I was needed."

She resumed substitute teaching in 1967, and went back full time in 1970 at the Willard School.

After an 11-year illness, her husband died in 1978.

Mrs. Hanlon describes herself as a "firm but nice" teacher.

"I expect a child to behave," explained Mrs. Hanlon. "They are there to learn and I am there to teach and that's the way it is.

"As long as they know you like them, you can be firm.

"But you do have to be nice with them," she said.

"The nicest words they hear many days come from their classroom teacher because their parents are busy or they come from broken homes," she explained.

"With any teacher, the thing that makes you feel best is helping a student who couldn't read at all in September, to read at grade level or above at the end of the year.

"Children's achievements give you the most pleasure - they rise to the occasion."

Her students say "awfully cute" things, according to Mrs. Hanlon.

She tells the story of trying to teach some children the meaning of the word "gem" by holding up her hands adorned with several rings.

"Now what do you see," she asked.

"Wrinkles," answered one of the children.

In addition to teaching reading, writing and arithmetic, she tries to instill in students a positive self-image.

Mrs. Hanlon also stresses the importance of "being kind and nice to people as you go through life."

And finally, she tells students to choose their friends very carefully.

"If you can get those things across, you're doing a good job," said Mrs. Hanlon.

(Editor's note:
Mary Hanlon was selected for a teacher profile by a panel from the Quincy Education Association for her work as a professional educator, and also, as an involved community person.

'War On Poverty' Committee Named

Nov. 18-24, 1964

23 Years Ago

Two committees of Quincy residents were appointed to define the city's role in President Lyndon B. Johnson's newly declared "war on poverty."

One committee, made up of five members, was to work out plans for a "work training program" for young people ages 16-21 under which they would work for the city or for a non-profit organization.

Chester V. Sweatt, assistant superintendent of schools, was named chairman.

THe second committee, called the "Local Community Action Organization" with 24 members, was delegated to define broader economic problems and come up with possible solutions.

It was chaired by William J. Trifone, work study coordinator for the Quincy public schools.

GERMANTOWN APARTMENTS

Plans were disclosed for a 240-unit apartment complex off Bicknell St. in Germantown to be operated under a long-term agreement with the city under which the owners would pay an annual sum of money in lieu of taxes.

The complex, estimated to cost $3,770,000, would include 22 buildings on a 14.3-acre plot of land.

PROMOTING QUINCY

The Quincy Development Commission named a three-member subcommittee to study the possibility of promoting the city's historical and tourist attractions.

Leo F. Meady was named chairman with Paul C. Lifeset and Anthony Losordo as members.

Members of the Commission were startled when Charles Flagg of Braintree informed them that less than 13,000 people had visited the Adams Mansion in 1963 while 238,837 had toured Plimouth Plantation.

CITY CRIME RISES

Rep. James R. McIntyre (D-Quincy) told the Houghs Neck Community Council that burglaries were up 35 percent and other crimes had risen 15 percent in Quincy during the first six months of 1964.

He blamed it on the courts.

"The Supreme Court of the United States is leaning too much in favor of defendants and too little on the side of victims and society at large," he said.

McIntyre suggested an increase in the 163-man Quincy Police Department.

Double Flavored Chili

Now That It's Getting Cold

As soon as it gets cold my thoughts go to something hot like soup or chili. Everyone has their own way of making chili and I've certainly tried a few, but the one I enjoy the most is the one where I mix both ground beef and pork.

DOUBLE FLAVORED CHILI

1 Lb ground beef
Half Lb ground pork
1 large can tomatoes quarter cup of soy sauce quarter cup cooking sherry
2 medium onions
1 stick celery, cut up fine
3 Tbsps chili powder
1 can red kidney beans
(or freshly cooked equivalent) garlic powder oil
bay leaf (optional)

In hot oil, saute the onion, celery and bay leaf. Add the beef, pork and garlic powder and cook covered for about 20 minutes, stirring frequently. Add wine and soy sauce and cook for another 10 minutes. Then add all the other ingredients and cook until steaming hot. Serves at least six.

'Countless Gifts Of Love' First Parish Thanksgiving Theme

United First Parish Church, "Church of the Presidents," will hold its traditional Thanksgiving Service Sunday, Nov. 22, at 10:30 a.m.

Dr. Sheldon W. Bennett, minister, will deliver the sermon, "Countless Gifts of Love." Visitors are welcome.

At the opening of the service, the church school children will process with fresh vegetables brought from home for donation to DOVE, the Quincy shelter for abused women and their children.

Mary Vallier, a member of the church, was a founder of DOVE and began this tradition at the church to help with DOVE's Thanksgiving meal.

Church members also will bring canned goods to support the Protestant Social Service Bureau.

The Youth Choir, under the direction of Sally Bohl, will sing "For the Beauty of the Earth." The congregation will join in singing traditional Thanksgiving hymns "Come Ye Thankful People, Come," "Now Thank We All Our God," and "Song of Thanksgiving." The Church Choir will sing anthems by Willan and Lewandowski, and Norman Corey, music director, will play organ works by Bach, Reager and Frescobaldi.

Before the service, the church school children will arrive early to bake bread which they will give to the congregation at the social hour following the service. Jean Thomas will host the social hour, and Kay and Henry Johnson of Scituate, will usher during the service.

Norma Cairns, from Church World Services, will be on hand during the social hour with handcrafts by artists in Third World countries. The handcrafts, which will be on sale, include wooden music boxes, Christmas ornaments, tapestries, woven bags and jewelry.

'Will We Give Thanks' Topic At Wollaston Congregational

This Sunday, Nov. 22, Wollaston Congregational Church will observe Thanksgiving Sunday.

Rev. Elden D.J. Zuern will preach the sermon titled "Will We Give Thanks."

As the Israelites were ready to enter the promised land after a 40 year journey in the wilderness they were told to give thanks.

Thanksgiving should be part of our everyday life but it is also well for us to set a particular day apart to examine our total attitude of gratitude. Thanksgiving Day - will we give thanks?

Lay reader will be Gus Oster, the acolyte Harry Towle, greeter Phyllis Snow and ushers Nancy Glover and her son Christopher Glover.

Nursery care for infants and toddlers is provided during the service and church school for grades 1-12 is held from 10 a.m. to 11 a.m.

A fellowship hour follows the service in the social hall and all are invited to enjoy the sociability and refreshments.

The discussion group, Sermon Reflections, will meet during the fellowship hour to give impressions, understanding, and reaction to the sermon.

Thanksgiving Celebration Sunday At Bethany Church

Bethany Congregational Church, Coddington and Spear Sts., Quincy Center, will gather for a Thanksgiving Celebration Sunday at 10 a.m. in the sanctuary.

Individuals and families in the community are welcome to come and share in this special worship service. The usual early Chapel service will not be held.

The altar and chancel will be decorated with fruits, flowers, vegetables, corn stalks and pumpkins, arranged by a committee chaired by Deaconess Sandra Jones.

Those attending the service are requested to bring along a food offering. Canned goods, dried and packaged food, in family or individual size would be most useful, including baby food, dried milk in packets, canned meats, soups, spaghetti, and canned vegetables.

All the food will then go to the Protestant Social Service Bureau's "Pantry Shelf" to be distributed to those in need.

The children of the church school will attend the first portion of the service and will present their food gifts at the altar during the worship. Later, the children will go to their classrooms for half-hour sessions. Provisions are also made for babies and toddlers, under the professional supervision of Bethany's early childhood coordinator, Pamela Ford Curran.

The pledges of giving by members and friends in support of Bethany's 1988 budget, will also be brought forward during the service, placed on the altar and dedicated as a "Thank-Offering."

The Chancel Choir under the direction of Peter E. Krasinski, organist, will present two selections: the anthem "Pilgrim's Song" by Tschaikowski, and the offertory, "Now Thank We All Our God" by Bach. Trumpeters Terrence McGinty and David O'Connor will accompany the prelude, offertory and hymns. The Cherub Choir, under the direction of Sandra Jones and Marsha Archer, will sing "Seek and Ye Shall Find," accompanied by Tora Huntington on the guitar.

The Rev. J. William Arnold, senior minister, will preach the sermon titled "In Celebration of Life," based on scriptural texts from Isaiah 55:6-12 and from the Gospel of Matthew 11:16-19. Donna M. Pinel will serve as the lay scripture reader.

The moderator, Louise B. Forsyth, will read an excerpt from the Plimoth Journal of Gov. Bradford. The associate minister, Rev. Joel F. Huntington, will serve as the liturgist.

This Thanksgiving Service will be broadcast "live" direct from the sanctuary over radio station WJDA, 1300 kc.

A fellowship time with light refreshments will take place in the Allen Parlor immediately following the worship.

Beginning Monday, Nov. 30 for three consecutive Monday evenings, 7:30 to 9 p.m., an adult membership class will be held by Rev. Arnold and Rev. Huntington. This group is primarily for persons considering church membership and for inquirers. The class will cover basic Christian beliefs and church practices.

For additional information concerning any of Bethany's programs and ministries, please contact the church office at 479-7300.

Pledge Sunday At Squantum First Church

There were a number of things happening at the two worship services of the First Church of Squantum Sunday.

For one thing, it was Pledge Sunday. Pledges of financial contributions from members and friends of the church for the year 1988 were brought forward to the pastor, during the second service, by members of the Stewardship Committee. That includes Allyson Barnum, Richard Hendry, May Lewis, Cliff Mason, Helen Miller, Andy Ogilvie, Si Porter, Luther Swenson, Tom Williamson, and Barbara Anderson, chairperson, and these officers of the church, Stewart Scott, chairperson, board of deacons; Doug Barnum, chairperson, board of trustees; Evelyn Ahearn, treasurer, and Craig Zaehring, assistant treasurer.

For another thing, there was special recognition of the 95th birthday of a longtime member of the church, Jens Thornton, Sr., both during the service itself and, afterwards, during a special reception held in his honor. Members of his family were also on hand for the occasion. (The congregation had also celebrated Ruth Danforth's birthday at the ham and bean supper at the church Saturday night.)

And the services were the third in a series of four based on the experience of the Pilgrims who gathered in Scrooby, England, in 1605, and tried to escape from religious persecution and repression in 1607. They did finally escape in 1608 to Holland where they lived in Amsterdam and Leyden for 12 years, until they set sail on the Speedwell and the Mayflower to come to this country in 1620. The Pilgrims are the spiritual ancestors of persons in the Congregationalist (United Church of Christ) and Baptist denominations.

The service began with the Chancel Choir singing "Come, Ye Thankful People, Come" as an introit. The call to worship was taken from Deuteronomy 26:8-9: "...and the Lord brought us out of Egypt with a mighty hand and an outstretched arm, with great terror, with signs and wonders; and he brought us into this place and gave us this land, a land flowing with milk and honey."

Before the sermon, there was a drama depicting the ordeal of the Mayflower voyage. Then church pastor Rev. Dr. Gene Langevin preached on the topic, "Passing Through the Sea You Face."

Greeters for the morning were Arthur and Virginia Sorenson, ushers were Stewart Scott and Tore Wallin, and the Fellowship Hour was hosted by Ruth Westerbeke and Anne Wallin.

During the early service, Ellen Ogilvie and Barbara Edgar were the ushers. The congregation watched part of a videotape on the Pilgrims and heard the pastor preach on their experience. Guitarists Mary Ruth Scott and Andy Ogilvie accompanied the congregational singing.

On Thanksgiving Eve, members and friends of the church are urged to attend the Thanksgiving Service sponsored by the Inter-Church Council of North Quincy at the Quincy Community United Methodist Church in Wollaston at 7:30 p.m.

On Saturday, Nov. 28, the board of Christian education of the church is sponsoring "The Hanging of the Greens," an annual pre-Advent party for people of all ages to make Christmas crafts and to decorate the church for the holiday season. It will be held from 6 to 8 p.m. Visitors are welcome.

The board of trustees met on Monday this week but, from now on, they will be meeting on the third Wednesday night of each month. The board of deacons will meet Monday, Nov. 23, at 7:30 p.m. The nominating committee will meet again on Sunday, Nov. 29, at 7 p.m.

This Sunday, Nov. 22, will be Thanksgiving Sunday. The congregation will first gather at 9:15 a.m. for an all-church Thanksgiving breakfast. Reservations can be made by calling Hazel Mayne at 328-4367. A videotape of Cynthia Stanton's television show on Squantum will be shown at 9:45 a.m. The Thanksgiving service will begin at 10:30 a.m.

Sunday School will be held at 9:30 a.m., one hour earlier than usual, but nursery and child care will still be provided during the service at 10:30 a.m.

Fr. Ray Bourque At St. John's

Fr. Ray Bourque, O.M.I., of the Truth Will Set You Free television and radio ministry, announces that a Mass and conference will be held Saturday, Nov. 28, 9 a.m. to noon at St. John's Church, Quincy Center.

Coffee and donuts will be served.

Elegant Breakfast At Faith Lutheran Sunday

Faith Lutheran Church, 201 Granite St., Quincy, will hold an A Elegant Breakfast Sunday, Nov. 22 at 6 p.m.

The breakfast will mark the end of the church's stewardship drive.

Entertainment will be by Soloist Kimberly Blaney, a graduate from the New England Conservatory of Music and Eastern Nazarene College.

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

A friend of ours got a salary increase the first of the year, but he wasn't very excited about it. He proceeded to read us the letter announcing his raise, in which his employer said that the firm's business really didn't justify a salary increase, and he might be making a mistake in giving it, but he was taking a chance and granting it anyway. Our friend had done a fine job all year and, frankly, expected a raise. But as he said, "Not in this way!" Instead of being joyful, he felt discouraged and "let down."

This incident emphasizes how handicapped an employer - (for that matter, anybody else) - is who cannot bring himself to be gracious. Who, either through insensitivity or embarrassment, cannot do kind things in a kind way. How much better it would have been if this employer had told his employee that he was very pleased with the intelligent way he was handling his job and giving the pay increase was his way of showing his appreciation. In a sentence or two he could have inspired a loyalty and friendship that no money could buy! But he lacked an understanding heart ...

The secret of being gracious is to want to be gracious. Reluctant kindness is no kindness at all. Couldn't it be said that if you are kind in your heart first your words and actions will take care of themselves?

City Wants MWRA To Tour Route

Concerned Quincy officials will invite representatives of the Massachusetts Water Resources Authority to tour before Thanksgiving the truck route it has proposed through the city to the Quincy shipyard which will be used as a staging area for the Deer Island sewage treatment plant.

The materials would then be barged to the $1 billion Deer Island plant.

The route, outlined in an environmental report to be filed with the state next week, will have trucks exit Route 3 to Burgin Parkway, turn onto Water St., left on Franklin St., right on School St., and right at Quincy Ave. to the shipyard.

A route through Weymouth to the shipyard was also specified in the report.

More than 200 truck trips a day could take place during construction of the sewage treatment plant in the 1990s. The trucks could range from 10-wheelers to 18-wheelers.

"We are quite concerned about the designated route through Quincy," said Mayor Francis McCauley.

"We feel the route down School St. is through a very congested area all through the day," he said.

He noted that St. John's Church is located on School St., as well as senior citizen and apartment complexes.

The MWRA has said it will recommend that truckers restrict their work hours to 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. because it is such a heavily travelled section of the city.

"We feel more work is needed by the MWRA," said McCauley. "We have very serious concerns."

Public Works Commr. Paul Anderson said that the city had been pleased with the initial recommendation of two Braintree routes to the shipyard.

He said the change might be another possible violation of the environmental impact report process.

Anderson noted that the city plans to hire a bus to take the MWRA officials on the proposed route.

"It's not that we will have that many people," said Anderson, "but we want them to see the impact of a vehicle as large as a truck on the city's streets."

McCauley said he will ask that the authority consider using the shipyard's rail system for transporting materials.

An authority spokesperson said a public hearing is tentatively scheduled for Nov. 30 in Quincy to discuss traffic impacts. A time and place will be announced.

Appeals Board Continues Summit View To Dec. 9

The Zoning Board of Appeals will continue its consideration of the Ricciardi Co. of Quincy's request for a comprehensive permit for Summit View Wednesday, Dec. 9, at 7 p.m. at City Hall.

More than 100 people filled the council chambers at City Hall last week for the board's first meeting on the project, proposed for West Quincy, which would include 1,340 units, 536 of which would be low and moderate housing.

During the four hour meeting, city officials and residents accused developer Stephen Ricciardi of trying to bypass the city's zoning regulations by seeking the comprehensive permit. They also complained about density, height, traffic, noise, rodents, drainage and possible hazardous waste at the site.

Five city councillors spoke against the proposal, including Ward 6 Councillor Thomas Nutley who asked Ricciardi to withdraw his plans.

Rep. Michael Morrissey and Sen. Paul Harold also spoke against the proposal.

Ricciardi has offered to reduce the housing development to 1,100 units. He said he would then set aside less than 40 percent for moderate income people.

"We're confident that this project, and the way it is designed, will be clearly better than anything else the state has to review," said Atty. Marty Healy, who represented Ricciardi.

Quincy Liquor Checker Stops 204 False Identifications

Tom Hanson of Quincy, a doorman and liquor identification checker at the Edmund Fitzgerald Tents at Marina Bay, Squantum, was recently awarded $1,008 for identifying 204 potential underage drinkers in an 11-week period.

Each had attempted to use false or altered identification to purchase alcohol.

Hanson's award was part of Barrett Family Restaurants' incentive program designed to discourage underage drinking and reduce alcohol-related auto accidents.

All alcohol servers and bartenders receive $25 and doormen receive $5 for each false i.d. discovered. Hanson passed all previous company records for reducing potential underage drinking.

Frank Barrett, president of the Barrett Family Restaurants, said: "Underage drinking has become a real problem in this state, not only for restaurant owners but also those individuals who are too young to handle alcohol responsibly. Educating our employees to spot false i.d.'s is part of our continuing effort to promote responsible alcoholic beverage service."

The Barrett Family Restaurants also plan to participate in the Massachusetts Restaurant Association's "Project Stop" campaign which will address the problem of illegally purchased alcohol through the use of false or altered identification by underaged individuals at restaurants, bars, lounges, clubs and package stores across the state.

At Corbin's: Quality Merchandise And Personalized Service

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

In the ever changing world of women's fashion, there is at least one constant: quality merchandise and personalized service at Corbin's Fashions in North Quincy.

Located at 68 Billings Rd in the heart of the North Quincy shopping area, Corbin's is managed by Carmela and Dick Corbin. The Corbins bought the women's apparel store seven years ago with the intention of providing quality clothing and personal service. They have stuck to that promise.

"If something doesn't look good on a customer, we won't sell it," stresses Carmela, adding Corbin's is always bringing in new clothing for her clientele.

Customers, who range from age 30 to over 80, come from the Quincy-South Shore area as well as Cape Cod and beyond. "The store is well-known and even people who move away come back to visit and shop," she said.

Although Corbin's no longer has junior sizes, the fashion store carries a full line of women's clothing including slacks, suits, skirts, blouses, pajamas, robes and lingerie.

Some well-known brand names that fill the racks include Christenfeld slacks, Boston Traveler suits and skirts, Teddie and Gailord blouses, Leslie Fay petite dresses and Katz and Lollipop underwear. Jewelry and gloves are also sold.

Another creed Carmela follows is selling American made products.

"Ninety-five percent of Corbin's merchandise is made in the United States. The fit is better and less expensive than foreign brands," Carmela explained.

A lot of her new merchandise originates from the seven clothing shows that Carmela and Dick hold in the spring and fall. Twelve models wear and display four new outfits each while Carmela acts as commentator. Held at churches, clubs and schools, Corbin's next show will be in the spring. To book a show, call Corbin's at 328-1926.

In addition to Carmela and Dick, Corbin's competent staff includes Theresa Manning, an assistant manager, Carmela and Dick's daughter Geraldine, who is a nurse at Quincy City Hospital, and Carmela's two sisters, Christine and Violet.

Corbin's is now open six days a week, Monday through Saturday from 9:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. for the Christmas shopping season.

Carmela, the president of the North Quincy Business and Professional Association, said she wants people to think of Corbin's as "an old time store with personalized service."

"We know all the customers. It's a family atmosphere and I want them to feel free to come in and browse anytime," she said.

At Corbin's, quality merchandise and personalized service are always in style

No Dry Cleaning Job Too Tough For Fashion Quality Cleaners

No dry cleaning job is too tough for Fashion Quality Cleaners to tackle.

That's the philosophy of Peter Lio, who along with his wife, Nella, own and operate the dry cleaning business at 67 Billings Rd., North Quincy.

"We take every problem our customers bring us and we do what is needed," Peter explained.

What began as a dream 30 years ago has prospered into a satisfying, fulfilling business for the Lios. They left Italy in the mid-1940s and envisioned owning and operating a dry cleaning business some day. That day finally arrived in 1975 when Gino Marini retired and offered his presser, Peter, the opportunity to buy the business.

Those early days were rough on the Lios who, in addition to venturing into the business world, were also busy raising two children. Today, their son Anthony, 20, and Annamarie, 21, give their parents a helping hand while also attending Suffolk University.

The formula for making the Lio's dream come true is simple: hard work.

"I do the work until it's finished," Peter said quite honestly.

The Lio work ethic began when Nella and Peter left their birthplaces in tiny villages outside of Rome for a fresh start in the United States. They were determined to make it in the dry cleaning business and they succeeded. Seven years ago, they opened a second facility in North Weymouth.

Peter and Nella obviously "love" their jobs. Both accept six day work weeks without hesitation. Open 7 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday through Saturday, Peter and Nella log many hours at Fashion Quality Cleaners. But they don't mind.

"I like the job and I'm 100 percent into doing quality work," Peter said.

Besides specializing in dry cleaning, Fashion Quality Cleaners also handles sewing alterations and cleans suede and leather. One day service, drapery services and garment storage is also available.

Dry cleaning is discussed very little in today's society and probably deserves more attention. Nella believes if you stop and talk about it you'll realize that if it is done with professional care the process not only protects the fabric's quality but it is good as new for years. And the bottom line is customer money saved.

For the Lios, a dream has been fulfilled. In the business world, they are finally "cleaning up."

Cheney Says Aerial Ladder Truck Too Big For HN Streets

Nine city departments received City Council approval Monday night for appropriations proposed by the mayor from the city's $10.1 million surplus and from parking meter receipts.

But an appropriation for a 10th department, the Fire Department, was held for two weeks at the request of Councillor Michael Cheney.

Cheney requested the time to resolve a problem regarding a 100-foot aerial ladder truck at the Houghs Neck fire station.

He claimed that the truck is too large to maneuver the streets of Houghs Neck, and asked that it be removed. Cheney also said that the station is one man short.

"I have no problem with the chief (Carl Valenti)," noted Cheney. "He is an outstanding chief.

"But I'm asking for two weeks to resolve an issue of public safety in one section of the city of Quincy."

Finance committee chairman Richard Koch, Jr., told Cheney it was "not fair to hold one item hostage for another," and that the issue should have been discussed during the committee meeting which Chief Valenti attended.

Councillor John Lydon, Jr., said he did not want the issue stonewalled.

However, the council eventually agreed to give Cheney two weeks to resolve the matter.

Chief Valenti said later he was hopeful that the issue could be resolved.

He noted that the decision to place the nine-year-old ladder truck in Houghs Neck was made over a matter of months.

"A very extensive survey was made of the entire area, and only minor problems were encountered," he explained.

"We had more problems maneuvering it in Wollaston.

"But this decision isn't cut in stone," he said. "It doesn't mean the truck will permanently stay there."

The $280,400 Fire Department appropriation is to go for such things as a new pumper and air mask cylinders.

Some of the other appropriations, which were approved, are:

School Department, $2,300,000 for repairs to schools.

Library, $244,000 for a new bookmobile, detection systems, and air conditioning for the main library.

Park and Forestry, $75,680 for a dump truck, portable mowers and building repairs.

Cemetery, $84,500, five portable weed trimmers, four riding mowers, dump truck and backhoe loader.

Health, $5,090, for an IBM word processor, air conditioner, bookcases, typewriter tables and filing cabinets.

Police, $314,920, 15 vehicles, safety holsters and protective vests, mini van.

A total of $59,300 was appropriated from parking meter receipts for General Services items such as an enclosure, pickup truck, and small sweeper.

He has just that after the Raiders' third win in a row last week when they turned in another excellent two-way performance to roll over Brookline, 36-12, at Northeastern's Parsons Field. As a result, North takes a 5-4 record into the Quincy game.

While most other teams had their games postponed due to the atrocious field conditions, Parsons Field, with its artificial turf, was in fine condition after the snow was removed.

"The defense set the tone for this game," said a pleased McPhee. "We stopped them cold and the offense took over. We turned a couple of big fumble recoveries into touchdowns and our ground game again was outstanding."

For the second game in a row the Raiders stuck to the ground, rushing for 258 yards. Joe Mulvey, who played his usual fine game at quarterback, threw only six times, completing four for 41 yards and a touchdown. He also threw for two two-point conversions and had one pass intercepted.

In contrast, Brookline, after running the ball well in the first half, stuck to the air in the second half as Walter Norton, the top passer in Division 1, threw 34 passes, completing 16 for 202 yards, including his 15th and 16th touchdown passes of the season.

"Ryan Craig and Paul McCormack were outstanding running the ball and the offensive line was superb," said McPhee. "Billy MacDougall was his usual awesome self and Dave Lawless played another excellent game."

McCormack had his best day, rushing for 124 yards in addition to returning a kickoff 55 yards to set up a touchdown. He scored two touchdowns. Craig rushed for 89 yards, most in the first half, scored a touchdown and was immense defensively. He did virtually no running in the second half.

McPhee praised Mike Ainsley, Paul Hogan, Dave Joyce, Mike Malloy, Mat McNamara and Paul Nimeskern for their work in the offensive line.

Defensively, Shawn Darcy, Shawn Clancy, McNamara, Lawless, Hogan, Chris Mendes, Scott Collins and Jackie Mullen stood out.

McPhee also had good words for Keith Gott, B.J. Sylva, Mike Shields, Paul Jeffers, Mark Rudnisky, Dennis Cronin, Brian Tobin and Jeff Calvert.

As was the case in the Cambridge game the previous week, McPhee used his starters sparingly in the second half as several of the reserves saw a good deal of action and looked good.

North had three pass interceptions, MacDougall intercepting one on the goal line, Shields picking off another and Quan Le grabbing one on the final play of the game.

Brookline received to open the game and the Raiders held and took over on their 17 as Lawless made a fine play, batting a pass down in the end zone.

It took just three plays to go 83 yards as Lawless gained 13 yards, Craig added seven, then galloped 63 yards for a touchdown. Mulvey hit MacDougall for the two-point conversion.

North again held the Indians and took over on its own 35. Brookline held and Lawless punted. McNamara fell on a Brookline fumble on the Indians' 19. McCormack picked up 15 yards and Steve Shoap scored from the one. Mulvey rushed for the two points and North led, 16-0.

Brookline drove 52 yards in five plays and Norton threw a 14-yard touchdown pass to Brian Dockery for a touchdown.

Ainsley recovered a fumble on the Brookline 15, McCormack ran to the three with Craig throwing the key block and McCormack scored from there. Mulvey's pass to Lawless added the two-point conversion and the Raiders led at the half, 24-6.

On a fourth and one on North's seven the Raiders held as the half ended.

McCormack ran the second half kickoff back 55 to Brookline's 30 and on the first play Mulvey threw to MacDougall for the touchdown.

A few plays later McCormack went 20 yards for the final North score of the afternoon.

With the Raider subs in action, Norton passed to Andy Hennessey for 36 yards and the last score of the game.

North, Cambridge Jayvees Battle To 14-14 Tie

By PETE ZOIA

The North Quincy and Cambridge Rindge and Latin junior varsity football teams recently battled to a 14-14 tie.

Cambridge scored first when a North pass was intercepted on the Raiders' 19. North's Brian Tobin then intercepted a Cambridge pass and Jeff Calvert ran for 16 yards. On the next play a Cambridge lineman stole the ball from the grasp of a North player and three plays later Cambridge scored. It added the two-point conversion for an 8-0 lead.

Dave Hutchins returned a punt to Cambridge's 39 to set up the first North score. Cambridge held but couldn't move and Calvert blocked a punt and recovered in the end zone for a touchdown. Keith Gott rushed for the tying two points.

A poor kick gave North a break in the last quarter as it took over on Cambridge's 37. Gott and Calvert ran to the five and Gott scored on his third try. The try for the conversion failed.

With less than two minutes remaining a Cambridge back took the kickoff and returned it 75 yards for the tying score. North stopped the try for point and the game ended in a tie.

Dudek Signs With Broncos For '88 Season

North Quincy's Joe Dudek's hopes of an NFL career have been full of ups and downs and last week they went up again.

Dudek, who first signed last year with the Denver Broncos as a free agent and spent the season on the injured reserve, was cut just before the current season got under way.

The former Plymouth State College sensation, who broke the NCAA touchdown record held by Walter Payton, rejoined the Broncos during the strike and had a great night against the Los Angeles Raiders, rushing for 128 yards and scoring two touchdowns. This earned him the Player of the Week selection.

The Broncos retained Dudek after the strike ended, but two weeks ago he was again waived to make room for tight end Mitch Andrews.

But last week the Broncos signed him to a 1988 contract with "a slight raise."

Dudek said he chose to sign again with Denver because he felt he was making progress.

"I feel I'm developing as a running back," he said. "I don't want to slow my development by going to another system."

"I like Joe's running ability, but I feel he needs to add some bulk (he weighs only 180) and has to work on his blocking and receiving skills," said coach Dan Reeves.

Dudek will rejoin the Broncos next June.

Quincy's Best Game

Improved Presidents Bow To Somerville

By TOM SULLIVAN

Despite playing its best game of the season, the luckless Quincy football team will take a winless record into the Thanksgiving Day game against North Quincy.

The Presidents turned in an excellent defensive effort and moved the ball well Tuesday against Somerville but lost their ninth game in a row, 16-0. The game at Veterans Memorial Stadium had been postponed last Saturday due to the condition of the field.

The Somerville win completed a clean sweep for Greater Boston League teams over Quincy and North. Quincy earlier lost to Arlington and Medford, while North bowed to Malden and Arlington.

Quincy Season Scoring

	TD	PAT	Pts.
Munroe	9	4	58
Grant	3	2	20
Light	1	4	10
Noble	1	0	6
Dennett	0	4	4
Logan	0	4	4

"I'm very happy at the way the kids played today and it should give them a boost for the North Quincy game," said Coach Jack Raymer. "We moved the ball well, mainly on Chris Noble's passing and rushing, but we have to develop a running game for the final game. We will work extra hard trying to improve the ground game."

Noble had one of his best games, completing 15 of 27 passes for 151 yards and leading the team in rushing. He had several excellent runs, including a 48-yarder for an apparent score which was nullified by a penalty. Two other completions were voided by penalties and he had two passes intercepted.

Sean Munroe had another fine day as wide receiver, catching seven passes for 85 yards. Scott Grant had four receptions for 42 yards and Ernie Light four for 26 yards.

"We were hurt again by penalties," said Raymer. "Noble, Light, Scott O'Brien, Don Hamilton, Kerry Byrne, Dave Zupkofska, playing in his first game; Brian Norris, Mike Madden, Frank Ienello and Scott Logan all played well on offense."

Defensive coach John Taglieri was pleased with the performance of his defense and singled out Todd and Jim Kimmell, Craig Keefe, O'Brien, Norris, Grant, Sean Thompson and Frank Calabro.

"The defense was on the field for a long time, especially in the first half," Taglieri said. "The secondary played a fine game and we had a good pass rush today."

Quincy received to open the game and moved to the 50 but a pass interception ended the drive. Somerville drove to Quincy's 31 but the Presidents held and drove to the Somerville 26 with Noble completing passes for 11, eight and five yards. But the Highlanders held and took over.

Quincy held fast again early in the second quarter and regained possession on its 20. However, on the first play Somerville recovered a fumble on the Quincy 25 and went on to score five plays later, Al Chute scoring from the eight. Jim Perry rushed for the two-point conversion.

Noble completed passes of 20 yards to Grant, seven to Munroe, 15 to Light and 10 to Light but Somerville took over on its 31 as the half ended.

Somerville took the second half kickoff and drove 55 yards for the second score, picking up four first downs. Chute scored his second touchdown from the one and quarterback Scott Abbott rushed for the two points.

Midway in the final quarter Noble raced around the left side for 48 yards and an apparent score but one of several penalties nullified the run.

North Girls Win Sectional Championship

By TOM SULLIVAN

The undefeated North Quincy girls' volleyball team continues to roll through all opposition and last Saturday night the Raiderettes (21-0) won the East Central Sectional championship by sweeping Pope John in straight games.

North Quincy continued its quest for the state title last night (Wednesday) when it faced unbeaten Braintree's Bay State League champions (20-0) at Waltham High in the semifinals.

The championship game will be played Saturday night at Waltham when the North Quincy-Braintree winner meets the Stoneham-Somerset winner.

Not only did the Raiderettes win three straight matches in winning the sectional crown, but they did it in straight games.

During the regular season North won the Suburban League title with an 18-0 mark and lost just two games during the season. Brockton and Boston Latin were the only teams to win a game against the Raiderettes.

Last Saturday at Eastern Nazarene College North Quincy swept Pope John, 15-5, 15-1, 15-11, to take its first sectional crown.

Last season North, in the tournament for the first time, went to the south sectional finals before losing to perennial league and sectional titlist Quincy. Quincy, North's first victim in the sectionals last week, had won five successive league and sectional championships and won two state titles during that time.

"The girls have done a remarkable job and are confident they can win the state championship," said coach Jim Rendle, who has brought North Quincy from the bottom to the top in volleyball. "As usual, the girls came out a little nervous in the Pope John match but they settled down quickly. The most important thing was that most of the kids got a chance to play. We knew if we played our game we'd be all right."

At one point in the second game North led, 11-0, with a lot of the credit going to Jill Caldwell (11 points) and the overall net play of Debbie Panaro and Holly Rendle, each of whom had two kills.

By the time North had taken a 9-2 lead in the final game, Rendle had his subs playing freely.

Murphy finished the night with 16 kills, thanks largely to the assists of Christine Venezia, who played well on the front line.

In the semifinals North Quincy swept league rival Boston Latin, 15-7, 16-14, 15-5.

The turning point for North came in the second game as Latin took a 14-10 lead, needing only one point to win. North mounted an impressive comeback as Murphy made a diving save to keep the Raiderettes alive. She followed with two blocks and a Rendle spike and a Venezia ace tied the game. Rendle scored on a serve and Caldwell scored the winning point to give North a 2-0 lead.

North had little trouble winning the clincher as the second game comeback appeared to take the emotion out of the Wolfpack.

In the first round of the sectionals North defeated Quincy for the third time, 15-8, 15-7, 15-13.

"Eliminating Quincy this early in the sectionals is a big step," said Rendle. "My kids have been together for three years and Quincy has a whole new crop this year. They are still a great team and should be strong again in the future, but I think this is our year."

Quincy took a 7-2 lead in the first game on the strength of an Amy Guidice tapper at the net and a Christine Barrett service ace. North, however, came back to reel off 12 unanswered points behind Caldwell's strong net play.

"Because of our depth, we like to feel a team out first to check their strengths and weaknesses, then go for the kill," said Rendle, whose second unit is as strong as most other teams' first unit.

North Quincy could be building a dynasty to compare with Quincy's during the last five years. The Raiderettes' junior varsity was also undefeated at 18-0 and the freshman team had a fine 6-1 record. And the varsity has only two seniors!

Matarazzo Team Leads St. John's League

Joe Matarazzo's team leads St. John's Holy Name Bowling League with an 18-12 record, followed by Ben Williams' team at 16-14.

The rest of the standings: John Grande, 15-15; Don Gilliland, 14-16; Bob Saluti, 14-16, and Tom Feltrup, 13-17.

Art DiTullio rolled the weekly high single of 115 and the high three of 306.

Saluti's team had the high team single of 386 and Feltrup's team rolled 383. Feltrup's team had the high three of 1104.

The top ten: Saluti, 100.5; Grande, 99.5; Matarazzo, 94.5; Lew MacLennon, 94.2; Feltrup, 92.8; Duey DiCesare, 92.7; Frank Buckley, 90.9; Gilliland, 90.2; Pat Kelly, 90.2, and Williams, 90.0.

Point Panther Cheerleaders Win E-Mass Championship

The tournament was sponsored by the Brockton Midget Football League.

The Panthers edged last year's national qualifying squad from Raynham by six points. Others competing were West Bridgewater, East Bridgewater, Braintree, Brockton, Whitman and Hanson.

The Panthers entered the tournament as a preliminary to the New England championships at Boston College next month. The winner of the N.E. title automatically advances to the National High School Championships at Sea World in Orlando, Fla.

Capt. Janet DiTullio, Lynne Feeley, Sheila Cronin and Co-Capt. Eileen Kelley did an excellent job as bases for partner stunts and pyramids. Amy Murphy, Wood, Russell and Mancuso performed well on climbing and safety techniques and Co-Capt. Jennifer Bonvie, Colleen Skehan and Minichello executed well in spotting on lifts and flip-overs.

The Panthers received three perfect scores in group technique (dance synchronization, cheer transitions, formations and spacing), also practicality of words and voice projection.

The competition was limited to 16 members, but the Panthers proved "bigger isn't always better" as they had the smallest squad (11) in the tournament.

The girls dedicated their win to teammate Jennifer Walsh, who was unable to compete due to undergoing surgery. They will receive their awards at the team banquet.

EXTRA! Quincy Sun Car Care Guide

How's your car's winter survival kit?

We all know that winter driving comes with a lot of built-in hazards, from slipping and sliding, to dead batteries, to rust. But we rarely consider the fact that winter driving can be life-threatening or that a few easy and inexpensive steps taken now can go a long way to improve the odds in our favor.

If your car breaks down or gets stuck and help isn't at hand, you can be in for discomfort, hypothermia and even death if you haven't prepared for such an emergency.

Let's say you've been driving at night in a rural area, on a slippery road with deep snow on the ground. An animal darts in front of you. You instinctively jump on the brakes, lose control, leave the road and find yourself stuck up to your axles in snow. What do you do?

First of all, don't panic. Take a few deep breaths and take stock of your predicament before doing anything else.

If you see a nearby home or place of business with lights on or other signs of activity, it's probably a good idea to leave your car and go for help. However, most safety experts warn against leaving the relative security of your car unless you're sure you can reach help.

If there's no help in sight, you'll be glad — and relieved — if you planned ahead with a well-stocked winter survival kit. Here's what it should contain:

• Shovel — An inexpensive army surplus entrenching tool will do. If you can dig yourself out of the snow, great! If not, you might still be able to shovel away enough snow to check your car's exhaust system for leaks.

You're safer inside your car with the engine and heater running than outside in the cold, but only if deadly exhaust gas isn't able to seep in. (It's always a good idea to check your exhaust system — or have it checked — with every oil change.)

If your exhaust system is leaking fumes, don't sit in the car with the windows closed. Leaking exhaust gas can be fatal to occupants of an unventilated car in as little as 20 minutes, maybe even less.

• Blanket — If you can't run your engine and heater, you'll need a heavy blanket to keep you warm. Nothing fancy is required; a good, old-fashioned army blanket or two will do the job.

• Flashers — If your battery is strong (something to check on before winter starts) leave your emergency flashers on. A strong battery will keep them going for hours. As a backup, have a good flashlight with fresh batteries in your car.

Not only can it be an effective backup for your emergency flashers, it can also light the way and safeguard against falls if you decide to walk for help. And it can help you detect those under-car exhaust leaks mentioned earlier.

• CB Radio — While the CB craze has waned, a CB radio can be a really "good buddy" at a time like this. Fairly inexpensive units that plug into your cigarette lighter are available.

Channel 9, the emergency frequency, or Channel 19, the most-used frequency, offer your best chance for help. If you can't reach anyone on those channels, you still have 38 other channels to try.

Of course, the best way out of trouble is to stay out of trouble. Brush up on your winter driving skills and make them a habitual part of your winter driving technique. If you start to skid, steer in the direction of the skid. And never, never, jam on your brakes on anything but a dry road.

One more step you can take to keep you out of winter driving trouble is to install tire chains or, at least, to carry them in your trunk "just in case."

A spokesman for the Campbell Chain Company reports that their new Cam-Tuff snow chains, made to fit just about any car or light truck sold in America, grip stronger and last more than three times longer than previous chains. They're relatively easy to install, even with gloves on, and they store neatly in your trunk in their own sturdy blue poly box.

DON'T TAKE CHANCES with winter car safety. Carrying a "survival kit" consisting of a blanket, shovel, flashlight and a set of heavy-duty, easy-to-install Campbell Radial Tire Chains, is a good way to be prepared for winter emergencies.

Anderson Has Doubts About Landfill

Public Works Commr. Paul Anderson told the City Council's Finance Committee Monday night that he has severe doubts about reopening the West Quincy landfill for residential rubbish.

"I'm less optimistic than I was eight weeks ago that we should try to continue in the sanitary landfill business," said Anderson. "I'm not sure it's in the best interest of the city."

His comments came during the council's consideration of a $1.6 million appropriation proposed by the mayor from the surplus account to the landfill.

The appropriation was eventually approved 8 to 1, with Councillor James Sheets opposed.

An earlier request by the mayor to borrow the money was placed on file.

The appropriation will be used to bring the landfill, closed last spring, into compliance with Department of Environmental Quality Engineering regulations, according to Anderson.

Anderson said that if the DEQE allows the landfill to reopen, the most use the city could expect from the remaining space for residential rubbish would be nine to 12 months.

Quincy's residential trash has been trucked out of the city since the landfill closed.

He said that the city might be better off using the limited space for municipal waste from street sweepings and cleaning catch basins.

"We might be better off extending the landfill's life for five or six years with that kind of rubbish," said Anderson.

He said he was not sure it would be worth the expense to try to expand other sections of the landfill.

Anderson noted that the DEQE is becoming more strident in enforcing regulations.

"Given the liabilities DEQE could impose, I would be remiss if I didn't take those costs into consideration," he said.

Anderson said that once DEQE regulations are met, and an agreement is reached, he will make his recommendations on the landfill's future to the mayor.

Councillor Michael Cheney suggested that the mayor form a task force to review solid waste disposal and recycling.

When finance committee members met later as the City Council, committee chairman Richard Koch, Jr. said he supported the appropriation to bring the landfill in compliance with DEQE regulations.

Koch also said he supported reopening the landfill for municipal use, but not for residential rubbish.

Councillor Joseph LaRaia, who recently lost a close election for mayor to incumbent Francis McCauley, said that he felt the money for the landfill should have come from the surplus account all along.

"The mayor exaggerated the free cash amount," charged LaRaia.

"By the end of the year, you will see the figure diminish to an infinitesimal amount which really reflects the true financial picture of the city," he said.

LaRaia left the meeting shortly thereafter.

Anderson said he has scheduled a meeting with private contractors to prepare for future storms.

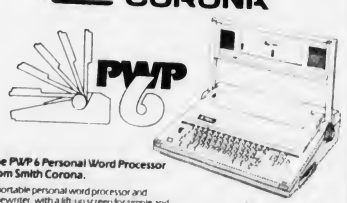
"We need everyone's cooperation," said Anderson. "Many streets were not touched initially because equipment did not have access to the streets.

"We were short of equipment, but we could have done a faster job."

McCauley said that he received many complaints that residents could not get calls through to the highway department.

He said that residents with snow removal problems should call 773-1380, ext. 231, 232 or 215 during the day, or 773-1369, 773-1709 or 773-6667 in the evening.

McCauley also noted that city ordinances require merchants to clear snow from the area in front of their business or face fines of up to $20.



"We haven't really enforced this, but now we are asking merchants to cooperate," he said.

"We hope we will have a quiet winter as far as snow, but you never know.

"Snow removal is a service taxpayers pay for, and we are going to work hard to deliver the best service we can."

No dollar amount has yet been determined for last week's snow removal. There is $300,000 in the snow removal budget.

$100,00 Damage To Rooming House

6 Driven To Street In 4-Alarm Blaze

Six people were driven from their homes in bitter cold temperatures early Sunday after a four-alarm fire at a Quincy Center rooming house caused an estimated $100,000 damage, officials said.

Probable cause of the fire at 12 Mechanic St. was a faulty toaster oven in a first floor room, according to Fire Chief Carl Valenti. First alarm came in at 1:57 a.m. and the all out was sounded at 9:40 a.m.

"There is no question that it was an electrical problem," said Valenti of the fast-spreading fire in the three-story, wood-frame structure owned by City Councillor Joseph LaRaia.

The American Red Cross assisted fire victims Ruth Johnson, William O'Brien, Frances Holt, Rosemarie Larochelle, Debra Lewis and Sandra Grant.

"They all sustained total loss," said Valenti.

He explained that the fire, which required almost every piece of the city's fire fighting apparatus, was a dangerous and difficult one to fight both because of the type of structure and the freezing temperatures.

"There was a lot of heavy fire throughout the building," he said.

Valenti said that the "old time construction" provided no fire stops in the walls, so flames travelled up into the attic.

"The walls had to be opened up," said Valenti. "Quite a bit of area had to be pulled open."

He said the 10-degree temperature produced a wind chill of 20-below-zero which caused ladders and roadways to ice up.

"Everything was coated with ice, including the equipment and firefighter's clothing," Valenti said.

"The men did an excellent job."

He added that smoke detectors were operating.

Quincy Police officers Paul Quinn and Paul Turowski were at the scene prior to the Fire Department, and assisted in evacuating all the residents, noted Valenti.

Residents of houses on either side of the rooming house were alerted, but did not have to be evacuated, according to the chief.

There were no injuries to rooming house occupants or firefighters, Valenti said.

Mutual aid from Boston, Milton, Braintree and Weymouth covered the Quincy stations, he said.

Though the fire was not of suspicious origin, the Fire Prevention Bureau is investigating the exact cause.

Valenti said that the Building Department will inspect the building, which was pretty well gutted, to determine if it is still structurally sound.

Red Cross Fund For Fire Victims

LaRaia Calls Off Recount, But That's Not The End

Councillor Joseph LaRaia called off a recount of the mayor race after a day and half's counting of Wards 2 and 5 produced only an 11 vote difference.

But the matter may not rest there.

LaRaia said he will give his reaction to the matter shortly "as it reflects on the situation in the city."

He had requested the recount after he lost the mayoral race Nov. 3, to incumbent Francis McCauley by 473 votes.

A former mayor, LaRaia had won that position in 1975 after requesting a recount when he lost by 134 votes to incumbent Mayor Walter Hannon. He won by 484 votes on the recount.

City Clerk John Gillis said the recount cost the city about $4,000.

During the recount, election workers counted ballots and envelopes, and checked the lists of voters who entered and exited polling places.

Mayor Francis McCauley, who had none of his representatives at the recount, offered only a brief comment.

"Now we can get on with planning the next two years," McCauley said.

Interfaith Coalition Grateful For Help In Obtaining Shelter

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

On Friday, Oct. 30, Mayor Francis X. McCauley signed a lease with the Quincy Interfaith Sheltering Coalition for the city building on 38 Broad St.

This building will allow the Coalition to open a permanent site for serving the homeless. Over the past four years, the Coalition has served over 900 people in five different sites. We opened our first shelter in the basement of the Salvation Army in July 1984. That winter we opened a temporary shelter at St. John's School.

From December 1985 to June 1986 we operated a 33 bed facility at the old Faxon House on the grounds of Quincy City Hospital. When that building was demolished for construction, we moved to separate sites: the men are housed at the Wollaston Lutheran Church, the women at Quincy Point Congregational Church and our offices are at the Council 96 Knights of Columbus building. The building on Broad Street will allow our program to operate under one roof, in one site, permanently.

Although the constant moving was difficult, we reflect on the past years very positively. It has been obvious we are doing God's will, because He has blessed us so richly. We have always had a site for providing services. Sometimes we were 24 hours away from closing, but then a door opened. We have witnessed miracle after miracle. When we had 1 month to raise $30,000 to open at Faxon House and no idea where to look, we prayed, and by the end of the month $30,000 had come in. It was in personal checks of $5 and $10, grants and inkind donations, but it came in. Each year our budget has been tight, but when we were desperate, someone always met our needs. We have seen people's lives change, been rebuilt. The Shelter has housed a lawyer, postman, MIT graduate, 2lab technicians, mothers, fathers, union tradesmen, sales persons, a Health Inspector and many others. Last week an elderly man came in with tattered shoes and the next day a brand new pair of men's 8½ shoes were donated. Guess what size he wore!

Many people come to mind as we think of our progress, people who have been invaluable to our cause. We would like to thank our Board of Directors, especially Fr. William McCarthy for his leadership over the past two years. We are grateful to Mayor Francis X. McCauley and the Quincy City Council members. We have had great support from the churches and synagogues both financially and with volunteers. Senator Paul Harold has always worked with the Coalition to meet our needs. The Department of Public Welfare has enabled our program to continue through their funding and helped us grow through their training and experience. Our staff has given 110 percent to the Coalition and the clients, and we are grateful.

The future looks very promising. We are waiting for the Registry of Motor Vehicles to vacate our building. When they move, we have extensive renovations, an estimated cost of $300,000. However, we know, God will provide. We have $94,056 pledged, and many inkind donations. Arnold Jacobson is donating his architectural skills, Richard Bucherri is donating his time as our General Contractor, the Quincy Building and Trades Unions are donating their skills, Vern Norman will be giving his engineering skills and James "Pete" Riccuti is volunteering as our clerk of the works. However, we still need to raise another $100,000 for renovations. Anyone wishing to donate should call the office at 770-3314 for more information.

We have experienced many miracles and worked with many talented, devoted people. The last leg of our journey is yet to go. We believe what the Apostle Paul wrote to the Ephesians, "Now unto God who is able to do exceedingly, abundantly, above all that you ask or think." Please join us as we praise God for what He has done and work toward the future.

Nancy B. Powers
Executive Director

McGrath Next Quincy Mayor?

This year's city election was a major political crossroad for Stephen McGrath.

McGRATH

After five terms as Ward 5 councillor and with dreams of someday being mayor of Quincy, opportunity knocked at his door and he was quick to answer.

Suddenly there were two City Council at-large seats opening up: Joseph LaRaia's to run for mayor and that of Richard Koch who moved to the Cape and was stepping down from the Council.

McGrath didn't hesitate. An opportunity like this one doesn't come along very often. He quickly tossed his hat in the at-large field.

There was some risk involved. Making his first run city-wide, he might have finished a weak third in the three seat field. Or, even out of the money.

The big question before the election was his recognition factor. Outside of Ward 5 how many people in the city knew him even though he was council president the past two years?

If he lost, those mayoral dreams would have been shattered. If he finished a weak third, they would have been stalled if not stymied.

But McGrath, with the help of former Ward 1 Councillor Leo Kelly as his campaign manager, worked the entire city on the campaign trail. And if there had been a recognition deficiency in the beginning, it wasn't there in the end.

McGrath came on like gangbusters. Not on finish strong, he finished first.

He topped the six-candidate field for councillor at-large with 12,479 votes. Incumbent Patricia Toland was second with 10,253 and newcomer Tim Cahill took the third seat with 9,296.

Last one to do it was Walter Hannon who came out of Ward 5 in 1971 to win. But he had the blessing and backing of a powerful James McIntyre.

For the next two years at least, McGrath wants to be a good councillor at-large. That's what the people voted him in for.

But as councillor at-large, he will be in the right place when the right time arrives to run for mayor. That could be in two years.

And, if the next mayor of Quincy is coming out of the City Council, right now his name would seem to be Steve McGrath.

FORMER Dist. Atty. George Burke and Rep. Michael Morrissey, both graduates of U. Mass-Amherst, were invited to a recent reception for legislative and business alumni at the university.

BURKE

They stayed at the Lord Jeffrey Inn in Amherst. Burke went into the inn to check on the rooms. In the lobby he ran into former Massachusetts Gov. Endicott (Chub) Peabody and U.S. Senator Paul Simon, one of the Democratic candidates for President.

Burke told them about the U-Mass reception to be held that night. Two hours later, Simon turned up at the reception.

"George's company is good company to be in at the university," said Morrissey.

Burke was a basketball star at U-Mass. in the 1950's and held various scoring records until they were broken by a player named Julius (The Doctor) Irving.

SHERIFF Clifford Marshall who was just a kid with a crewcut when he ran for Ward 2 Councillor in the 1960's has put on a little mileage since. He's now at the 50-year mark -- but a young 50.

On Wednesday, Dec. 2, he'll get the works at a 50th birthday roast at Lantana, Randolph. Social hour 6:30 p.m., dinner 7:30.

Bobby Orr is honorary chairman and Judge Charles Flaherty will be the roastmaster.

Roasters will include House Speaker George Keverian, Reps. NEWLY ELECTED CITY Councillors Tim Cahill, Larry Chretien and Charles Phelan had the opportunity to get a feeling for their new jobs at a recent council meeting.

CAHILL

They were invited to sit in the council area seats normally occupied by City Solicitor Joseph (Jay) MacRitchie, Planning Director Richard Meade and Public Works Commr. Paul Anderson.

They were welcomed with applause by present council members.

"Tim will by supplying croissants and decaf coffee for the meetings," joked Council President Steve McGrath. Cahill is owner of Handshakes in Quincy Sq.

THE DAY AFTER the disclosure that Patricia Toland had enough votes to be the next City Council president in January, Mayor Francis McCauley returned to his office to find her sitting at his desk talking on the telephone.

TOLAND

"C'mon Pat," he laughed, "aren't you moving a little fast?"

McCauley was joking about the fact that the city council presidency is considered a springboard to the mayor's office.

Toland actually had come to the office on business and had to make a telephone call. Arthur Foley, McCauley's administrative aide invited her to use McCauley's desk and phone.

Thanksgiving Can Be A Dangerous Holiday

Thanksgiving is that thankful time of the year when family and friends get together to share a gourmet meal and to give thanks for their bountiful gifts over the past year.

But, beware!

In the Quincy City Hospital Emergency Room, as in emergency rooms throughout the country, Thanksgiving is one of the busiest holidays for injuries.

You may ask, why Thanksgiving of all holidays?

For one reason, it is the final High School football game of the season, generally against an arch rival team. For some of the seniors, it could be their last game, and they will play their hearts out, and even hurt, up til the last second. Then there are the rival fans in the stands who may have started celebrating a little early, and decided to fight out the game results in the stands.

The roads are crammed with automobiles. Both long-distance and local travel result in a great number of automobile accidents, and injuries.

Kitchen accidents account for many visits to the emergency room. Burns from cooking utensils, and hot grease can be very serious. Oftentimes, in our haste to "get the bird on the table," carving injuries will result in a trip to the hospital.

And, there are those whose overindulgence may necessitate the need for emergency care.

The Quincy City Hospital staff wishes everyone a happy and healthy Thanksgiving Day... and hopes you will use care, every day, so that we will not meet you in the Emergency Room.

Interfaith Shelter To Be Named After Fr. McCarthy

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

The Quincy Interfaith Sheltering Coalition's permanent location for the homeless will be named after the Rev. William McCarthy, pastor of St. John's Church and a longtime worker for the homeless.

The name is in honor of McCarthy's many years of service to the area's homeless people, said Nancy Powers, executive director of QISC.

"If we can model our care after his (Rev. McCarthy's) care, we will certainly be on the right track," Powers said.

The official name will be "The Reverend William R. McCarthy Interfaith Shelter--'Father Bill's Place,'" Powers said.

"I'm embarrassed by the whole thing. I don't think I'm worthy of it," said Rev. McCarthy, who said he has worked with the homeless for eight years, including two years as QISC president (85-87).

Rev. WILLIAM McCARTHY

"I am very pleased about the honor, but I am just a little embarrassed by it," Rev. McCarthy added.

The QISC board voted unanimously last Thursday to name the shelter after Rev. McCarthy, Powers said.

The idea was proposed by the board and "picked up very quickly in full agreement," she said.

Rev. McCarthy became involved with the QISC after it formed in March, 1984. Powers said Rev. McCarthy has been involved with the area's homeless "long before we were on the scene," adding he's been active in finding temporary shelters for homeless people.

The permanent shelter will be located at the present site of the Registry of Motor Vehicles on Broad St. The registry is expected to relocate at Quincy Fair in Quincy Center after the Ross Parking Deck is completed.

Powers said if the registry relocates by Jan. 1, 1988 and renovations go as planned, the shelter will open by late February.

However, Powers was cautious of that estimate, since the shelter lacks $100,000 of the proposed $300,000 in renovation funds.

"We desperately need more renovation money," Powers said, adding that $100,000 in pledges and another $75,000 of in-kind donations has been collected.

Anyone wishing to contribute should write the QISC Building Fund, P.O. Box 2512, Quincy, MA 02269.

Once open, the shelter will house up to 45 homeless men and women.

Gillis Thinks Candidate Should Pay For Recount If Outcome Doesn't Change

City Clerk John Gillis thinks that candidates who lose an election by a substantial margin and ask for a recount should pay for the work involved if the election outcome doesn't change.

He said he plans to propose legislation that would require a candidate to pay a recount in that situation.

The city would continue to pay for recounts when the difference between the kwinner and loser is "reasonable," Gillis said.

However, he did not say what that percentage would be.

Iacobucci lost the third spot in that contest to Timothy Cahill by 217 votes.

Last week, a recount of the mayoral race requested by Joseph LaRaia was called off after a day and a half when a count of Wards 2 and 5 showed only an 11 vote difference.

LaRaia lost to incumbent Mayor Francis McCauley by 473 votes.

Iacobucci Recount Turns To Ballot Cancellations

A recount of the councillor at large race requested by candidate Ronald Iacobucci was scheduled to continue yesterday (Tuesday) in the second floor conference room in the City Hall Annex.

Iacobucci had requested the recount after he lost the third spot in that contest to Timothy Cahill by 217 votes.

The recount of ballots began Monday with Ward 3, but that part of the process was called off about noon when four precincts counted showed little difference, Iacobucci said.

He then requested that ballots in Wards 3, 5 and 2 be checked for proper cancellation, but found that 518 had not been cancelled.

After voters turn in their ballots, they are generally cancelled as they go in the box at polling places.

"They may have been put in the box the wrong way," said Gillis. "It really doesn't make a difference as long as they are counted."

Iacobucci also said he wanted to check out why 73 votes were cast by people who were not checked off the list at polling places, and why 150 votes were allowed by people not on the voting list.

Iacobucci emphasized that he was not questioning the integrity of election department workers.

"The recount has gone exceptionally well, with no problems," he said.

"We have just found a number of issues we have to check out."

Gillis estimated the cost of Monday's recount at $2800 for election workers and police to guard the ballots.

Turkey Stuffing
You Can Make It Early

This Thanksgiving will be a little bit different in our house, as some of the children who are married are spending part of the day with their in-laws.

And later will have a late snack at our house. And so instead of the usual 15-20 at the dinner table, I will be cooking for a mere 10-12. It really doesn't make that much difference in the amount of food cooked since the others will be dining with us later in the day, but the difference in how many leafs go on the dining room table!

Here is my recipe for turkey stuffing which you can make a day or two early and then stuff the turkey the night before (with cold stuffing used, there is absolutely no danger). The following recipe for turkey stuffing is for a 10-12 pounder.

TURKEY STUFFING

About 5 oz. of ground beef or pork
1 stalk of celery (cut up small)
1 small onion, cut up
Livers from the turkey (finely chopped and optional)
1 egg
3 cups of stuffing mix (any kind) or equivalent plain bread
1 cup seasoned bread crumbs
1 Tbsp Bell's Seasoning
1 Tbsps oil
¼ cup grated cheese (any kind)
¼ cup white wine

In a large frying pan or pot, heat the oil and saute the celery and onion. Add the ground meat and livers and wine and cook until blended. Add the stuffing mix that you have soaked in water. Stir and after a couple of minutes add the seasoned bread crumbs, the Bell's Seasoning, the egg, grated cheese and stir briefly. If the mixture looks too liquidy, add more bread crumbs (even plain if you like) and if it looks to dry simply add a little more water.

The night before thanksgiving, place the stuffed turkey in its baking pan along with salt, pepper, cover and refrigerate. I also usually put a sliced onion, a stick of margerine and about a cup of water in the bottom of the roasting pan to provide a starter liquid for basting.

Next morning, pop the turkey with some foil loosely draped around the top in a 350 degree oven and bake 20 minutes to the pound. The last hour or so, remove the foil and baste regularly. (Some experts advise putting the stuffing in separate baking dish in the oven.) If you choose to do it this way, the stuffing will take about an hour at 350 degrees to cook. Cover the dish.

With most of my cooking done ahead (that includes making the butternut squash) and setting the table the night before, I can almost enjoy the day as much as everyone else! On Thanksgiving night, we are all heading down to my brother Phil and Teresa's house for dessert if there is any room left. Happy cooking and Happy Holiday!

This past Sunday, there was a service of Thanksgiving held after a breakfast for members and friends of the church. The breakfast was sponsored by young people of the church who were earning money to help send children and teen-agers from the ministries of the church to Christian camps and conferences during the year.

After the breakfast, those who had attended gathered around a large television set to watch a videotape of Cynthia Stanton's cable television program on the Squantum community. She is a member of the church.

Upstairs in the sanctuary, the service began a Pilgrim Psalm sung by the Chancel Choir as the Pilgrims would have sung it.

Three choirs took part in the service. The Junior Choir sang "Thank You" by Franz Schubert. The Youth Choir sang "O Give Thanks" by Henry Purcell. "Sing to the Lord of Harvest" by Healey-Willan, was sung by the Chancel Choir. This tune dates to 1581. Mary Ruth Scott directed all three choirs.

Over 70 Units In Christmas Parade Sunday

By NANCY McLAUGHLIN

It's beginning to look a lot like Christmas because the 36th annual Christmas Festival Parade is set to step off Sunday, Nov. 29, at 12:30 p.m.

Nearly 300,000 people are expected to line the 2.8 mile route for the parade on the theme, the "Magic of Christmas."

For the first time, a local resident will be the grand marshal. John P. (Jake) Comer of Quincy, national commander of the American Legion, has been chosen for the honor.

Comer and his wife, Eileen, will fly in from Washington, D.C., on the day of the parade to lead off the biggest parade on the East Coast.

The parade will be among a number of holiday events this weekend including the first annual Quincy Center Christmas Festival Friday evening and Saturday.

Among the festival features will be strolling carolers and the turning on of Christmas lights at City Hall Friday starting at 6:30 p.m., and Santa's arrival, pony rides and Disney characters on Saturday.

The parade on Sunday will begin at Elm and School Sts. and proceed north on Hancock St. to East and West Squantum Sts. at North Quincy High School. It is expected to last about two hours.

Twenty-seven bands, 20 floats and 25 special units are scheduled to take part in the parade which attracts people from throughout New England and beyond.

Returning favorites will include miniature horses, 32-inches high, in Christmas attire, the Hallamore Budweiser Clydesdales and Mr. and Mrs. Santa Claus, according to parade chairman George White of the Patriot Ledger.

A new feature will be "Clowns of America" with a musical van presenting "Send In The Clowns," as well as clowns walking along the parade route.

"It's the first time we have had a clown contingent," noted White.

"We will also have the always popular Ronald McDonald," he said.

White added that spectators are invited to bring new or good used items for the "Toys for Tots" drive which will be conducted during the parade.

Parade theme contest winners Louis and Tricia Bertucci of 74 Dixwell Ave., Quincy Center, will be special guests. They will be transported along the parade route and will receive a gift from the Christmas Festival Committee.

New float participants will be Abington Savings Bank, Bank of Boston, Students Against Drunk Driving, and Carney Hospital, according to White, chairman for the past seven years and a Christmas Festival Committee member for 25 years.

He noted that the parade has a higher percentage of commercial and business floats this year.

White also said that the Marshfield Band, last year's Division IV winner, which will participate in the 1988 Cottonbowl Parade in Dallas, Texas, will defend its championship.

Major sponsors of the event are the City of Quincy, Quincy Center Business and Professional Association, and the Patriot Ledger.

A number of streets will be roped off at the sidewalk, and White asks the cooperation of parade spectators in keeping behind the ropes.

The streets are Hancock St. from Granite to School Sts., St. Ann's Road to Old Colony Ave., West Elm Ave. to Beale, Billings Rd. to East and West Squantum Sts., as well as McIntyre Mall.

Floats illustrating the parade theme will compete for prizes and money in the commercial and non-commercial categories.

In addition, trophies are presented for the Best Overall Float, the Fr. Thomas Tierney Trophy, and $1,000; second prize, $500; third prize, $300; fourth prize, $200; The Mayor's Trophy, the best Quincy float; Best Commercial Float and the special category, the Festival Committee Christmas Trophy.

Floats will be judged on originality, use of materials, use of color, overall look, and adherence to theme.

Float participants will be Abington Savings Bank, Quincy High School, Carney Hospital, Quincy Bay Race Week, Bernie's Modern Formal, Sen. Paul Harold, Partents Without Partners, Cub Scout Pack 14, Bank of Boston, QCBPA.

Also, the Koch Club, the Patriot Ledger, Quincy Kiwanis, St. John's CYO; South Shore Bank, South Shore YMCA, Germantown Yacht Club, Woodward School, Quincy Junior College, Students Against Drunk Driving (SADD).

Float judges are Elizabeth Shorr, Boston illustrator; Mary Goode, founding president, Randolph Art Association; and Ruth Duquet of Norwell.

State, county and city officials will also be in the line of march.

In addition to the parade theme winners, specialty units will be Childworld (Peter Panda), 12 antique cars, Quincy High School North Quincy High School beauty queens, Ronald McDonald Motor Home, McDonald train and characters, Hallamore Clydesdales, Hi Wheelers, Scituate Safety Car, Toys for Tots, Miniature Horses, Trolley car/characters, Clowns of America, Pooper Scoopers, Quincy Civil Defense, Quincy Police Color Guard, Color Guard Competition, Bryan Post Color Guard, Quincy Fire Department Pumper Vehicle, Quincy Police Vehicle and Motorcycles, State Color

D. Scott Deware

THANKSGIVING LIVING. . . .The story of Thanksgiving is a vital part of American history. We may remember certain aspects of it with nostalgia or we may recall the relatively-meager material possessions our forefathers had, in comparison to our land of plenty. Yet, before the Pilgrims got around to their meal of Thanksgiving, they paused to remember that this was not merely a feast on a given day, but that it had to do with living a certain way. . . They gathered together in their meetinghouse to give thanks for the strength to perform daily tasks; for survival through times of hardship; for courage to face up to the dangers of the day and for loved ones and friends who shared their burdens . . . Thanksgiving was a way of living; a way of feeling about people and things. It still is. We have the same things to be thankful for today . . . and on a much greater scale. Yet, our thanks is often hollow in comparison to theirs. We make it a "day", peck it full of action, and wrap it up in 24 hours. Then we get back to the "routine"-on with the business of living. . . We need to take a closer look at THANKSGIVING. We need to recognize that there is plenty for which we can be thankful. We need to enter into our "meeting-houses" and thank Him who is the giver of every good gift. After we have given thanks, we can get on with the matter of thanksLIVING.

The Josiah Quincy House: Supervised by The Society for the Preservation of New England Antiquities.

Colonel Josiah Quincy, a leader during the American Revolution, built his country estate on a parcel of the land grant given to his great-grandfather in 1635. When it was built, this fine Georgian house offered an uninterrupted view across Quincy Bay to Boston Harbor and was surrounded by numerous agricultural lands and outbuildings.

Several generations of the Quincy family lived in the house until the late 19th century. The house features elegant English and locally made furniture, fireplaces surrounded by colorful English tiles, and period wall paneling.

Adams Academy Building: Quincy Historical Society.

The Adams Academy was a gift of President John Adams to his hometown made in three deeds of 1822. The school opened in 1872 with twenty-three students and reached a peak of one hundred and forty in 1876. With the decline of this type of classical school, the Academy closed in 1908.

The beautiful gabled granite and brick building houses a collection of local artifacts and memorabilia and a 4,000-volume library of local history books, pamphlets, manuscripts and maps, and serves as the headquarters of the Quincy Historical Society.

First Parish Church: United First Parish Church.

The First Parish Church has been the religious center of the town since the seventeenth century. This majestic granite Greek Revival building, designed by architect Alexander Parris, was constructed in 1828 and is known as the Church of the Presidents. It is the burial place of two Presidents of the United States and their wives, John and Abigail Adams, and John Quincy and Louisa Catherine Adams.

The interior is noted for its fine proportions, its beautiful domed ceiling, and the handsome mahogany pulpit.

Adams National Historic Site: National Park Service.

Purchased by John Adams in 1787, the Old House is presented just as it was when the family lived here, with the furnishings and the family memorabilia reflecting the occupation by four generations of Adamses, from 1788 to 1927. The building itself has been greatly altered and added to over the decades to accommodate the family's acquisitions during their missions and travels to all parts of the world. Its mixture of styles and its agreeable clutter of furniture, china, rugs, pictures, books, kitchen equipment, and memorabilia acquired at different times in many places, shows the evolution of taste and manners over nearly a century and a half.

The Adams Mansion was designated a national historic site in December, 1946. The property contains 4.77 acres and includes the house, library, garden and stables. In 1972 the adjoining Beale property, consisting of 3.6 acres, was purchased and is now part of the site administered by the National Park Service.

North Jayvees Romp Over Quincy, 24-6

By PETE ZOIA

The North Quincy junior varsity football team finished a successful season with a 24-6 victory over Quincy in their annual clash last Saturday. The Raiders finished with a 6-3-1 record.

A Quincy fumble forced by North's Scott Kemp was recovered by Dave Hutchins on the Quincy 30, Hutchins carried to the 11 and Jeff Calvert went the rest of the way.

A short time later North's Brian Tobin tackled a Quincy back in the end zone for a safety and an 8-0 lead.

A Hutchins to Sean McDonough pass was good for 22 yards and another North score and Keith Gott rushed for the two-point conversion.

Quincy came back with a long drive climaxed by Jim Dennett's three-yard scoring run.

Dave Kiley ran for 15 yards and North's final touchdown and McDonough scored the two points on a pass from Jim Bryan.

Kevin Cobban's North team had previously defeated Brookline, 22-0, led by Hutchins, who scored all three touchdowns on a 24-yard run, an 11-yard pass from Bryan and a one-yard run. He also intercepted a pass to end the game.

Jeff Calvert did some fancy running along with Dan Gilmartin, Kiley and Gott. Cobban had good words for Kevin MacDougall, who had missed two games and who intercepted a pass.

Quincy, North Freshmen Battle To 6-6 Tie

The North Quincy freshman football team remained unbeaten in its five-year series with Quincy as the teams battled to a 6-6 tie last Saturday.

Both teams played strong defense and Quincy scored first as Mark Bogan raced 43 yards for the young Presidents' only score.

North had problems putting together any kind of offense as it was stopped by the hard-charging Quincy line.

Midway in the second quarter Quincy marched to North's two-yard line. Here the young Raiders came alive and set Quincy back after it reached the six-inch line.

North received the second-half kickoff. The kick went into the end zone and Evan Kiley picked it up and galloped 102 yards for the tying score, aided by a tremendous block by Mike Oliva.

Oliva had a great day defensively, repeatedly bringing down Quincy ball carriers and Coach Tom Carter called him the outstanding player of the game.

North has three wins and there have been two ties in the annual pre-Thanksgiving series.

John Cristiani Honored For Heroic Action In Boat Explosion

A 20-year old Suffolk University junior from Quincy, who is a star pitcher for the school's baseball team, has been awarded the U.S. Coast Guard's Meritorious Public Service Award for heroic actions after a pleasure craft exploded last June at the Marina Bay Yacht Club in Squantum.

Cristiani was cited for "displaying unusual courage and demonstrating superior performance of his duties" last June 20 at the yacht club in Quincy, where he held a summer job.

When the pleasure boat exploded in flames at the fuel pier, Cristiani, despite extreme heat and dense smoke, helped passenger Deborah Keefe and her three-year old daughter, Vanessa, to safety. He then cut the engulfed vessel's lines and pushed it away from the fuel pier and other nearby craft.

Admiral Johanson noted, "His (Cristiani's) heroic actions were instrumental in preventing serious injury and extensive fire damage."

JOHN CRISTIANI

Johanson said Cristiani's "quick thinking and instantaneous response averted a possible disaster" and noted that Cristiani took the action despite considerable risk to himself.

"His courage, concern and meritorious efforts are most heartily commended and will long be remembered by all those involved," Johanson said in the commendation to the Suffolk student.

A management major at Suffolk, Cristiani is the son of Vincent and Jean Cristiani of Quincy. His father is an administrator and faculty member at UMass Boston, who supervises graduate students in the psychology program. Mrs. Cristiani is a Boston school teacher.

John Cristiani was graduated from Boston College High School in 1985 where he pitched on the baseball team. At Suffolk, the 6 foot one-inch lefthander has been a starting pitcher for Coach Joe Walsh's baseball squad for the past two seasons.

Last season, Cristiani won two games, lost two and had an earned run average of 2.02 with three saves. But his biggest save obviously was his off-field action at the Marina Bay Yacht Club last June 30.

"I really don't consider myself a hero," he shrugged. "It was an instinctive reaction, and at the same time it was a common sense thing to do, and I would hope other people would react the same way in such a situation."

Cristiani suffered burns on the foot and singes to the eyes during the explosion, but no permanent damage and is now looking forward to the 1988 Suffolk baseball season where he is expected to be one of the mainstays of the Rams pitching staff.

Sailors Sink Panthers In Sudden Death Overtime For Title

The Squantum Sailors edged the Quincy Point Panthers, 14-12, in sudden death overtime last Saturday night at Veterans Memorial Stadium to win the 38th Quincy Youth Football League championship.

The Panthers scored first as Derek Tardanico ran 30 yards for the touchdown. He finished as the league's leading scorer.

Mike Lally and Mike Picarello led the Sailors' scoring drive and the score remained 6-6 for the rest of regulation time.

The most spectacular play of the night came with a minute left in the game as the Sailors were threatening to score the winning touchdown. With the ball on the Panthers' six, Peter Kelley came out of nowhere to intercept a pass and raced 70 yards deep inside the Sailors' territory. The Panthers drove to the three when time ran out.

In overtime, where each team is given four plays to score from the 10, Tardanico scored for the Panthers but the try for extra points failed.

The Sailors tied on the third play and scored the two winning points on a controversial play as the referee hesitated for several seconds before calling the points good.

During the regular season the Panthers topped the Sailors, 12-0, and the Sailors won their second meeting, 6-2. The teams finished in a top tie with 6-1 records.

Victory Would Ease Winless Pain

For Presidents, It's Their 'Second Season'

By TOM SULLIVAN

The Quincy football team's 'first season' is over without a victory.

The 'second season' comes on the holiday morning when the 0-9 Presidents meet North Quincy in their 55th game at 10 a.m. at Veterans Memorial Stadium.

Quincy is a tremendous underdog against the 5-4 Raiders, but coach Jack Raymer and his troops haven't thrown in the towel by any means.

"I was very pleased with our showing against Somerville and the boys are in the best frame of mind that I've seen them," said Raymer. "The defense was outstanding in that game and, although we failed to score, we moved the ball well."

The Presidents have done little on the ground all season and virtually all of the yardage has come on the passing of Chris Noble and the receiving of Sean Munroe, Ernie Light, Scott Logan and Scott Grant also have been fine receivers.

Noble is 87 for 167 for 1248 yards and nine touchdowns.

Munroe has 45 receptions for eight touchdowns. He also has scored on a reverse.

"We definitely have to do more on the ground and we are concentrating on that," said Raymer. "We know North will be keying on Noble.

"This is the biggest team we will have faced all year and I consider this the best North team since their 1975 Super Bowl team. I was an assistant at North that year and I think this is easily the best team since then.

WIDE RECEIVER Sean Munroe of Quincy is the leading scorer going into the holiday game with nine touchdowns, eight of them on passes from Chris Noble.

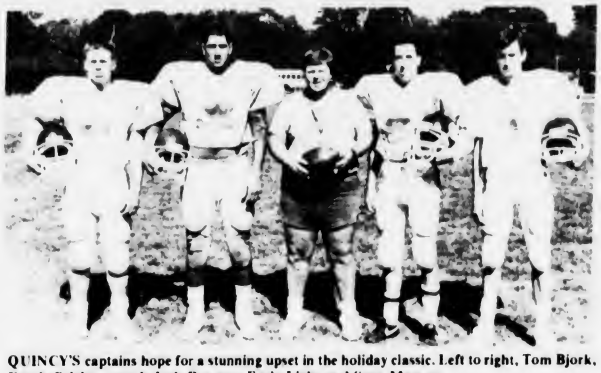
QUARTERBACK Chris Noble of Quincy has had an outstanding season and his passing will be the Presidents' big offensive weapon against North Quincy.

"The boys will just go out there and give it everything they have and I can't ask any more. We will throw everything we have at them and hope for the best."

The Presidents will have an offensive line of Frank Calabro or Logan at one end, Munroe or Grant at the other end, Mike Madden and Brian Norris at tackle, Dave Zupkofska and Kerry Byrne or Paul Kirk at guard and Don Hamilton or Chris Kohler at center.



Noble will be at quarterback with Scott O'Brien and Light at halfback and Peter Olivieri at fullback.

Also set for action on offense are Dave Nourse and Todd Kimmell at halfback, Scott Campbell at quarterback and Marc Miele at wide receiver.

On defense Calabro and Tom Bjork will be at end, Dan Hanley and Norris at tackle, Dave Spencer, Sean Thompson and Craig Keefe linebackers, Todd Kimmell and O'Brien cornerbacks and Jim Kimmell and Jay Dennett or Grant defensive backs.

Quincy hopes to keep North from winning its third straight game in the series. Quincy lost, 24-7, last year and in 1985 it dropped a 7-6 squeaker as a try for the two winning points fell about an inch short.

Winning Season At Stake

Raiders Eye Third Straight Thankgsiving Win

By TOM SULLIVAN

A winning season and a third straight win over Quincy are the goals of the North Quincy football team in the 55th Thanksgiving classic Thursday at 10 a.m. at Veterans Memorial Stadium.

The Raiders come into the big game with some momentum, having successive wins over Waltham, Cambridge Rindge and Latin and Brookline and sporting a 5-4 record.

"I think we are really up for the game," said Coach Ken McPhee. "The kids are playing excellent football and have three good wins behind them going into the game.

"Of our four losses, three were to top clubs in Eastern Massachusetts, Brockton (9-0-0), Malden (8-1-0) and Arlington (8-1-0). It was a shame the kids lost to Newton North on a last-second field goal."

McPhee, who piloted North to a 24-7 win in last year's game, has had the squad working hard on pass defense in preparation for facing Quincy's outstanding passer, Chris Noble.

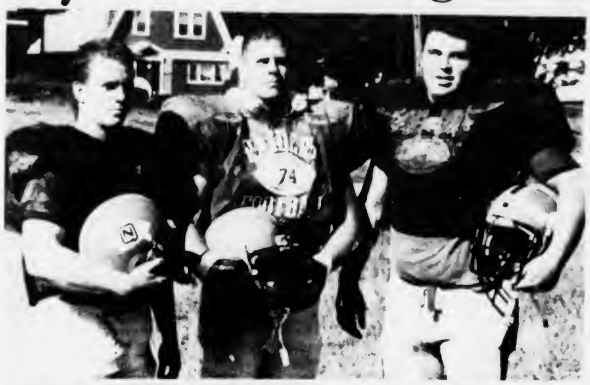
"That kid can really throw the ball and he has some outstanding receivers, particularly (Sean) Munroe," the North coach said. "We were very impressed with Quincy against Somerville.

"Our secondary has been excellent, but will have to be at its very best against Noble. I feel we can stop their running game and we will try to take Noble out of the game. We are one of the biggest teams Quincy has faced and so far they haven't shown too much of a running game.

"We won't do anything differently against them. Joe Mulvey is a good passer but in the last few games we have stuck mainly to the ground and the way we have been running the ball we haven't bothered much with passing. But if we have to pass, we have the boy who can do it and some fine receivers."

North will have a big offensive line of MacDougall and Ainsley at end and Ted Stevenson backing them up, Mike Malloy, who has been outstanding since returning from an injury a few weeks ago, and Tri-Capt. Paul Hogan at tackle, Tri-Capt. Matt McNamara and Dave Joyce at guard and Paul Nimeskern at center.

Mulvey will be at quarterback with Tri-Capt. Paul McCormack and Paul Brown at halfback backed up by Dave Lawless, Keith Gott, Chuck Peck and Steve Shoap, and Craig at fullback.



Craig and McCormack have been outstanding running the ball and Lawless, Gott, only a sophomore; Brown and Shoap have also run well.

Among others who will see service on offense are Dan Steele at guard, Mike Curtin at tackle, Sean McDonough at tight end and Joe D'Angelo and Tim Baker as wide receivers.

The defense, with plenty of size and good speed, will have Shawn Clancy and Shawn Darcy at end backed up by Chris Mendes, McNamara (275) and Hogan (225) at tackle, Ainsley, Craig and Nimeskern as linebackers, Jackie Mullen and Scott Collins cornerbacks and B.J. Sylva, MacDougall, Lawless and Gott defensive backs.

NORTH'S Ryan Craig has had another outstanding season rushing and playing defense and he hopes to wind up the year with a win on the holiday.

BILL MacDOUGALL is one of North's outstanding two-way players, excelling as a wide receiver and as a defensive back.

North Girls Win State Volleyball Title

The amazing North Quincy girls' volleyball team did it!

The Raiderettes, in the state tournament for only the second time, brought down the curtain last Saturday on a phenomenal season when, a point away from defeat, rallied to defeat Stoneham, 3-2, at Waltham to win the state championship.

The North girls, who completed a perfect season (23-0), trailed Stoneham, which has been in the tournament several times, 14-8, in the fifth and deciding game. Stoneham, needing only one point to win the title, never scored again as North rallied for eight straight points and a 16-14 victory.

"I called a time out and told the girls to dog in and stick together and they could come back and win," said an elated coach Jim Rendle. "We had scored seven or eight points in a row before so I knew we could do it. But I thought it would be difficult and I certainly didn't like the odds."

"This was probably our poorest serving match of the season," said a disappointed Stoneham coach John Cody. "Everybody wanted to finish it with an ace and then we just couldn't even finish it. Still, it was a great night of volleyball."

"Barbara Carroll, our setter, ran a good offense throughout the match," said Rendle. "Then Holly Rendle took over and spiked the final three points in the final game to clinch the title. Debbie Panaro and Deirdre Murphy also did a masterful job for us.

"Eileen Campbell, a starter last year, was injured all season long but returned in time for the tournament. She saw limited action but did an excellent job, especially in the fifth and deciding game."

Stoneham took the first game, 16-14, but North won the next two, 15-13, 15-12. The second game was the most exciting until the finale as the lead changed hands five times and the score was tied eight times.

Stoneham's chances looked slim when it quickly fell behind, 5-1, in the fourth game, but it came back for a 15-13 decision, boiling the season down to a one-game, winner-take-all affair.

Prior to the championship match North had lost only two games all season long. The Raiderettes, who won their first Suburban League title with an 18-0 record, lost just two games to Brockton and Boston Latin, sweeping 16 matches in straight games.

In the East Central sectional championships the Raiderettes swept all three matches from Quincy, Boston Latin and Pope John.

North eliminated the Wamps, 15-7, 15-5, 15-10, and Braintree coach Lucy Ciesla said, "they take away your game and play their own."

"We gave nothing away tonight," said Rendle. "As I said before the match, we try to play our style, which is based on being patient and defensive. We don't mind seeing the ball go back and forth over the net a few times.

"We know the opponents will score occasional points but we try to keep the ball in play until an opening presents itself and then we try to go on offense."

North's entire first unit of Murphy, Chris Venezia, Carroll, Jill Caldwell, Panaro and Rendle, turned in an almost flawless performance.

The second unit of Julie Detwiler, Karen Reister, Campbell, Denise Marnell, Robin Guilfoy, Angela Venezia and Tresa Gray, rated as strong as several schools' first units, did an excellent job all season.

Rendle, a former three-letter winner at Quincy High and a fine football player at the University of Massachusetts, got interested in volleyball when he was physical director at the Quincy YMCA.

He took over the North reins in 1985 after a 3-15 season. His first team went 10-7 and missed qualifying for the tournament by just one game. Last year the Raiderettes were 13-5, made the tourney for the first time and went to the sectional finals before losing to Quincy. North shocked Braintree and top-seeded Durfee to make the finals.

With only two players graduating, the junior varsity also going undefeated at 18-0 and the freshmen having a fine 6-1 season, things look particularly bright for the Raiderettes' future.

North continued the City of Quincy's domination in volleyball. The Quincy girls have won three state crowns and appeared in five of the last seven state finals.

Title Game On Ch. 52 Dec. 1

North Quincy's state championship volleyball victory over Stoneham will be televised on Dec. 1 at 7 p.m. on Ch. 52, coach Jim Rendle has announced.

"This was one of the most exciting sporting events of the season and we hope a lot of people will be able to watch it on TV and enjoy all the excitement," Rendle said.

Central Observes Holiday With Assembly

Central Middle School observed Thanksgiving with an assembly.

Erica Trabucco was the mistress of ceremonies. She commented on America's celebration with football, food and family, and stressed the need to quietly assess one's blessings on that special Thursday.

The Morning Chorus under the direction of Miss Susan Aborn sang "America" with slides which reflected the lyrics. Slides were selected and shown by Miss Mary Catherine Iannoni. Mrs. Catherine Carnabuci accompanied the chorus. David Ziolowski sang "All Good Gifts" from the musical "Godspell."

The band played "Strike Up The Band," "The Thunderer," and "The National Anthem March."

Louis DiMartinis, principal of the school, spoke to the students about the holiday and their responsibilities to themselves and their immediate families.

PRAYER OF APPLICATION TO THE HOLY SPIRIT

Holy Spirit, you who solve all problems, who light all roads so that I can attain my goal, you who give me the divine gift to forgive and forget all evil against me and who in all instances of my life are with me, I want in this short prayer to thank you for all things and to confirm once again that I never want to be separated from you and even in spite of all material illusion I wish to be with you in eternal glory. Thank you for your mercy toward me and mine. Repeat this prayer 3 consecutive days. After 3 days the favor will be granted even though it may appear difficult. This prayer must be published immediately after favor is granted without mentioning the favor.

Dr. Ricci Recommends:

Point, Sterling Schools Merge

By NANCY McLAUGHLIN

School Supt. Dr. Robert Ricci was scheduled to recommend to the School Committee at a meeting last night (Wednesday) at 7:30 p.m. that the Quincy Point and Sterling Middle Schools be consolidated next year to equalize middle school offerings.

That would mean that students, teachers and staff of Quincy Point Middle School would go instead to Sterling Middle School in South Quincy.

Students who live one and three quarter miles from Sterling would be provided transportation at school system expense.

The School Committee would have to approve the recommendation before it goes into effect.

"I feel terrible about the recommendation," said City Councillor Theodore DeCristofaro, in whose ward Point Middle School is located.

DeCristofaro, who planned to attend the School Committee meeting, said he met last week to discuss the matter with Dr. Ricci.

"Absolutely all the things he thought were positive, I thought were negative," said DeCristofaro.

According to Dr. Ricci's recommendation, the consolidation would eventually establish a school population of over 400 students.

"Such an enrollment will permit Quincy educators to develop an outstanding middle school designed for the adolescent, staffed by teachers who want to be there, and capable of offering to its students all of the programs essential to a true middle school," stated Dr Ricci in his 10-page report.

Dr. Ricci stated that benefits of the consolidation would be:

- Full implementation of interdisciplinary organization at Sterling Middle School.
- The utilization of allied arts staff, art, music, home economics and industrial arts teachers to provide a broader based, hands-on learning and skills programs for students.
- Development of a comprehensive health, physical education program appropriate to the needs of the emerging adolescent.
- Introduction of a formalized foreign language instruction program.
- Expansion of writing programs by assigning two instructors across four middle schools to work closely with regular classroom teachers to

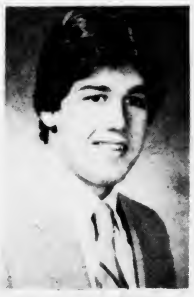
Stunned Community In Tearful Farewell To 3 Young Friends

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

A still stunned and saddened community bid a tearful farewell Monday to three young lifelong friends who were killed in a two-car crash early Thanksgiving morning in Wollaston.



Successive funeral Masses for Richard A. Miller Jr., William P. Marston and Timothy F. Tobin, all 22 of Quincy, were celebrated Monday morning at St. John's Church, Quincy Center.

Matthew Tobin, also 22, severely injured in the same vehicle, was listed in poor condition and on the danger list in the intensive care unit at Quincy City Hospital Tuesday morning, a hospital spokesman said.

Timothy Tobin, the driver of one of the cars involved in the accident, was the son of Quincy Police Officer and Mrs. Timothy G. Tobin. Matthew Tobin, cousin of Timothy Tobin, is the son of Quincy District Court Clerk Magistrate and Mrs. Arthur Tobin. Tobin is a former Quincy mayor.

Grieving family members and friends filled St. John's Church for the three funeral Masses.

The Rev. Daniel Graham, associate pastor at St. John's, celebrated the Masses for Richard Miller and William Marston. The Rev. William

Council Recount Continues

Gillis Tells Iacobucci To Go To Court

A recount of the ballots in the councillor at large race is scheduled to resume today (Thursday) at 9 a.m. in the second floor conference room at City Hall Annex, according to City Clerk John Gillis.

The recount, which began Nov. 23, was requested by Ronald Iacobucci who lost the third spot in that contest to Timothy Cahill by 217 votes.

Ballots in four precincts of Ward 3 were counted by election workers for four hours the first day, but that part of the process was called off when it resulted in only one change, a vote to Cahill.

After that, Iacobucci requested that the Board of Registrars check such things as cancellations on ballots and the number of envelopes which accompany ballots before recessing for the holiday.

Iacobucci said that 518 ballots had not been cancelled.

After voters turn in their ballots, they are generally cancelled as they go in the box at polling places.

Gillis attributed the uncancelled ballots to human error, and said it doesn't matter as long as the ballots were counted.

When Iacobucci requested Monday to recount ballots he had protested earlier because of questionable markings, Gillis consulted with John Cloonan who is in charge of elections for the Commonwealth.

Cloonan said the protested ballots could only be recounted when the ward from which they came was being counted, according to Gillis.

Gillis said 23 or 24 election workers will be hired for Thursday, at a cost of $1800 to $1900 to the city.

"If Ron Iacobucci thinks something is wrong with the election, he should go to Superior Court," said Gillis.

Permits Required For Overnight Parking On Street

Parking permits are required for overnight parking on city streets.

Capt. Fred Laracy of the Quincy Police Department explained, "Those issued parking permits for all night parking are allowed to park 1 a.m. to 5 a.m. on the odd numbered side of the street without being towed."

The city's odd-even parking ordinance calls for parking on the odd-numbered side of the street during odd numbered years, such as 1987, and on the even-numbered side of the street during even numbered years, such as 1988, for those with permits.

Those without permits are not allowed to park on the street overnight, Laracy said.

"During a declared snow emergency, no parking is allowed on city streets whether the resident has a parking permit or not," added Laracy.

Residents may apply to the Traffic Division of Quincy Police for parking permits by showing they do not have proper off-street parking, he said.

For example, said Laracy if there are seven people with seven cars in a two-family house, they probably don't have enough off-street parking.

Cost of the permit is $2, Laracy noted.

Teacher AIDS Report Policy To Be Dropped

By NANCY McLAUGHLIN

School Supt. Dr. Robert Ricci was scheduled to recommend to the School Committee last night (Wednesday) that it drop the requirement that staff members with AIDS or clinical evidence of HIV infection report their condition to the superintendent.

The action at the School Committee meeting was scheduled after Atty. Gen. James Shannon threatened to proceed with legal action if the policy was not rescinded by Thursday, Dec. 10.

The School Committee policy had been adopted in March, 1986. No case of AIDS was reported.

In a letter hand delivered to Mayor Francis McCauley Monday, Shannon said the policy not only violates the right to privacy as protected under state law, it also discriminates against employees on the basis of a handicap which is proscribed under state and federal law.

He noted that while similar policies had been adopted by the Boston School Department and the Cambridge School Committee during 1985-1986, they rescinded their policies at the urging of the Massachusetts Commission Against Discrimination.

"...Presumably, the Quincy School Committee adopted this policy to protect students and co-workers from contracting AIDS (Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome). There is no connection between this laudable goal and the policy you have implemented," Shannon said.

"Studies of the transmission of the AIDS virus establish that none of the identified cases of AIDS infection in the United States have been transmitted in school, day-care or foster care settings, or through normal workplace contacts," stated Shannon.

Shannon also said that the policy interferes with efforts of public health officials to prevent the spread of AIDS.

"Success in those efforts depends upon the willingness of people who believe they have been infected to volunteer for testing and seek treatment and counseling, something they are unlikely to do if they are forced to disclose their test result or diagnosis to their employers."

In the letter, Shannon said the Massachusetts Commission Against Discrimination has attempted since October, 1986, to persuade the Quincy School Committee to withdraw its policy, but it has refused.

Mayor McCauley said the MCAD spoke to him about the matter last May, and he suggested that the commission discuss it with the School Committee, but instead it went to the attorney general's office.

"They could have been on the agenda by the second meeting in June," said McCauley.

Ricci said he didn't think the School Committee would vote on the matter until the Dec. 16 meeting.

He said he would write to the attorney general and request an extension of the Dec. 10 deadline.

The superintendent noted that the policy applies not only to teachers but also to other School Department employees such as food service workers.

Employees would still be encouraged to discuss their condition with the superintendent if they contracted AIDS, he explained.

Cases where actual health hazards were observed in the workplace, such as a person with open sores, would be discussed with the employee, Ricci added.

Asked how he feels about the policy change, Dr. Ricci replied, "I'm never comfortable with this issue. No one is.

"But comply we will. We will follow the law."

North Quincy Fire Believed Set By Vandals

A fire Sunday afternoon on a rear porch of a home in North Quincy caused an estimated $2,000 damage, according to Fire Chief Carl Valenti.

He said the fire at 109 Billings St. appears to have been started by vandals.

The wood frame house is owned by James Wisniewski, according to Valenti. No one was home at the time, he said.

The fire department was at the scene for about 20 minutes, according to Valenti, and there were no reported iniuries.

Acting Dep. John DiPietro was in charge, Valenti said.

Editorial
A City Mourns

Thanksgiving Day just wasn't the same to anyone who heard the news of the tragedy earlier that morning.

Three young Quincy men dead in a two-car collision and a fourth severely injured and left clinging to life. All four just 22 years old.

The incident stunned and saddened an entire city and has dampened the traditional joy of the Christmas holiday season.

Four life-long friends. Four good kids from good families.

Then three funeral Masses Monday, one after the other at St. John's Church.

Why, we ask? Why does something like this happen?

There is no real answer.

"Never is death so mysterious as when it touches a young person," said Fr. William McCarthy, pastor, at the funeral Mass for Timothy F. Tobin.

"One of the things which many find hard to reconcile with the goodness of God is the death of a mere child or a young man or young woman."

Fr. Daniel Graham at Masses earlier for William P. Marston and Richard A. Miller, Jr., said:

"There are many things that happen to us in life for which we can find no answer. Experiences we cannot understand baffle us. There seems sometimes to be no reason or purpose in what has taken place."

The mother of one of the four said simply:

"God must have needed three wonderful young boys in a hurry."

The families are strong in their religion and it will carry them through this ordeal though the pain will be there for a long, long time.

Quincy's heart went out to the families. The long, long lines outside the funeral homes despite the raw weather Saturday night and Sunday afternoon and night will not soon be forgotten. Nor the throngs and the tears at the funeral Masses Monday.

Every parent with a young son or daughter, every grandparent, every brother, every sister in Quincy -- every member of every family -- felt this loss.

Their hearts ache along with those of the Marston, Miller and Tobin families.

For a few days Quincy has been a city united in grief.

It would be wonderful if Quincy could be as united in hope and community spirit and understanding of one another in the days, weeks and years to come. That would truly be a nice way to remember these young men.

Their deaths should remind us that life is short whether you live to be 22 or 102. It's not the years that really count. It's what you do with those years.

They made their's count. They did many good things for their families, church and community in those brief 22 years.

Perhaps we should ask ourselves what will we do and accomplish in the years allotted to us?

10 Years Changes Alliance

Ten years can make a big difference in just about anything but especially politics.

In 1977, Joseph LaRaia was elected mayor in a bitterly fought campaign with incumbent Walter Hannon by a recount margin of 483 votes.

LaRAIA

That was a narrow victory considering two years later LaRaia would be ousted by Arthur Tobin by more than 5,000 votes.

McCAULEY

LaRaia's close win was attributed by some observers to a coalition of followers of LaRaia, Francis McCauley and Paul Harold.

McCauley and Harold were friendly with LaRaia and helped get him elected. They saw a chance for a change after the James McIntyre dominated years at City Hall. Hannon was supported by the McIntyre camp.

While some referred to the LaRaia-McCauley-Harold alliance as a coalition, others likened them to The Three Musketeers.

HAROLD

But in 10 years, all that has changed.

This year, LaRaia challenged McCauley for the mayor's office in a cliff-hanger that went to McCauley by 460 votes. This time on a partial recount.

LaRaia and McCauley began drifting apart politically and philosophically a couple of years ago and it soon became evident that they were on a mayoral collision course.

TOBIN

This year, as he has in the past, Harold endorsed McCauley for mayor. This was the third time (McCauley was unopposed for his second term) Harold, a Democrat, endorsed McCauley, a Republican.

LaRaia, who is a Democrat, feels that if a Democrat is going to endorse any candidate it should be a fellow Democrat. LaRaia also ran as a Democrat.

Harold counters that Quincy municipal elections are non-partisan and that he endorses the candidate not the party.

It was a close win by McCauley and in close elections every bit counts. The Harold endorsement of McCauley was a bit -- or something bigger -- that counted for McCauley.

LaRaia apparently thinks so.

He now has his sites trained on Harold's Senatorial seat which includes Quincy, Braintree, Holbrook and Avon.

LaRaia says its highly probable he will run for the seat next September. Without a doubt, he would be Harold's biggest threat since he wrested the seat away from Arthur Tobin in 1978.

But there is a difference between running for mayor and running for senator. A mayor gets blamed for everything that goes wrong in his community and for every voter's pet peeve. A state senator is pretty much insulated from that.

Whether LaRaia could defeat Harold only an election would tell for sure.

His biggest threat could be that if he did run he could split the Quincy vote and let a third candidate like someone from Braintree walk in.

It's a long way to next September and a lot of things -- including political plans -- can change.

Meanwhile, Harold, who works full-time and overtime at being a senator, and does his homework, doesn't seem to be too concerned.

"He (LaRaia) would be a formidable candidate but I'm prepared for his or any challenge," he says.

IT LOOKS LIKE somewhat of a woman's world politically next year.

City Councillor Patricia Toland already has enough colleague votes to become City Council president in January.

And her friend, School Committee woman Mary Collins, reportedly has enough votes among her colleagues to be vice chairman of the School Committee in January.

COLLINS

Sudden thought: No woman has every been elected mayor in Quincy's history.

But Toland will get to be the first woman acting mayor when McCauley is out of state anytime during his fourth term.

You can call her "Her Honor."

RETIRED U.S. Army General William Westmoreland obviously was impressed with Quincy and the Vietnam Memorial Clock Tower at Marina Bay where he was the dedication ceremony keynote speaker.

WESTMORELAND

A couple of days later, Quincy's John (Jake) Comer, national commander of the American Legion, met Westmoreland at a black tie affair at the Waldorf Astoria in New York.

Westmoreland and Mrs. Douglas MacArthur, widow of the famed World War II general, were among those being honored by the West Point Society of New York.

Comer got to chatting with Westmoreland and when the latter learned Comer was from Quincy, he said "Oh, that's a fine city. And the Vietnam Memorial is beautiful. You should be very proud of both."

Comer felt 10 feet high.

INCIDENTALLY, although being national commander of the American Legion keeps him hopping around the country and to foreign nations, Comer says: "It's a fun job."

COMER

Comer does not speak from a prepared text. It's mostly off the cuff which amazes aides who ordinarily would be writing the National Commander's material.

When he's on the road making appearances, one of the first things his aides must do if he is going to be in a city or town on a Saturday night or Sunday determine where the nearest Catholic church is to where he is to speak so that he can attend Mass.

That will please his pastor, Fr. Joseph Downey of St. John's Church.

Squantum School Media Center Dedicated In Memory Of Ruth Haggerty

Approximately 200 to 250 people gathered at the Squantum School for the dedication of the school's Media Center in memory of former Principal Ruth L. Haggerty.

"The night went very well," said Fatima Allie, present principal. "We had an excellent crowd to honor Miss Haggerty," she said.

Miss Haggerty, who died Jan. 14, was a teacher and assistant principal at the school from 1957 to 1966 and principal from 1966 to 1985. She also was involved in the planning of the media center.

The dedication ceremony began with a flag salute led by Sarah Radell, Student Council representative followed by the fifth grade chorus singing "America" led by Esther Schutz, music specialist-director. The invocation was given by the Rev. Dr. Eugene Langevin of the First Church of Squantum. Fatima Allie gave the welcome. Greetings were delivered by Dr. Robert Ricci, superintendent of Quincy Public Schools and Mayor Francis X. McCauley.

Dedication speakers were Councillor Patricia Toland and Wilfred A. Nolan, retired director of elementary education of Quincy Public Schools.

The fifth grade chorus entertained the guests again by singing Swinging Along.

Members of the Haggerty family gave a Ruth L. Haggerty memorial entitled, Unveiling.

A poem was read by Dr. Diane Willard, teacher and author. Closing remarks were given by Mr. Eugene Creedon, director of elementary education in Quincy Public Schools. Rev. Robert J. Boyle of Star of the Sea Church gave the benediction.

A PICTURE AND PLAQUE dedicated to the memory of Ruth L. Haggerty, former principal of Squantum Elementary School who died Jan. 14, is admired by, from left, Kristin Fluhr, a fourth grader; Fatima Allie, present principal of Squantum Elementary School; David Doherty, third grader; and Wilfred A. Nolan, retired director of elementary education of Quincy public schools.

Miss Haggerty was a 1941 graduate of Milton High School. In 1945 she received a B.S. from Mt. St. Mary and in 1953 a masters of education from Boston State College.

She was an elementary teacher at Snug Harbor from 1953 to 1957.

Miss Haggerty served on the Accreditation Board; chairman of the Scholarship Committee; chairman of the Salary Committee; chairman of the 50th Anniversary Committee; chairman of the 50th Education Conference.

She was a member of the Quincy Education Association since 1953; Massachusetts Teachers Association; National Education Association; Delta Kamma Gamma; South Shore Elementary Principals Association; Massachusetts Elementary Principals Association.

Miss Haggerty also served in Milton on United Fund; Cerebral Palsy; Cancer Fund; March of Dimes and Art Association.

The dedication committee members were: Fatima Allie, chairwoman; Emily Blampied, Judith Brams, Lois Brandes, Warren Lewis, Denise Mulcahy, Barbara Radell and Mary White.

On The COLA Increase

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

We are regularly being informed, particularly by candidates seeking election to public office, that the expected COLA Increase of 4.2 percent will not be reduced and or eliminated.

I fail to see, however, any emphasis on the HCFA announcement that the Part B premium paid by Social Security recipients will rise by 38.5 percent...the highest single increase in Medicare's 22-year-old history!

This premium, now $17.90 per month will jump to $24.80. A recent letter from AARP pegs the 4.2 percent COLA as granting a $21 average overall increase to recipients.

It is glaringly obvious that a 4.2 percent increase will not cover the premium for "Part B" a coverage that no Senior Citizen should be without.

Equal emphasis on the picture as a whole including the fact that most seniors wisely purchase "back-up" insurance to fill the holes in just "Part B" coverage might reduce the criticism aimed by those "Conservatives" who claim that beneficiaries are living "high-on-the-hog" compared to the average citizens. Add the estimated 4 percent of income spent on out-of-pocket costs of medicines experienced by most senior citizens then a more honest evaluation of the situation is obtained.

Youngster's Body Found In Quarry

Dec. 2-8, 1952

35 Years Ago

The body of 4-year-old Robert (Danny) Matson, missing for 23 months, was found in Field and Wilde Quarry, about 1,200 feet from his home at 70 Cranch St. where he vanished while playing on the afternoon of Jan. 19, 1951.

His death was ruled accidental drowning.

The body was found on a ledge about 70 feet from the top of the 100-foot deep quarry hole after much of the water had been drained out at the insistence of Acting Police Chief William Ferrazzi.

Location of the boy's body was said to have been revealed by Lady Wonder, a psychic horse in Richmond Va., whose response to questions "Pittsfield Water Wheel" was interpreted to mean the water-filled Field and Wilde granite pit.

The role of Lady Wonder in the case was kept secret, said Ferrazzi, because "everyone would think we were crazy."

PARKING MEANS BUSINESS

City Manager William J. Deegan Jr. told a parking clinic in Salem that Quincy jumped from 15th to 4th city in Massachusetts in per capital retail sales in three years following completion of the west side municipal parking area.

Deegan's report that retail sales were dropping in cities where off-street parking had been neglected also was heard with interest at the clinic, sponsored jointly by the Salem and U.S. Chambers of Commerce.

In an unrelated move, the City Council passed a resolution, introduced by Councillor Alfred G. Helfrich urging the city "to embark on an extended east side parking project to be financed by revenue bonds."

Easy Bake Anisette Cake

Compliments Of Brother John

In some of my columns, I have spoken about my brother John and what a great cook he is. Now he has come up with a great anisette cake so easy to make and a great cake for the holidays, although John bakes it for all occasions. And it is all done in one quick swoop as you will see.

JOHN'S EASY BAKE ANISETTE CAKE

1 stick margerine (or butter)
3 cups of flour
1 cup sugar
1 egg
1 cup milk
1 Tbsp baking powder
1 shot of anisette

John uses his food processor, but you can also use a mixer. Put all the ingredients in one bowl altogether and beat until blended. Put in a slightly greased cake pan and bake in a 350 degree oven for about 35 minutes. Let cool. This will keep for days and it is delicious with morning coffee, if there is any left over.

Marie D'Olimpio is the author of "Simply Italian-And Then Some," a collection of her own recipes. Copies of the book are available at That's Italian, Franklin St., South Quincy; Previte's Market, Sumner St., Quincy Point , Samoset Pharmacy, Samoset Ave., Merrymount and Winfield Gift Emporium, Hancock St., Quincy Center.

Quincy VNA Begins Computerized Medical Records

The Quincy Visiting Nurse Association, Inc in conjunction with National Home Care Week (now through Dec. 5) has announced the introduction of portable laptop computers that will be used to record patients' medical information.

Stephen Robbins, executive director, said the Quincy VNA is participating as a pilot agency in this program developed by CCA Information Systems, Inc. in Canton.

The program will provide a uniform data base, systematically match clinical and financial information and establish internal controls of data required by Medicare and other insurers.

Ultimately, it will reduce the amount of paperwork and allow the nurses and rehabilitation therapists more time with their patients. Staff members look forward to this innovative and challenging opportunity. It is the first of the kind in the South Shore, and only the third in the state.

This will become operational next June.

Is Shoplifting Really Stealing?

Don't most shoplifters "Get away with it?" Not anymore. Today stores have surveillance systems. Some stores have uniformed security guards others have plainclothes store detectives. Almost everyday in Quincy someone is arrested for shoplifting, sometimes two or three arrests are made each day. The store owners of Quincy are doing something about shoplifting. They are having shoplifters arrested and prosecuted.

A police record for shoplifting is serious! Even if there is no jail term or fine, a police record can keep shoplifters out of many professions and can harm their chances of getting into the military or college or finding a good job.

Sometimes kids do it because they think it's fun, or try it on a dare when they're with a group of kids who start talking and fooling around. Has that ever happened to you? If it did, what would you do? Shoplifting is taking something without paying for it - but you really do pay for it eventually.

Storekeepers have to pay for what they sell, and they have to add in the cost of anything that's stolen. Since we all have to buy things from stores, we all pay the extra cost of stolen items.

So, what can you do?

Well, if you're with some kids who want to try shoplifting, you can tell them that you don't want to and it's not really getting something for nothing. If you ever see anybody in a store take something without paying for it, you can quietly tell a salesperson or cashier and they will see if there's a problem.

You might have to think about this for a while, but what you pay because of shoplifting can be much more than a nickel on a candy bar. If you want to buy a radio, for instance, the store keeper might have to charge $5 or $10 more if he has to cover losses from shoplifting.

Shoplifting is stealing, and you can help stop it and keep prices down - and that's really a good deal!

Voter Eligibility Hearing To Be Held After Council At-Large Recount

The Board of Registrars will hold a public hearing on the eligibility of Patriot Ledger publisher K. Prescott Low to be registered as a voter at 13 Temple St., Quincy, after a recount of the councillor at large race is completed, City Clerk John Gillis said.

The hearing was requested by City Councillor Joseph LaRaia who lost the mayor's race to incumbent Francis McCauley by 462 votes. He gained 11 votes after a recount.

LaRaia questioned the eligibility of Low to be registered as a voter of ward Two, Precinct Seven, Quincy.

In a letter to the registrars, LaRaia stated, "The address of 13 Temple St. is a business C location and does not constitute a place of residency which is required for registered voters in the city of Quincy.

"I am prepared to supply you with the statutes and other questions of law when the board convenes for this hearing.

"...The aforementioned is a Cohasset resident and to the best of my knowledge is not a registered voter there."

Gillis, chairman of the Board of Registrars, said that any citizen has the right to question a voter's eligibility.

He said that in order to be registered to vote in Quincy, an individual must register his or her car here, pay excise tax to the city and not be registered to vote in any other city or town.

The hearing will be held in the Council Chambers at City Hall, according to Gillis, and he and the three other registrars will vote on the matter.

The last such hearing was held when candidate John Walsh questioned the eligibility of Richard Koch Jr. to serve on the City Council after he moved to Brewster.

Quincy Point Fire Causes $10,000 Damage

A fire at a two-family house in Quincy Point early Sunday caused an estimated $10,000 damage but no injuries were reported.

Fire Chief Carl Valenti said the fire at 8 Cyril St. appears to have been caused by an occupant who fell asleep holding a lit cigarette in a third floor bedroom.

All of the residents of the house owned by Dorothy McLaughlin of 1 Pheasant Lane Run, Hingham, were safely evacuated, Valenti said.

They are Alice Skehan, who lived on the first floor; William Walker, Chris Puines, second floor; and John Grealish, third floor.

The building sustained water and smoke damage, and is unlivable, according to the chief.

All of the residents had to be relocated, Valenti said.

The alarm came in at 3:27 a.m. and all out was sounded at 4:27 a.m., the chief said.

There were five pieces of apparatus at the scene under the direction of Dep. Chief Paul O'Connell, according to Valenti.

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

Benjamin Franklin urged: "Never leave that till tomorrow which you can do today." We've all heard that since childhood. And Ralph Waldo Emerson made the point: "One of the illusions in life is that the present hour is not the critical, decisive hour. Write it on your heart that everyday is the best day of the year. He only is right who owns the day, and no one owns the day who allows it to be invaded by worry, fret and anxiety. Finish every day and be done with it. You have done what you could."

Remember the sad and unforgettable song by John Lennon and Paul McCartney which expressed the tragic lament of many who live in yesterday instead of learning from it: "Yesterday all my troubles seemed so far away ... Now it looks as though they're here to stay ... OH, I believe in yesterday." And the conclusion of the song is: "Now I need a place to hide away; Oh, I believe in yesterday."

But, yesterday's gone and there is no real hiding place from today. Now is the day, the hour! There is little we can do about yesterday and tomorrow is uncertain, but today is vital and is all we can really "deal with" ...

Today is the day! Own today. Get on with those unfinished tasks. DO IT TODAY!

McCarthy, pastor of the church, celebrated the Mass for Timothy Tobin.

Flags in front of city buildings, including City Hall, were flown at half staff Monday in memory of the three friends.

Sen. Paul Harold had the state Senate recess momentarily in memory of the three Quincy residents, all members of St. John's Church.

Fr. McCarthy eulogized Tobin as a courteous young man who "responded most willingly and kindly to any task he was called upon in the parish.

"Nina and Tim Tobin brought a beautiful son into the world. The parish community, and myself in particular, are most grateful to his parents for their great example and their goodness infiltrated into young Timmy," McCarthy said.

Rev. McCarthy told the 300 mourners that "never is death so mysterious as when it touches a young person.

"One of the things which many find hard to reconcile with the goodness of God is the death of a mere child or a young man or woman.

"When death comes to the aged, to those who have lived out their days, we come to accept it with a certain understanding and resignation, or at least, with an absence of rebellion.

"But," Fr. McCarthy continued, "when the young are taken in the flower of their youth, it is most difficult to suppress the embittered protest or staunch the burning tears."

Fr. McCarthy concluded that "We all must believe that Timmy is alive, that his life is not ended, but merely changed.

"His soul now separated from the body has not ceased to exist for an instant, nor will it ever cease to exist for all eternity," Rev. McCarthy said.

Fr. Graham eulogized both Marston and Miller as young men who had "serenity and an inner peace about (them) that was contagious."

Their lives "were short indeed. 22 years is all that they had to give," he said.

Referring to both young men, Fr. Graham said, they were loved by all. "He had to give of all that he was and is to us--his love of people, his many young friends, his love of sports, music, hockey, basketball."

He added that they had a "happy-go-lucky spirit--nothing bothered" them.

Fr. Graham began the eulogy by saying "There are many things that happen to us in life for which we can find no answer. Experiences we cannot understand baffle us.

"There seems sometimes to be no reason or purpose in what has taken place," he added.

"In the dark hour of a great loss, our hearts cry out for an explanation...When a priest stands, as he often does, with a heart-broken family after the sudden death of a young person, he knows that there is one reminder that may prove helpful to those who grieve.

"Beyond this tragic event, an event that defies human explanation, there is a purpose which faith alone can see amid the tears and shadows and which patience will, in time, reveal.

"Let us take this Mass to the innermost thoughts of our heart that death is the celebration of the fullness of life with the Lord--this is our faith--let us pray for the grace to believe in it with all our heart and soul, until we meet again."

The occupants of the other car, Christopher Poole, 26 of North Weymouth, the driver, and Renee Levesque, 18, of Quincy, a passenger, were also injured.

Levesque, who suffered a broken arm and leg, is in good condition at Quincy City Hospital. Poole is recovering at home.

Quincy Traffic Officer Kevin Cook said he believes speed was a factor in the crash on Hancock St. near Elm St. Cook said the pavement was damp and there was a curve in the road, factors that may have contributed to the car driven by Tobin going out of control.

AIDS Worship Service At Point Congregational Church

Quincy Point Congregational Church, 444 Washington St., Quincy, will host a special service of worship for those suffering from, affected by and concerned about AIDS on Sunday, Dec. 6 at 8 p.m., announced the Revs. Fred and Carol Atwood-Lyon, pastors of the church.

The service is believed to be the first of its kind on the South Shore.

Members of the church's youth group have prepared the worship service. The service will be conducted by group members in the church sanctuary.

In recent months, members of the Senior High School Youth Fellowship have participated in a series of discussion programs about human sexuality and the AIDS crisis. Under the direction of seminarian Laura Stein, the group decided that a service of worship would be an appropriate response to those who have died or suffer from or are concerned about AIDS.

The service will include words of welcome and greeting by Miss Stein, a Call to Awareness led by Mike Haysen with response by Mike McInnis, and a reflection from Psalm 31 entitled "We Are Forgotten" by Donna Donley.

Holli Nicholson and Janie Lynn will lead the congregation in a special offering that will benefit the Massachusetts Interfaith AIDS Ministry.

"We Are Afraid and Overwhelmed," a reflection upon Psalm 69, will be led by Bill Jolliemore and George Douglas will read Isaiah 40:1-11 and Mark 1:1-8.

Glen Sherriff will lead the congregation in "We Are Sick and In Need of Healing," a responsive reading reflection Psalm 102. Bill Jolliemore and Glen Sherriff will lead the community and personal prayers, and the Final Blessing will be directed by Rich Jolliemore.

Music for the AIDS service of worship will be under the direction of Herman Weiss, church organist and choir director. For the prelude, offertory and postlude, he will play "Andante" by Mozart, "Prelude In C" by Bach and "Duo" by Couperin respectively.

Congregational hymns include "Our God, Our Help In Ages Past," "Be Thou My Vision," "Comfort, Comfort Ye My People" and "Take My Life, And Let It Be."

The Rev. Katrina Finley, founder and executive director and minister of the Interfaith AIDS Ministry, will preach the evening sermon entitled "Advent and AIDS: Making Preparations."

The Interfaith AIDS Ministry's purpose is to bring AIDS awareness to local congregations and to promote educational and pastoral outreach programs to home health care agencies serving AIDS patients.

Rev. Finley is a member of the Task Team on AIDS with the Council for Mission Outreach and Social Responsibility, United Church of Christ. She is also the IAM representative to the Ecumenical Task Force on AIDS in Massachusetts.

In addition, Rev. Finley is a member of the Anna Howard Shaw Advisory Board at Boston University School of Theology and a member of the Wellesley Congregational Church.

The public is invited to attend and participate. Fellowships and refreshments in the social hall will follow the service.

Several months ago, Quincy Point Congregational Church hosted an open forum concerning the AIDS crisis.

FIFTH GRADERS from the Daniel Webster School jointly held Thanksgiving dinner with members of the Adult Day Services Program at the Salvation Army, Quincy Center. Some of the student's parents also attended. At front, are Margaret Palizzolo and Jim Flaherty. From left, back, are Karie O'Brien, Ben Sharkey and Colleen Griffin.

There were opportunities for persons of all ages, from the youngest to the oldest, to help decorate the church, make Christmas crafts, and try various Christmas treats, including wassail. The 14 craft tables were more than twice as many as were offered last year.

Patti Hurd was the chairwoman of the event, assisted by activity supervisors: Barbara Anderson, Marsha Anderson, Allyson Barnum, Doug Barnum, David Goodkin, Beth Harper, Bruce Harper, Marci Hurd, Midi Hurd, Kate MacRitchie, Ellen Ogilvie, Dana Olson, Pat Olson, Paulette Potter, Karin Reister, Bill Scott, Ruth Swenson, Gail Thornton and Pete Williamson, Marjorie Nielson and Steena Sholte were in charge of the refreshments.

On Sunday morning, both worship services were held in the sanctuary, newly decorated with candles, red ribbons, branches of evergreen, a Chrismon tree, and a beautiful red, white, and green Christmas bouquet.

During the first service, the first candle in the Advent wreath was lighted by Gretchen Bumpus and Susan Scott. During the second service, it was lighted by Amy Harper, assisted by Mark and James Potter, and Gwen Williamson.

The Chancel Choir and the Youth Choir combined to sing "Prepare the Way of the Lord" by William Rowan as the anthem.

Greeters for the morning were Janet Sumner and Drusilla Warnes, the ushers were Tore Wallin and Stewart Scott, and the Fellowship Hour after the service was hosted by Ruth Danforth, Edna Swanson, and Allyson Barnum.

200,000 Turn Out For Christmas Parade

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

The air was chilly and the sky was cloudy but it never rained on Quincy's 36 annual Christmas Parade held Sunday afternoon.

The parade, sponsored by the Quincy Center Business and Professional Association as part of the city's Christmas Festival, attracted over 200,000 spectators of all ages, said parade chairman George White.

The crowd, considerably less than previous years, lined the 2.8 mile parade route from Elm and School Sts. in Quincy Center along Hancock St. to East and West Squantum Sts. at North Quincy High School.

A forecast of inclement weather probably caused the drop in attendance, White said.

The parade, billed as the largest Christmas parade on the East Coast, featured 27 bands, 20 floats and 25 specialty units, including returning favorites and first-time participants.

John P. (Jake) Comer of Quincy, the American Legion National Commander, was grand marshal. It marked the first time ever a local resident was selected for the honor.

A new feature added was "Clowns of America" with a musical van that presented "Send In the Clowns." Also for the first time, clowns walked the entire parade route and occasionally performed magic tricks.

Returning favorites included 32-inch high miniature horses dressed in Christmas attire, the Hallamore Budweiser Clydesdales and Mr. and Mrs. Santa Claus.

Holiday songs were performed by many local high school bands including Quincy, North Quincy, Abington, Holbrook, Marshfield, Milton, Scituate, Plymouth-Carver and North and South Weymouth.

New floats were entered by Abington Savings Bank, Bank of Boston, Students Against Drunk Driving and Carney Hospital.

Bands, floats and specialty units were judged during the parade and winners received awards at North Quincy High School.

Among the winners were:

Band Competition Div. I: East Bridgewater first place; Scituate second; Norton third.

Band Competition Div. II: Agawam first; David Prouty High School second; Abington third.

Band Competition Div. III: Shepherd Hill High School first; Plymouth-Carver Regional second; Southbridge third.

Band Competition Div. IV: Marshfield first; Bedford second. Marshfield will also march in the Cotton Bowl Parade in Dallas on New Year's Day.

Best Float: Woodward School of Quincy. Its entry, "Story Books Bring Alive the Magic of Christmas" won the Father Thomas Tierney Trophy and $1,000.

Second prize and $500 was awarded to the Germantown Yacht Club and its entry, "A Fairy Tale Can Come True At Christmas."

Third place and $300 went to the Koch Club's float, "The Magic and Spirit of Christmas," and fourth place and $200 was presented to the South Shore YMCA for "Dreams of the Night Before Christmas."

Abington Savings Bank won the festival committee trophy for its float, "The Magic of a Disney Christmas," and St. John's Church won the Mayor's Trophy for "Frosty's Magic Christmas."

The South Shore Joeys--Clowns of America won the chairman's trophy in the specialty category.

Also receiving awards were the elementary school poster contest winners and Louis and Tricia Bertucci of Quincy who created this year's parade theme, "The Magic of Christmas."

Other float participants were: Quincy High School, Quincy Bay Race Week, Bernie's Modern Formal, Sen. Paul D. Harold, Parents Without Partners, Cub Scout Pack 14, QCBPA, The Patriot Ledger, Quincy Kiwanis, South Shore Bank and Quincy Junior College.

Specialty units featured included Peter Panda from Childworld, 12 antique cars, Quincy High, North Quincy High beauty queens, Ronald McDonald Motor Home, McDonald train and characters, Hi Wheelers, Scituate safety cars, Toys for

GERMANTOWN YACHT CLUB, which was awarded best float honors last year, took second place this year with its float, "A Fairy Tale Can Come True At Christmas."

Koch Club Christmas Projects Underway

The Koch Club Christmas Charity Committee is preparing for its annual Christmas programs.

In 1948, the Koch Club was founded by the late Richard J. Koch as a recreational organization. The club began its first Christmas charity program in 1957 when they delivered food baskets to needy families in North Quincy. The project quickly expanded and today the committee has provided food baskets, toys, dolls and clothing to those in need.

Thomas P. Koch said the Koch family and Koch club members have pledged to continue the efforts of the late Richard J. Koch to help those less fortunate at Christmas time.

Koch notes that the Christmas projects cannot be accomplished without the assistance of many generous people from Quincy and surrounding communities. The Christmas Charity Committee is seeking new toys, canned goods or non-perishable items or donations to the charity fund.

Ricci Recommends Point, Sterling Consolidate At Latter

incorporate creative writing into the Language Arts curriculum and to develop strategies for correcting developmental writing deficiencies in some students.

• Implementation of a Career Education Program organized in two phases: classroom instruction about professions and occupations planned cooperatively by the counseling staff and the classroom teacher coupled with the introduction of Project Business, a division of Junior Achievement.

• Organization of a system-wide middle school program that would address the needs of at-risk students, including tutorial programs before and after school, project reach-out, and expanded summer school programs.

• Development of a Computer Education program integrated with the ongoing curriculum and supported with appropriate software and equipment.

The report also stated that the consolidation would benefit the Daniel Webster and Lincoln Hancock Schools because of such things as increased space for classrooms as well as early childcare and after school day care programs.

A window replacement program will begin next year at both schools, noted Dr. Ricci.

Other work is also planned at Sterling including study of the auditorium to design a student theater with the potential of developing satellite programs in media and communication that will facilitate a progression to high school programs.

In explaining the need to consolidate a middle school, Dr. Ricci noted problems with low enrollments and reduced staff.

"In Quincy, we have reached that time where it is impossible to state that our five middle schools have equality of offerings," he stated.

"It is apparent that a consolidation of some of our programs is necessary in order to provide a true middle school environment for all our students."

Ricci noted that two Quincy task teams studied the question of middle school consolidations and both recommended combining the programs of Quincy Point and Sterling Middle Schools.

"Furthermore, this issue of the need to consolidate middle school programs stems from a system-wide needs assessment conducted by the superintendent during August, September and October and is a very significant part of the operational plan for the 1988-1989 school year," stated Ricci in the report.

Retired Teachers Want 1979 Pay Raises Now Voted

A number of teachers who have retired or resigned from the Quincy Public Schools think it is unfair they will not receive the 1979 raises that were negotiated but until recently the city had declined to pay.

And representatives of the teachers were scheduled to discuss the matter with the School Committee at its meeting last night (Wednesday) at 7:30 p.m. at Quincy High School.

The city had negotiated to pay the raises in 1979, but did not do so after Proposition 2½ went into effect.

In its recently negotiated contract, the city agreed to pay the raises to teachers who were still in the system, but not those who were working in 1979 but had since retired or resigned.

Dr. Henry Paterson, president of the 325-member Quincy Retired Teachers Association, said he intended to speak at the meeting.

So did Diane Maher of Quincy, who resigned in 1980 after being a Quincy elementary school teacher for seven years.

"In 1979, a contract was negotiated and ratified for the Quincy Public School teachers," explained Mrs. Maher.

"Due to lack of funds, the city was unable to fulfill their end of the contract.

"The teachers 'idealistically' believed that the city would, in good faith, pay the raise of 5 percent to the teachers who fulfilled their end of the contract.

"When the city failed to do so, the issue had to be dealt with legally.

"During this unsettling period, the teachers elected not to strike.

"This ensured a non-disruptive flow of education to our children.

"The teacher's struggle continues today as teachers try to win back what is rightfully theirs.

"It's money that we earned but never got," said Mrs. Maher. "It's very upsetting."

Engineer Says:

Traffic Recommendations Would Cost $12 Million

In his first appearance in the Council Chambers, the city's new traffic engineer updated the City Council's Downtown and Economic Committee on Traffic 2000 recommendations he was hired to implement.

During the hour and half meeting, David Kinnecom said that it would cost $12 million to implement all of the recommendations.

Of that amount, $6.5 million is regarded as high priority by Vanasse Hangen which compiled the report, $4.1 million of which would be improvements in Quincy Center, Kinnecom said.

New traffic signals and improving traffic flows are some of the recommendations for Quincy Center from Adams St. to Granite St., he said.

A pedestrian walkway has also been suggested for Burgin Parkway.

Kinnecom noted that Vanasse-Hangen which compiled the report; $4.1 million of which would be improvements in Quincy Center, Kinnecom said.

New traffic signals and improving traffic flows are some of the recommendations for Quincy Center from Adams St. to Granite St., he said.

A pedestrian walkway has also been suggested for Burgin Parkway.

Kinnecom noted that Vanasse-Hangen had suggested that Hancock St. between City Hall and First Parish Church be changed to two-way traffic.

"But I can't say that is the way it will turn out," said Kinnecom, who was joined by other city councillors in expressing doubts about the change which would reduce already limited parking in the area.

"The city took church land many years ago," said Councillor Theodore DeCristofaro. "It's not proper to take what is left."

Kinnecom also discussed proposals to construct raised islands along the length of Southern Artery broken only by signalized intersections.

"It would be difficult to implement," said Kinnecom "It would affect businesses."

He said the biggest priority in North Quincy is Newport Ave. and Hancock St.

Councillor Thomas Nutley said the amount of money proposed for North Quincy improvements was "distressing."

"It's almost as though they forgot North Quincy," said Nutley. "The north end of the city has the greatest safety problems and I have the statistics to back it up."

A local resident, Clifford Pamplin of Riverside Ave. complained about left hand turns from some businesses on Southern Artery.

"We need right hand turns only in major areas of the city," said Pamplin.

Kinnecom said he would consider the suggestion.

"Quincy 2000 is not the be all and end all," said Kinnecom.

He said he was also working on the impacts of Planned Unit Development Projects, traffic problems throughout the city, and taking a complete look at the accident problems throughout the city as the police computerize such records.

Kinnecom said a public hearing will be held before recommendations are implemented.

Why You Can Never Tell In This Game

By TOM SULLIVAN

Many people thought it would be a blowout for North Quincy's football team and a third straight win over Quincy.

After all, the Raiders went into the 55th Thanksgiving Day classic with three straight impressive wins in which they outscored the opposition, 94-40. They had a 5-4 record and three of the losses were to top Division 1 teams, No. 1 Brockton (10-0), Malden (9-1) and Arlington (9-1).

Meanwhile, the Presidents brought an 0-9 record into the game and had been outscored, 326-102. Their best performance had been in their last game, a 16-0 loss to Somerville.

But, as has happened so many times in the series, Quincy didn't go by the script and scored with just one second left on the clock to tie the heavily-favored Raiders, 14-14.

"This is just great and I'm so happy for the kids," said Quincy coach Jack Raymer. "The defense was fabulous and neither North touchdown was scored against the defense. Tag (defensive coach John Taglieri) really had them up for this one. This was a much different team the past two games and this is really like a win for us."

"This is a tough one to take," said a disappointed North coach Ken McPhee. "But give Quincy all the credit in the world, they played a terrific game and their defense was just outstanding. I'm happy for Jackie (Raymer). We are good friends and I felt bad for him throughout the season. We coaches and the players are a little bit down now, but we'll bounce back and look back on a successful season."

Neither team was able to move consistently on the ground as the usually potent North attack was held to 104 yards on the ground, while Quincy, which hasn't been able to move on the ground all year, had 74 yards rushing.

Junior quarterback Chris Noble, who had an outstanding year passing for Quincy, came back from a bad first half to complete 12 of 23 passes for 167 yards and both touchdowns. Wide receiver Sean Munroe had five receptions for 119 yards and both scores.

Noble completed the season with 99 for 190 for 1415 yards and 11 touchdowns, while Munroe had 50 receptions for 10 touchdowns. He also had a touchdown rushing to lead both teams in scoring with 70 points.

Noble was also Quincy's rushing leader with 30 yards. Scott O'Brien had 19. The leading rusher for the game was North's Paul McCormack with 56 yards, while Ryan Craig ran for 35 and Dave Lawless for 27. Quarterback Joe Mulvey was six for 14 for 64 yards.

North intercepted four of Noble's passes, Lawless having two, Matt McNamara one (he ran it back for a touchdown) and Craig one.

Quincy had 14 first downs to North's 11.

"I can't say enough for the defense, it was just awesome," said Taglieri. "Sean Thompson was particularly outstanding and Tom Bjork also had a great game. Dave Spencer, O'Brien, Todd and Jim Kimmel, Steve Slicis, Frank Ienello, Brian Norris, Dan Hanley, Frank Calabro, Jay Dennett, Scott Grant, who had a big game both ways, and Neal Plant all were just terrific. I'm so happy for them, they had a tough season but put it all together today."

"People laughed when I said I was worried about Quincy, but now you can see why I was," said McPhee. "With a great passer like Noble and a receiver like Munroe, you have to be on your toes all the time. I didn't think they could stop our offense the way they did."

Quincy's secondary played well and Grant and Jim Kimmell came up with big plays as they knocked down passes just as North receivers were ready to make the catches.

McPhee had good words for Mulvey, McCormack, Lawless, Craig, Mike Ainsley, Shawn Clancy, Shawn Darcy, Jackie Mullen and Scott Collins.

A mistake by Noble put Quincy in the hole early. North kicked off to open the game and Quincy picked up a first down and moved to its 41. However, Noble was sacked and tried to get a pass off while going down. The 275-pound McNamara picked it off and rambled 30 yards for the score. A pass for the two-point conversion was no good but Quincy was offside and Craig then rushed for the points.

There was no further scoring in the first half as both defenses dug in. Quincy did move to the North 32 but Lawless picked off a long Noble pass on the three-yard line. The Presidents held fast and took over on the Raider 37 after a short punt. They drove all the way to North's 11 as O'Brien and Noble did the rushing. A 15-yard run by Noble brought the ball to the 11 as Munroe came up with a key block. Quincy's threat went by the boards as Craig intercepted a pass on the 20.

North began a drive with Mulvey hitting Billy MacDougall for 19 yards and Lawless rushing for 20, but a Mulvey pass was dropped with the receiver in the clear and Lawless was forced to punt.

The Raiders held and then picked up three first downs as they drove to the Quincy 22, but the Presidents dug in and took over as the half ended with North still leading, 8-0.

North was again forced to punt after taking the second half kickoff but Noble fumbled as he was hit hard and North recovered on the Quincy 33.

After getting a first down on the 23, North was held as the Presidents took over on their 16. After a three-yard gain by Ernie Light, Noble hit Munroe with a perfect pass and Munroe raced about 75 yards down the left sidelines to complete a spectacular 81-yard scoring play. Jim Dennett rushed for the two tying points.

North came right back on the ensuing kickoff as McCormack took the ball on the three, shook off several defenders and raced 97 yards for a touchdown. It was the longest kickoff return in the long series. A pass for the points was incomplete.

Another interception by Lawless on his own 23 stopped another promising Quincy drive.

Here the Presidents came through with great defense. The big play came on fourth down when Spencer, Slicis and Ienallo broke through to sack Mulvey for a big 15-yard loss and Quincy had the ball on its 26.

Prior to that, Mulvey handed off to Lawless, who passed back to Mulvey for an apparent score, but the Raiders were called for illegal procedure.

Noble hit Munroe for a 29-yard gain to North's 42 with 1:39 left to play. Noble picked up five and passed to Grant for 10 yards and a first down on the 27. With 13 seconds left Noble couldn't find a receiver and ran for nine yards and a first down on the 16.

Noble's pass to Grant was incomplete but North was called for pass interference, giving Quincy a first down on the two. On the first play Noble faked a handoff and found Munroe in the lefthand corner of the end zone for the tying touchdown with one second left. Quincy went for two points but the pass was incomplete.

"I suppose I will be second-guessed for not kicking for the winning point, but we didn't have a kicker, although I had been working on this in preparation for the game. I thought it would be safer to go with the same way we scored the touchdown," said Raymer.

This was only the fifth tie in the series. The others were scoreless ties in 1934, 1937, 1940 and 1983. Quincy has 27 wins and North 23.

M.L. Carr: Don't Be Denied, Don't Give Up

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

As a professional basketball player, M.L. Carr was known as a motivator, a dedicated athlete who persisted and never gave up, regardless of the situation.

Now, two and a half years after hanging up his hightops, Carr has packaged that persistent, never-give-up attitude in a book entitled Don't Be Denied, My Story with Bob Schron.

But the book is much more than a recap of his career highlights as a basketball player, which included six seasons and two NBA championships with the Boston Celtics.

The book, an on-and-off project that took six years to complete, includes chapters on Carr's personal background, family, college ball, religion and business aspirations.

The book's recurring theme, interwoven from beginning to end, is develop yourself to the fullest. Don't be denied of anything.

Carr brought his vibrant and colorful disposition to Quincy recently where he was a guest on WJDA's Party Line program with host Roy Lind.

During the half-hour call-in show, Carr was asked about his book, career and future.

About the book's message, Carr said, "I talk about the knocks in life, period. Being told 'No' you're not good enough.

"Basically, the book is about persistence, not giving up. Take an introspective view of oneself, understand exactly what your potentials are and don't be denied your opportunities, no matter what they are," he said.

As an example of his motivational and inspirational pitch, Carr explained the common basketball scenario of a player at the free throw line.

"There are 50 million people watching that player at that particular point. No one can help him. He's on his own and many times in life you feel like that.

"But realistically, you're not on your own because somewhere along the line you've seen other people standing in that same position.

"The thing to do under those pressure situations," said Carr, "is to relax, regroup, develop that game plan and really focus on what you plan to do."

In addition to his philosophy of persistence, Carr talks about his days as a basketball player in Israel, as a member of the Detroit Pistons and the transactions that brought him to Boston in 1979.

As can be expected, he devotes several chapters to his experiences as a Celtic, including the championship seasons of 1981 and 1984.

Carr, who retired after the 1984-85 season, also discusses his last year as a professional player with the Celtics. There is even a chapter about the fans of the NBA cities. Carr rates several cities and calls Chicago Bull fans the worst. He also calls the Los Angeles Laker fans fickle and New York Knick fans frustrated.

The last few chapters of the 200 page book, which had an initial press run of 25,000 copies, deal with fatherhood, business and a "game plan." In the last chapter, Carr writes "I will continue to dream, but I will never stop working to make my dreams become a reality. If my world starts to crumble, I will focus on the positives and will not give up."

Another interesting topic concerns Carr's relationship with his father and the trouble he had expressing his love for him.

"The toughest thing for me, and maybe for a lot of other young people, is to get to the point that you feel comfortable in passing the emotions back and forth between parent and child.

"I had a tough time with that. It was my junior year in college before I could even tell my parents that I loved them.

"I resent the fact," Carr continued. "It should have been earlier because I have loving parents," he said.

Other topics discussed in the book include Celtic President Red Auerbach's influence and impact and Carr's proudest moment as a NBA player.

That was when Carr, who had been an inspirational leader throughout the 1984 NBA season and playoffs, watched the final seconds of the clock tick down in game 7 of the championship series against the Los Angeles Lakers. For the second time in his career, Carr had reached the top of the basketball world.

But this championship was a bit sweeter for Carr, since the Lakers were favored by many people to beat the Celtics.

"We were told by many people that we could not stay with the thoroughbreds, Lakers, and somewhere along the line we were not denied of our opportunities," Carr said.

Carr, a proven winner on and off the basketball court, tries to pass along that desire to succeed in his book Don't Be Denied. Carr emphasizes that you don't have to be a Larry Bird to be a winner.

Instead, Carr says people should understand their limits and potential and exercise that potential to the fullest.

Number 30 summed it up best by saying: "There are no losers out there, just winners who haven't won yet."

Quincy Girls Complete Sucessful Swim Season

The Quincy girls' swim team recently completed its most successful season in some time with a 5-7 record.

In the Suburban League championships, Rene Gaura finished fifth in the diving competition, Cindy Galman took fourth in the 500-yard freestyle (6:25.60) and eighth in the 200 freestyle (2:24.23).

During the year senior Janet Morrell established a new school record of 1:19.57 in the 100 backstroke and senior Gaura set a school record with 186.80 points in diving.

A 5-7 record is not all that impressive, but when Janet Keyes took over as coach four years ago the girls' swimming program was on the verge of extinction with only six freshman swimmers and a history of nearly winless seasons.

"Hopefully the foundation built in the last few years will help lead the Quincy girls to even greater achievements next year," said Keyes.

McCauley:

Braintree Better Truck Route For MWRA Staging Area

Massachusetts Water Resources Authority representatives and Quincy officials made a bus tour recently of proposed truck routes through the city to the Quincy Shipyard.

Purpose of the trip was to point out problems with the proposed route by which trucks will travel to and from the shipyard which is to be used as a staging area for the Deer Island sewage treatment plant.

The materials will then be barged to the $1 billion Deer Island plant.

"We made our point," said Mayor Francis McCauley who initiated the tour. "Whether or not it will help, we'll have to wait and see."

The proposed route would have trucks exit Route 3 to Burgin Parkway, turn onto Water St., left on Franklin St., right on School St. and right at Quincy Ave. to the shipyard.

"It doesn't make that much sense," said McCauley, who noted that the route goes through heavily trafficked streets such as School St. where St. John's Church has as many as three funerals a day.

Also making the 45 minute trip were Public Works Commr. Paul Anderson, Ward 2 Councillor Theodore DeCristofaro, Ron Mariano, representing Rep. Robert Cerasoli, and David Kinnecom, the city's traffic engineer.

McCauley said he pointed out a better route in Braintree.

That route goes from Route 3 to Union St., Weymouth landing and left onto Quincy Ave. and leads to the shipyard, he said.

"Union St. is very wide," said McCauley. "There is no parking.

"Traffic flows smoothly, there are less twists and turns, and trucks regularly travel the route.

"Looking at it objectively, it is a better route."

McCauley said the MWRA representatives were concerned because Union St. is residential.

He noted that the Nov. 30 public hearing on the proposed truck route has been postponed until after the holidays.

QJC Students Assisting Residence For Deaf Adults

A class of students at Quincy Junior College is assisting in publicizing On Our Way, a residence for deaf adults which is planning to locate in Quincy.

Prof. Sewlyn Glincher's Principles of Advertising class is involved in a special project in the form of a public relations campaign for a living/learning program for deaf adults. The program, called On Our Way, will be locating in Quincy soon.

"The students are great to work with," says Mary Doherty, vice president of On Our Way. "We needed to get in touch with the Quincy community, the people. The students know the town; they are young and creative and they came up with a lot of good ideas in a brainstorming session."

The first goal of On Our Way is to establish a residence for deaf adults. According to Doherty, many deaf adults born too late to benefit from the state's Chapter 766 program remain ineligible for state aid and largely unable to function independently. The goal of the proposed residence will be to enable deaf adults to reach their maximum potential in independent living skills.

Current plans call for the purchase of a large group home in the Quincy area. The residence will house trained staff, as well as deaf adults, who will maintain separate bedrooms but share living - recreation space.

The city of Quincy was targeted because of its demonstrated commitment to the deaf population as well as its well-developed public transportation system, according to On Our Way.

"The students at Quincy Junior College will be a valuable asset to On Our Way," says Doherty.

Funds for On Our Way are now being sought.

More information about On Our Way is available by writing On Our Way, 227 Dedham St., Norfolk, MA 02056 or by calling (617) 384-2517.

3 NQHS Seniors Named Job Program Students Of The Month

Three North Quincy High School seniors were recently presented the Norwood Trophy Jobs for Bay State Graduates program student of the month award from Mayor Francis McCauley.

The monthly trophies, sponsored by the Norwood Trophy Company, were awarded to the seniors for best overall attendance, attitude, spirit, excellence in employment skills classes, and participation in the Bay State Career Association.

Following the presentation, the three students participated in a Student Month dinner hosted by Jimbo's Restaurant in Braintree. Siders, Yee and Zero were joined by JBSC Job Specialist Chuck MacLeod for the award dinner.

Citizen Of The Year Award
The Quincy Sun
1372 Hancock St.
Quincy, Mass. 02169

Nominations may also be dropped off at The Sun office in Quincy Sq.

Those submitting nominations may also attach to the ballot a letter or note describing in more detail the reason for the nomination.

The award was established in 1985 to recognize an individual for outstanding community service.

This is not a popularity contest.

A person receiving the most nominations is not necessarily sure of being the final winner. Any one nominated just once has an equal opportunity to being named the winner.

First winner was Tony Siciliano, Deputy Director of Civil Defense and Auxiliary Police Chief. He was selected from 31 nominees.

Last year's winner was Ruth Wainwright of Houghs Neck, long-time community volunteer who was selected from 43 freely of his or her time to a worthy project or cause or to making Quincy a better community.

Remember, the deadline for nominations is Thursday, Dec. 31.

The name of the winner will be announced in January.

McCauley Wants Hours Rolled Back At Downtown Cafe

By NANCY McLAUGHLIN and KRISTINE STRENGE

In a hand-delivered letter, Mayor Francis McCauley wrote to the License Board Tuesday "strongly urging" that the hours be rolled back from 1 a.m. to 11 p.m. at Chevy's Belair Cafe, Parkingway, Quincy Sq.

McCauley said he took the action because of complaints by such parties as Kinney Systems, which operates the Ross Parking Garage adjacent to Chevy's, alleging drinking outside the establishment.

"I'm strongly urging that the License Board review the situation at Chevy's and consider rolling back the closing time," said McCauley.

"Maybe this will do something to cut down the problems before they get worse," said McCauley.

Other incidents have included a car being torched Sept. 27, two cars and two trash cans set afire Nov. 20, and a woman seriously beaten, according to published reports.

McCauley noted that similar action was taken in 1981 when the hours of a South Quincy establishment were rolled back because of problems.

Earlier in the day, the License Board had voted to place on file for a probationary period of three months a complaint against Chevy's regarding the condition of the Ross Parking Garage.

According to Quincy Police Chief Francis Finn, if no problems occur the case will be dismissed.

Complaints about the garage have been voiced by the Quincy City Council, Mayor Francis McCauley, Kinney Systems of Boston, Inc. and Quincy Police Sgt. Richard Laracy, an inspector for establishments with liquor licenses in the city.

Edwin B. Crean, Regional Vice President of Kinney Systems, operators of the city-owned parking lot, said, "Nighttime traffic has been the source of the majority of the abuse that has been going on late at night and in the early morning hours within the parking garage."

"We (Kinney Systems) continue to experience a high degree of drinking on the upper floors of the facility at night by individuals who have been observed entering and leaving Chevy's," stated Crean. "Drinking results in an accumulation of trash, cans and bottles as well as the application of graffiti and the use of the stairwells as bathroom facilities," he said.

According to Sgt. Laracy Chevy's patrons use the parking garage because the establishment's parking lot holds only 50 cars.

He said, "The club usually has about 300 patrons on Thursday, Friday and Saturday nights.

Sgt. Laracy strongly recommended a detail

Teacher AIDS Report Requirement Dropped

The requirement that staff members with AIDS or clinical evidence of HIV infection report their condition to the superintendent was dropped from school department policy at last week's School Committee meeting.

The action was taken after Atty. Gen. James Shannon threatened to proceed with legal action if the policy was not rescinded by Thursday, Dec. 10.

Shannon said the policy, adopted in March, 1986 by the Quincy School Committee, not only violated the right to privacy as protected under state law, but also discriminated against employees on the basis of a handicap which is proscribed under state and federal law.

No case of AIDS (Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome) was reported.

"I don't think our original guidelines were unreasonable," said Mayor Francis McCauley, School Committee chairman.

"We weren't proposing to single anyone out for discharge or firing.

"Because of the nature of the disease, we thought precautions should be taken.

"I supported the revision because I didn't think we should get into a costly and lengthy court battle," said McCauley.

The School Committee unanimously adopted a replacement policy that states that staff members with AIDS are "encouraged to disclose the fact to an appropriate supervisor."

Consolidation Meeting At Point Middle

School Supt. Dr. Robert Ricci, and members of his staff will hold an information meeting at Quincy Point Middle School Media Center Thursday, Dec. 10 at 7:30 p.m.

Dr. Ricci will present his proposed consolidation plan and his alternative plan to consolidation.

The meeting will be an open forum and the Superintendent will answer questions concerning the proposals.

Dr. Ricci was scheduled to discuss his recommendation that the Quincy Point and Sterling Middle Schools be consolidated at Sterling next year to equalize middle school offerings.

A second recommendation of Ricci's to be discussed is that Point Middle be merged with the Daniel Webster elementary school for kindergarten through grade 8.

MWRA Invites Officials To Tour Shipyard

The Massachusetts Water Resources Authority has invited local officials on a walking tour of the shipyard today (Thursday) 9:30 to 11:30 a.m.

Mayor Francis McCauley said that MWRA representatives planned to show what areas of the yard will be used as staging areas for the Deer Island Sewage Treatment Facility.

Other local officials invited on the tour were Sen. Paul Harold, Rep. Robert Cerasoli and City Councillor Theodore DeCristofaro, according to McCauley.

The MWRA recently purchased the yard for $49 million.

Council Approves $50,000 For Police Station Computers

The City Council voted Monday night to appropriate $50,000 towards computer equipment for the Police Station which is receiving a $7.1 million renovation and addition.

Police Chief Francis Finn said the IBM equipment which the department would like would probably cost a total of $300,000.

He said the department is applying for $50,000 in matching funds, and will reapply to the council for the balance later.

Finn said that his department and the city's Data Processing head Robert Brennan have not yet agreed on the equipment to be purchased.

The chief called the IBM equipment "the workhorse of the computer industry" and noted that the equipment his department observed had not broken down in 18 months.

"The system we choose must have absolute security," noted Finn.

Quincy Police Lt. William Curran said that among the computer's potential will be to inform officers of any potential problems when answering a call.

For example, said Curran, it would be helpful for an officer to know if an occupant of the house he is entering has a gun permit.

"It doesn't necessarily mean the occupant will be using the gun," said Curran. "But it is a good thing to know."

Councillor Richard Koch, Jr., said, "You (Police Department) are the people who have to live with the system every day.

"I would urge the administration to move as quickly as possible, and perhaps step into discussion (with Brennan)."

PUD Special Permit For S.A. Condos

Acting as the special permit granting authority, the City Council voted Monday night to grant a Planned Unit Development special permit for Tide Mill Condominiums at 572-618 Southern Artery and 108-128 Field St.

That means developers of the project, Quincy Group Realty Trust, can go ahead with plans for the project to include a curved shaped building with 172 residential condominium units.

The project will also include the elevation of the entire building to one story above the ground floor level, to provide view corridors under the building to allow pedestrian and vehicle based passersby to sense the presence of the Town River Beach and Broad Meadow Marsh, according to the developers.

Plans call for the construction of 344 parking spaces, of which 74 will be depressed under the building.

Councillor Michael Cheney, in whose ward the project will be located, said that the project will be one of the first under the new zoning ordinances.

Cheney also noted that the project had been significantly reduced from 400 units.

"It will be a fine addition to Southern Artery," said Councillor Patricia Toland.

Councillor Thomas Sullivan agreed.

"The development will be a plus," he said.

Iacobucci Mulls Possible Court Action In Council Election

By NANCY McLAUGHLIN

Ronald Iacobucci, who last week called off a recount of the councillor at large race which he lost by 217 votes, said he will decide whether to pursue the matter in Superior Court.

"Based on the information we collected, we'll be making a decision on where we go from here," said Iacobucci, who lost the third spot for councillor at large to Timothy Cahill.

The recount, which Iacobucci requested, began two weeks ago, but was interrupted by the Thanksgiving holiday.

"In the process of two and a half days that we got to review the (election) materials, in the first day we counted four precincts and found no significant change in the vote tabulation," he said.

"However, we did notice significant numbers of uncancelled ballots.

"As a result of that, we reviewed the remainder of the city, we looked at all the ballots, and found 966 uncancelled ballots.

"When a ballot is properly voted, it is put through the machine and a red cancellation stamp is placed on it.

"So we just wanted to follow through on that to make certain that there were no problems, he continued.

"In the process of doing that, we requested to look at the envelopes.

"Every ballot has to be placed in an envelope so if the ballot is not cancelled, the envelope should have a cancellation mark either to the front or side or in the back.

"The disappointment we had was that in several of the precincts, we could find no envelopes whatsoever.

"So it made it very hard for us to authenticate that those ballots were genuine.

"So the next thing we asked for, the final thing we asked for, was to tabulate the approximately 600 ballots that remained.

"The Secretary of State's office ruled that we had to count the entire city, and it was City Clerk John Gillis' decision to follow that recommendation," said Iacobucci.

"To me, it seemed a little bit ridiculous to have to count the whole city, to go back for three or four days, to count the whole city just to get a tabulation of those ballots.

"At that point, I decided to terminate the recount.

"If we have to make the decision to pursue this in Superior Court, we'll have to do so without the knowledge of this information as to how those ballots were cast.

"Obviously, I was interested in it because if they were cast fairly consistently with the way the election results turned out, then I would have absolutely no voter concerns or objections.

"However, if they came out somehow irregular, then obviously I would pursue the next step.

"So, now we have to make the decision without the basis of that information.

"I felt to continue with three or four days of counting, to get that information would have been a waste of time and taxpayer's money."

Iacobucci thanked the city clerk, registrars and election workers for "their time and cooperation during the recount."

He also congratulated Stephen McGrath, Patricia Toland and Cahill on their elections as councillors at large.

Gifts From Matthew

Like the three boys who died before him, Matthew Tobin was a good kid.

MATTHEW

His mother and father, former Mayor Arthur Tobin and Shirley, keep finding little things that show this since he died Saturday, the fourth victim of that tragic Thanksgiving Day two vehicle crash.

Going through his belongings they came across his checkbook with the stubs of checks he sent to the Pine St. Inn, Rosie's Place and the Salvation Army.

And the certificate from Hands Across America for a donation he sent to them.

Bob Keighton, one of Matthew's teachers at Curry College where he was majoring in history and government wrote to his parents before Matthew died:

"Matthew is one of my finest students. He is an outstanding person both in and out of the classroom."

"Matthew wasn't a drunk," said his father through tears. "And the other boys weren't either."

The other boys were Matthew's cousin, Tim Tobin; William Marston and Richard Miller. The four were all 22 years old.

Alcohol was a factor, authorities said.

"There was beer that night, I'm sure," Tobin continued. "But they weren't drinkers."

Shirley Tobin recalled when the boys played basketball out in the yard or down the street at the Vocational Technical School.

"When they got thirsty they came back to get a Coke or a Sprite or a 7-Up." "It was never a beer or alcohol."

Friends who saw the four boys Thanksgiving Eve say they were acting normally and having fun. The four went to the aid of some girls who were having car trouble.

They later showed up at the Cathay Pacific in North Quincy for Chinese food but it was too late. So they decided to go to Eddie's Diner for breakfast.

They told friends they would meet them there. But they never got there themselves. The accident got in the way.

"They were four good kids having a good time before the holiday," said Tobin. "Just like any other kids their age."

He paused.

"They were good kids. Normal, average kids."

The telephone rang. It was Governor Michael Dukakis. Tobin served with him on Beacon Hill while a state senator and they became good friends. He wanted Arthur and Shirley to know he was sorry.

"Thank you, Michael," Tobin said. "God bless you."

The day before Senator Edward Kennedy called Congressman Brian Donnelly dropped by the house.

The grief stricken parents of William Marston, Bill and Donna Marston, came by to console the Tobin family. George Riley, executive secretary to Tobin when the latter was mayor, came by, too. There were others.

Beside it was a large autographed framed get-well message from the entire Boston Celtics team -- Larry Bird, Robert Parrish, Danny Ainge -- all the players and Bob Cousy, too.

A friend of Matthew's sister, Tracey, is an airline stewardess. She was on a flight with the Celtics coming back home shortly after the Thanksgiving Day accident. She told them about Matthew fighting for his life at Quincy Hospital.

They improvised the get-well card, each signing it, and said they would try to get to see him later.

"Matthew loved basketball," his mother said. "He loved the Celtics but he liked to watch the New York Knicks.

He liked to watch the Knicks because he would point to Patrick Ewing and say, "I played against him."

And he did.

Matthew played against Ewing when the latter was at Cambridge Rindge and Tech and Matthew at Quincy High School.

"Ewing was something like 6 foot 11 back then," said Arthur, smiling as he remembered it. "Matthew was short and thin in those days. He didn't develop or put on any height until after high school when he shot right up.

"Matthew wasn't a starter but he did get to play against Ewing. And he wouldn't let us forget it."

Against Ewing it was a case of Mutt against Jeff or David against Goliath. Only this time Goliath won.

"You know what kind of kid he was?" his sister, Kelly, said. "On Saturday night he would volunteer to babysit for his brother, and his wife, so they could go out. He freely would give up a Saturday night to help someone."

"You know," his mother picked up, "he always wanted to be the first in the family to do something. The first to accomplish a particular thing. Now he has another first. He is the first of our children to go to God."

She and Arthur looked at one another. It was a look of peace.

You see, Matthew hasn't died. He is still alive to them.

And he will be alive in others.

His vital organs were donated at the hospital.

It means five people -- young or old -- will be able to see or live because of him.

Hearing Loss Is Not A Sign Of Old Age.

Chicago, Ill.—A free offer of special interest to those who hear but do not understand words has been announced by Beltone. A non-operating model of the smallest hearing aid Beltone has ever developed will be given absolutely free to anyone requesting it.

It's yours for the asking, so send for it now. It is not a real hearing aid, but it will show you how tiny hearing help can be. The actual aid weighs less than an eighth of an ounce, and it fits completely into the ear canal.

These models are free, so we suggest you write for yours now. Again, there is no cost, and certainly no obligation. Although a hearing aid may not help everyone, more and more people with hearing losses are being helped. For your free sample write today to: Department 79070, Beltone Electronics Corporation, 4201 West Victoria Street, Chicago, IL 60646.

New Councillor At-Large

Cahill To Work With Schools To Improve Educational, Athletic Programs

(This is the first in a series of three profiles on Quincy's three new city councillors who will take office in January.)

By NANCY McLAUGHLIN

Newly elected City Councillor-at-Large Timothy Cahill said he plans to work with the school system to help improve educational and athletic programs after he is sworn in this January.

"I think it is important that the City Council assist the School Committee in its dealings with the mayor," said Cahill, 29, of Summer St., Quincy Center.

"We can try to push through as many positive things as we can," said Cahill, owner of Handshakes Cafe in Quincy Sq. and Weymouth.

"I'd like to increase the role of the council, and see that more monies are spent in education-related fields."

He said he is hopeful that legislation will pass which would enable the School Committee to petition the council to override appropriations by the mayor in favor of higher amounts.

However, Cahill noted that he hopes to work with the mayor, and not against him.

"I understand his fiscal restraints," said Cahill.

"But I think the School Department deserves a little better, even if it has to come from other departments."

A former athlete and Quincy High School wrestling coach, Cahill said more athletics are needed in the middle schools, which currently only have basketball.

TIMOTHY CAHILL

"Extracurricular activities go a long way toward keeping kids in school and on to college," said the Boston University graduate. His major was political science.

"If we can put together an athletic program that doesn't cost as much as the one we had before it was cut after Proposition 2½, then maybe we can introduce other programs back into the city such as language and the arts," Cahill said.

He said he is optimistic about the possibility of financial involvement in the programs by the community and businesses.

"They raised $100,000 for stadium lighting, and that was a good start," Cahill explained.

"It's not going to be easy, but it can be done.

"Athletics are the best way of keeping kids out of trouble."

Cahill said he is also interested in working to revitalize downtown Quincy.

"I have some ideas that I think can work, but I want to discuss them with the other councillors first," he said.

Cahill said that included in his plans are ways to increase foot traffic from the Adams Mansion on Adams St., to First Parish Church in Quincy Sq. and the Adams Birthplaces on Independence Ave.

"The key is increasing foot traffic and having a good mix of businesses and shops," he said.

Cahill said if the Presidents' Place project planned for downtown Quincy blends in with its surroundings, it will have a very positive effect.

"It will be an improvement over what is there now," he said.

"But we don't want to become an office center, as opposed to a downtown retail center. There is a danger of that."

A better parking system would help, he thinks.

"That's the biggest complaint I receive from customers," he said.

Cahill also feels the council has to work with Paul Levy of the Massachusetts Water Resources Authority to ensure that the city's best interests will be served at the Quincy Shipyard.

He also thinks an alternative should be devised to the proposed truck route to the shipyard through Quincy.

"The City Council has to fight to get the best possible deal for the residents of Quincy," said Cahill.

A Quincy resident since the age of 2, he attended Sterling Middle School and Quincy High School before going on to Boston University.

While a college student, he interned in Cong. Brian Donnelly's office in Washington, D.C.

The year he was graduated from college, he ran for councillor at large but finished fifth.

Cahill's wife, the former Tina Falco, is owner of La Bilancia, a women's clothing store in Quincy Sq.

They have two daughters, Makenna, 3½, and Nicole, 7 months.

How does he intend to balance his responsibilities as a husband, father, business owner and now city councillor?

"It's a matter of being organized," he said. "Of using your time wisely. You do as much as you can.

"City Hall is right across the street from my business, and I'm in Quincy all day.

"My job allows me more freedom because I have my own business.

"As long as I stay organized, I'll be able to handle it."

Dangers Of Hypothermia Session Conducted At Housing Authority

Boston Gas and the Massachusetts Executive Office of Elder Affairs recently conducted an area-wide program to educate the elderly on the dangers of hypothermia and cold stress prevention at the Quincy Housing Authority, 80 Clay St., Quincy.

Men and women from the Council on Aging, Visiting Nurses Association and other health care agencies were trained by Boston Gas representatives on ways to prevent winter-related illnesses. These men and women will teach other community workers in order to educate the areas's elderly citizens.

Hypothermia and "cold stress" are the result of exposure to cold. They reduce body temperature and can lead to heart attacks and other serious illnesses in the elderly.

The National Center for Health Statistics reports that about 35,000 seniors suffer from hypothermia-related deaths each year.

One aspect to hypothermia stressed in the session is that a person does not have to experience very cold temperatures to lose body heat.

"While the phrase 'freezing to death' is often used to describe hypothermia fatalities elderly victims often succumb in their own homes, in temperatures well above freezing," said Virginia Knauer, who presented the session on behalf of Boston Gas.

Steps people should take to avoid hypothermia include:

- Don't wear too many pairs of socks because it can constrict the blood flow and impair circulation.
- Wear several layers of loose-fitting clothes to act as insulation for your body.
- Change clothing or socks that become damp or wet.
- Wear hats, even a stocking cap, in bed. Cold hands and feet are signals that too much body heat is escapting through your head.
- Use hot water bottles, heating pads and electric blankets to keep warm in bed.
- Exercise and eat properly to keep your body's circulation system in good condition.

Wollaston Liquor License Renewed Despite Protests

Dec. 9-15, 1937

50 Years Ago

The Quincy Licensing Board renewed all the liquor licenses held by restaurants on Wollaston Beach, despite the objections of area residents, led by local religious and political leaders.

Said City Councillor Avery W. Gilkerson, one of the protest leaders:

"The basis of this objection is that Quincy, with 27 miles of natural waterfront, has the greatest recreation possibilities of any place on the South Shore. The sale of liquor is taking place right in that natural playground. It does not create a proper moral atmosphere for children."

The licenses were held by Bowen's Dine and Dance, 797A Wollaston Boulevard; Sam's, 725-735 Boulevard; Al-An Sandwich Shoppe, 895 Boulevard; Anchor Inn, East Elm Ave. and Boulevard; and Elsies, 300-308 Beach St.

The liquor license of the Squantum Yacht Club was renewed without objection.

Got Any Left Over Turkey?

How About Turkey Cacciatore, Rice Cakes

Have you got any left over turkey? That is, did you freeze any of it? Well, if you did, or if you're planning to cook one at Christmas, here are a couple of different ways to use it.

TURKEY CACCIATORE

2 green peppers
1 red pepper (optional)
1 Lb fresh mushrooms
1 medium onion
1 can crushed tomatoes
A couple of Tbsps oil
1-2 cups left over turkey meat, light, dark, or both

In the oil, saute the onion and peppers until they get a bit soft. Add the washed, cut up mushrooms and saute for a couple of minutes. Add the tomatoes and the turkey and cook until done. It only takes about a half hour to 45 minutes. Serve hot with crusty bread and a salad if you like.

TURKEY RICE CAKES

Enough corn flake crumbs for coating the rice cakes.
1 cup rice
1 cup leftover turkey
1 egg
2 Tbsps of flour
2 Tbsps or so of grated cheese
oil for frying

Boil the rice until done. Let cool. In a bowl, mix the rice with an egg, the flour and the cheese. Mix until blended. Mixture should be a bit thick. Take about a quarter of a cup of the rice mixture and roll it on to the crumbs. Roll until it coats itself while your form a little ball about the size of a large meatball. Then fry in hot oil turning until borwn and crispy. Drain on paper towel. Keep warm and serve with sour cream if you like.

TURKEY BURRITOS

1 cup leftover turkey meat cut in small pieces
4-5 black olives
1 small container sour cream
1 green pepper
1 red pepper
half small onion
1 tsp or so of seasoned bread crumbs
1 Tbsp hot sauce (made for Mexican food)
Flour tortillas (available in supermarket refrigerator) shredded orange cheese

This recipe makes six filled tortillas. Heat oven to 350 degrees. Cut the peppers, chopping them into very small pieces. Also the onion and mix together. Set aside in a bowl. In a frying pan, saute the pepper onion mixture until cooked. Add the turkey meat, hot sauce and the bread crumbs for flavor as well as thickening agent. After this is all mixed, fill each tortilla in the center and fold over like a cannoli with the folds on the bottom of a greased baking dish.

Sprinkle the top of each filled tortilla with the shredded cheese and sliced black olive. Bake until the cheese on top is melted. Serve hot with sour cream. If you enjoy Mexican food, I think you will really like this entree.

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

D. Scott Deware

Do you ever think about how other people react to you upon meeting you for the first time? Do you project yourself favorably or vice-versa? We all know the importance of first impressions. They can be good; they can be bad. They can be the start of a friendship or they can nip a future friendship in the bud ...

Have you ever thought how facial expressions contributes to first impressions? A smile can be so important. It can be warm with eyes sparkling or can be just a contraction of the facial muscles ... A smile can be the difference between making a friend or a nodding acquaintance or even an enemy ...

We are all aware that friendship is a very precious thing. We need friends in time of trouble just as we need them in our times of joy and pleasure. However, we sometimes forget that just as we find the first overtures difficult, so do other people find them equally hard. The rules of social behavior help us over these awkward moments. But couldn't it be said that it is our attitude, our willingness to be friendly, our interest in the other person that is the deciding factor? This is where the smile comes in. Oh, yes, it can say so much more than words ...

Quality Clothes, Low Prices Featured

At Kid's Korner Owner Really Knows What Kid's Want

DOTTI DOYLE, owner of Kid's Korner in North Quincy, has what it takes to dress any youngster.

(Quincy Sun photo by Charles Flagg)

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

Dotti Doyle's experience as a mother has certainly paid dividends.

Dotti, who raised six children, is the owner of Kid's Korner, a children's clothing store located at 60 Billings Rd., North Quincy. She says bringing up six kids has helped her business immensely.

"I know what it's like to dress children. That's why I carry quality clothing products with very low prices," Dotti says.

Kid's Korner, which Dotti opened six years ago, specializes in all sorts of children's clothing, including the Bryan brand name. The store's inventory includes a wide selection of both boys and girls shirts, pants, socks, coats, blouses, and tights.

Dotti also carries a wide assortment of pajamas, baby shoes, belts, ties, suspenders, underwear and winter wear such as mittens, gloves and hats.

Other clothing products include holiday attire, christening outfits, first communion dresses and veils and parochial school outfits. Dotti says Kid's Korner carries clothing to outfit students who attend Sacred Heart School (both Quincy and Weymouth), St. Ann's and St. Brendan's in Dorchester and parochial schools in South Boston.

Store sizes range from infant, baby and toddler to girls 4-6X and boys 4-7.

Dotti emphasizes that all her clothing is sold at very reasonable prices. Furthermore, she says she is very careful what products hit the racks and her customer satisfaction record indicates just that.

"I have never had anyone come back to return any product that was defective," Dotti says proudly.

She is also proud of her store's location: the North Quincy business district. She says the area has a distinctive family flavor and atmosphere.

"Most of the stores around here (North Quincy) are family owned. We call them 'mama and papa' stores. My store is a kid's store. Kids come in and play here.

"The whole area is family and people like it. They can relate to it," says Dotti, a North Quincy resident of 35 years.

This family atmosphere has also spread beyond North Quincy. Dottie says her customers, predominantly from the South Shore, also come from as far as Cape Cod and New Hampshire.

"People who come from outside of North Quincy hear about us through word of mouth. They come to shop here because they know they can't get the same quality product for such low prices anywhere else," she says.

"Most of the people who come in are very nice," she added.

In addition to her reasonable prices and wide selection, Dotti also gives each customer supreme attention. Last year during the Christmas season, a mother came into Kid's Korner for holiday outfits for her young boy and girl. Undecided over what style and color to select, she asked Dotti for advice.

"I told her black velvet outfits would look very good on them. She came back to the store after her children had worn them at a Christmas party and she told me everyone raved about the outfits."

That type of expert advice should come to no surprise. After all, the mother of six began selling children's clothes at the Squantum Flea market back in the 1970s.

"When you've raised a family, you know what type of clothing looks good on children," says Dotti.

Kid's Korner is open Monday 10 a.m. to 5 p.m., Tuesday through Thursday, 10 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. and Saturday, 9 a.m. to 5:30 p.m.

Hancock Flower Shop The Right Place For Christmas Selections

JAY NESTOR'S Hancock Flower Shop of North Quincy is full of holiday flowers and gift items this Christmas season.

(Quincy Sun photos by Charles Flagg)

Want to spruce up your home or a relative's or friend's house this Christmas season?

Then hop on over to Hancock Flower Shop, 400 Hancock St., North Quincy, where you'll find not only an outstanding selection in holiday flower arrangements but also many gift items.

Co-owned by Jay and Ruth Nestor, Hancock Flower Shop will meet any buyer's needs this Christmas season.

"We offer good, fresh merchandise at very reasonable prices with courteous service," says Jay, who has co-owned the store almost four years.

The Christmas season is traditionally a hectic one for both shopper and merchant and Hancock Flower is no exception.

"We'll send out about 500 orders during the week of Christmas," says Jay, an average of 150 per day.

"My advice is to order early because Christmas week is just wild," he says, adding he works about 15 hours a day during the holiday rush.

The Nestors' day starts early. Jay and Ruth drive from their Dorchester home to the Boston Flower Mart to buy their fresh inventory and to pick up orders. Once that is done, it's off to North Quincy and a busy day of taking orders and making arrangements.

This holiday season, Hancock Flower has expanded its inventory to carry a greater selection of arrangements and gift items. For example, the shop sells artificial and live wreaths (12-30 inches), holly, garland, swags, flowering plants and of course the popular poinsettias.

Among its many gift items are stuffed animals, mugs, ceramic decorations, tree ornaments, greeting cards, baskets, candles and candle holders. The Nestors even sell a multiple-piece nativity scene that will adorn any household.

Although the Christmas season is the busiest time of the florist's year, the Nestors handle it very efficiently. Jay says he begins organizing and preparing for the holidays in August, and by November, his operation is in full gear.

One thing that would help the holiday rush run a lot smoother for both the Nestors and their customers is the advance ordering of Christmas arrangements.

In fact, the Nestors have been taking Christmas orders for several weeks. All that the customer must do is specify what day the order is to be delivered. And for customer convenience, Hancock Flower shop honors all major credit cards.

Paul, who grew up in Quincy, became interested in horticulture when he was in junior high school. Later on, he attended the Norfolk County Agricultural School while working at the former Newport Garden Shop. That allowed him to gain book knowledge and valuable experience.

Jay then enrolled at the prestigious Longwood Gardens in Pennsylvania, a professional gardener training program which selects only seven students a year. There he finely tuned his florist skills.

Jay then returned to the South Shore area and became manager of Hancock Flower Shop, a position he held until owner George Bossi retired and turned the store's reins over to Jay.

The store is opened Monday, Wednesday and Friday from 8:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m., Tuesday and Thursday from 8:30 a.m. to 8 p.m. and Saturday from 8:30 to 5:30 p.m. Those requesting orders will receive prompt, professional, same day delivery service, Jay says.

This time of year is always full of bright, beautiful decorations. For those who are thinking about adding a touch of floral beauty to one's home or office, consider Hancock Flower Shop.

The place will grow on you.

Stevenson Head Coach

Raiders Have Experience And Speed

By TOM SULLIVAN

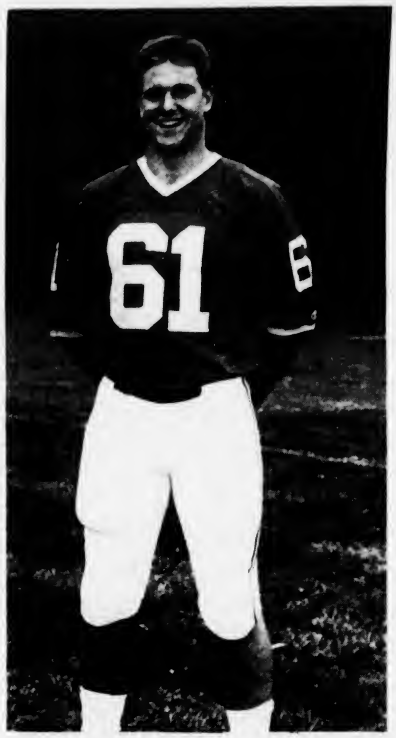
Ted Stevenson, who has been a coach at North Quincy for seven years, takes over as boys' head coach this season and he will have a team with a good deal of experience and good speed.

Ted, who was Ed Miller's assistant coach for the past two years, boys' freshman coach for two years and girls' assistant coach for two, succeeds Miller, who has taken the head coaching job at Marshfield after 11 years at North.

"I've coached most of these boys since the fourth or fifth grade, so I know them well and they know me," said Stevenson. "As usual, we will lack size and many of the Suburban League teams will be much taller, but we have experience and speed and I feel we will give a good account of ourselves."

Returning from last year's team are five of the top seven players, Teddy Stevenson (6-0), the coach's son; B.J. Sylva (6-4); Dave Lawless (6-3), Kip Caldwell (6-2) and Dennis Cronin (6-0).

"We will be depending upon Lawless, Sylva and Stevenson for most of our scoring," said Stevenson. "All are fine shooters and did well last season."



Making up the rest of the varsity team are players (all but two) up from Stevenson's jayvee squad of last year They are Billy MacDougall (5-9), Matt Sumner (5-9), Mark Kennedy (5-8), Sean McDonough (6-2); Jeff Powers (6-5), Dave Joyce (6-1), Derek Goodson (6-0), Mike Carpenter (5-8), Joe Harly (6-1) and Bobby Herman (6-2).

Stevenson, a two-time Greater Boston League all-star and the Raiders' captain in 1964 when he averaged 19.9 points a game for Coach Ken Rickson's squad, was pleased with his team's performance in a scrimmage against Milton Academy.

"I don't foresee any wholesale changes in North's immediate future," said Stevenson. "I like to run the ball a little more, so we will probably push the ball up the floor with a quicker pace. I want to continue to build on the program Ed Miller has left behind."

Jed Phelan, another former North star, has moved up to jayvee coach and another former Raider, Dan Cuddy, has taken Phelan's place as freshman coach.

North will open its season Dec. 15 at Everett and will host Malden Dec. 18. The Raiders will play in the annual Christmas tournament, this year to be played at Quincy, on Dec. 29 and 30, facing Weymouth South in the first game while Quincy meets Weymouth North.

JERRY MARTIN of North Quincy, an offensive guard for the Curry College fooball team, was named to the N.E. Football Conference all-star first team. Martin had an outstanding four-year career at Curry, during which time the Colonels were 26-9.

Franceschini Optimistic

Quincy Has More Height, Must Sharpen Shooting

A year ago the Quincy boys' basketball team suffered through a winless season, but coach John Franceschini has high hopes for a respectable record this year.

"Last year we had one of the smallest teams in the Suburban League," said Franceschini. "This year we will have a lot more height and I think we will do much better off the boards.

"One thing we must do this year is improve greatly on our shooting. Last season we were only 51 per cent from the free throw line and 31 percent from the floor. We drew a lot of fouls but couldn't capitalize.

"Despite the record, our kids never once gave up last year and at the end of the season the way they were diving for loose balls you'd think they had a winning season. This year we again will have a hustling club but, I hope, with far better results."

Franceschini has six returnees from last season's varsity, Capt. Dan Biagini, a 5-1 senior guard; Scott Logan, a six-foot senior forward; Jim Sugrue, six-foot junior guard; Nick Dragone, 5-11 senior guard; John Menz, 5-11 senior guard, and Joe Russell, 5-9 sophomore guard.

Rounding out the varsity squad are Jim Kimmell, 5-10 senior guard; Frank Calabro, 6-3 senior forward; Chris Noble, 6-3 junior forward; Mike Perkins, 6-3 junior forward; Oscar Jara, six-foot junior guard; Mike Scolaro, 6-2 sophomore forward, and Mike Hemeon, 6-2 senior forward.

"The addition of Calabro, Noble, Perkins and Scolaro gives us a lot more size," said the Presidents' coach. "I am looking for Biagini, Russell, Noble and Perkins for most of our scoring.

"We will be using changing defenses just as we did last year. If we just improve tremendously in our shooting, I feel we can make a respectable showing in the strong Suburban League."

Ray Papile is back for his second season as junior varsity coach and Mike Connolly who, like Papile, is a former Quincy player, is the new freshman skipper.

The Presidents will open their season Dec. 15 at Medford and will play at Peabody on Dec. 18. They will host the annual Christmas tournament on Dec. 29 and 30, joining North Quincy, Weymouth South and Weymouth North, and will host their own tournament Feb. 17 and 19.

Mite A's Loses First

Quincy's Mite A hockey team fell behind, 3-0, in the first period but rallied for two goals, losing to Belmont, 3-2, for its first loss of the season. Quincy has a 5-1-1 record.

The Mite A's will host Needham Sunday at 8:10 a.m. at the Quincy Youth Arena. The public is welcome at no charge.

With Timmy Hunter, Mike Ryan, Stone and David Rowell passing well throughout the game, they found Scott Cooper, who passed to Mark Regan for the second score.

After 15 Years:

Squantum Sailors Savor First Youth Football Title

The Squantum Sailors recently won the first Quincy Youth Football League championship in the team's 15-year history with a thrilling 14-12 overtime win over the Quincy Point Panthers.

Each team had finished the regular season with 6-1 records, having defeated each other and the teams played one of the most exciting games in years in frigid weather.

The Panthers struck early in the game with Derek Tardanico scoring, but the Sailors' line halted the try for the two-point conversion.

With the Sailors trailing, 6-0, the offensive line of Pat Faherty, Chris McCallum, Mark Nantel, Eugene Kwong, Wayne Bradley, John McAdams and Chris Nelson, running backs Whitey Lally, Mike Picariello, Dan Savage and quarterback Bill Lydon kept a solid drive going on the next series and Picariello scored the tying touchdown. A pass for the conversion was incomplete.

The most spectacular play came with a minute left in regulation time with the Sailors threatening to score the winning touchdown. The Panthers' Peter Kelly intercepted a Sailor pass and raced 70 yards toward a sure touchdown when McCallum came out of nowhere to make a game-saving tackle.

In overtime, where each team is given four plays from the 10 to score, Tardanico scored for the Panthers but again the try for the points was halted.

Picariello scored the tying touchdown on third down and the winning points were scored by Lydon on a fine second effort.

The Sailors, finishing at 7-1, outscored the opposition, 106-34, with four shutouts.

Squirt A's Defeat Scituate

Quincy's Squirt A team, sponsored by South Boston Savings Bank, defeated the Scituate Seahawks, 11-3, at Pembroke for its 10th victory of the season.

Doug Nolan had a hat trick, David Cooper two goals and four assists, Patrick Connolly, two goals and Brian Bartkus, Lee Hughes and Jay Evans one goal each. Eric Zimmerman had two assists and Andrew Vermette, Bill Coughlin, Steve Provost, Dan Donahue and Bartkus one each.

The Squirt A's traveled to Boston University's Walter Brown Arena and suffered their first loss, 4-3, to Belmont.

Belmont scored the winning goal with less than two minutes left to spoil a fine effort by goalies Mark Smith and Brad Watkins.

Cooper, Brendan O'Brien and Hughes scored Quincy goals and Nolan, Connolly, O'Brien and Vermette had assists. Quincy's Greater Boston League record is 6-1 and the overall mark is 10-3-1.

Timberlake Expected To Have Big Year At B.U.

Quincy's Jeff Timberlake, junior co-captain of the Boston University basketball team, is expected to have another outstanding year for the Terriers.

The junior guard appeared in 29 games, including 13 starts last season and led the team in assists with 178, third in the ECAC North Atlantic Conference. His career best was against Drexel when he had 13.

Timberlake scored in double figures six times in the final eight games, had five or more assists in 18 games, had 12 points, 11 assists and four rebounds in an 84-82 win over Niagara in the North Atlantic Conference semifinal win and scored 16 points, had nine assists and seven rebounds in a victory over Connecticut.

Timberlake had an outstanding four-year career at Boston College High where he was captain and Most Valuable Player in his senior year. He holds the school record for assists with over 600.

He had 10 points and several assists recently in BU's 75-53 win over Southern California in the consolation game of the Central Fidelity Holiday Classic in Richmond, Va. BU lost the opener to Richmond, 66-61.

Timberlake also had big games in wins over UMass and Indiana State. He had a season-high nine assists against Indiana State and leads the team with 19.

BU faced a major challenge Tuesday night when it played at Notre Dame.

Steven Brodeur On Xaverian Honor Roll

Steven P. Brodeur of Quincy has been named to the honor roll for the first quarter at Xaverian Brothers High School.

Fond Memories Of The Quincy-North Series

By ROBERT J. HIBBETT

In 1940, a few days before Thanksgiving, the Boston area was assaulted with a foot of snow.

The Quincy-North Quincy football game was postponed to the following Monday. In the intervening days I watched city workers shovel out the field and the grandstands. I think even I brought along a shovel, mingling with the men who smoked cigarettes and cigars. It was a small boy's paradise. The game was played on a slippery, muddy field as the temperature soared into the 50's. There was very little offense as neither team could move the ball. The final score was 0-0. It was a moral victory for the Red Raiders who entered the game as a decided underdog. Since the inception of the series in 1934, Quincy had only won once, in 1938, 19-0.

Finally in 1941, a powerful Quincy team overwhelmed the North team, winning 34-0. With two uncles, Uncle Albert and Uncle Tom, I watched the game from behind the end zone at the wall along the Southern Artery. It was an immense crowd.

Glenn Fleischer was the great Quincy runner that year. He dazzled the North defenders with his shiftiness and speed. I remember him at the end of the field facing the Eastern Mass carbarn, hip-faking several North defenders as he went into the end zone.

On one touchdown at our end, big Dick Maloney of Quincy crashed through the line, the small North players clinging to him like barnacles. They couldn't prevent his thrust past the goal line. About five weeks prior to this Thanksgiving game, Oct. 17, my father died of a cerebral hemorrhage in Faulkner Hospital. When Aunt Fran told me of his death, I wept inconsolably. At this death Billy was just 14, Larry was eight, and I was ten. It was my first introduction to death.

Again in 1942, a superior Quincy team led by Craig Capacciolli and Hank Conroy ran roughshod over North, winning 27-0. I don't remember the game at all. Perhaps I didn't go. But I remember a photo in the Ledger, showing the speedy Capacciolli evading North defenders as he ran for a long touchdown. Bob Lawrence, a North lineman, shows his chagrin as Capacciolli evades his tackle.

The 1943 game was a barn burner. With the Keefe brothers, Bill and George as my companions, I underwent a thousand agonies as a desperate Quincy team tried to fight off a late North drive. Early in the game, Lou Marini, a sophomore, knifed through a hole in the left side of North's line and raced untouched for a score. With only minutes left in the game Quincy led 12-8. Dave Burke of North, also a sophomore, led the last North drive with short, accurate passes. On a fourth down, only a few yards from the goal line, a pass from Burke was nudged at the last moment by the Quincy defender, Rippy Lints.

It was very cold as we watched the 1944 game from the bleacher side. "Clem's clutch catch claws Quincy" as Paul Clem leaped high to take in a pass for a score. In the second half, the valiant Quincy team sustained a drive completely on the ground as Lou Marini rammed into the North line, time and time again. Suddenly, Marini broke loose and headed down the left side of the field. Usually speedy, he was tired from his thrusts into the North line. At about the twenty-yard line he was caught by the North defender, who brought Marini down with a high tackle around the shoulders. It was the closest that Quincy came to a score. The North defenders threw back the Quincy runners on four successive plays.

As a sophomore at Quincy, I watched the 1945 game played in a torrential rain. Quincy, led by Marini, Gayton Salvucci, Al McKim, Jappa Papile came into the game at 6-1-1 with a chance at the state Division B crown. On the kickoff, Salvucci, who had scored eight touchdowns during the season, including four scores against a hapless Rindge Tech team, fumbled the slippery ball at the goal line and Dave Burke recovered the ball for a North score. In the driving rain neither team could move the ball. But in the second half the strong Quincy team began a drive on the ground.

Al Halloran, a sophomore, slashed his way to the North 20-yard line. But Fred Haddad, the biggest man on the field, was guiilty of being offside on the play. It was the death knoll for Quincy. The power of Lou Marini, the speed of Salvucci, lwere never asserted in the sea of mud. A disconsolate Quincy team were the victims of a Northeaster. But in the recesses of memory I still see Lou Marini as he ran at the opposing line, over and over again. He was my hero, Lou Marini, in a time when heroes were as natural to boyhood as listening to the radio at 5 as Jack Armstrong showed that he was the All-American boy.

The Quincy team was again the favorite in 1946, but suddenly in the first half, Roy Shaunessy picked off an airborne fumble and raced 93 yards for the score. O'Brien of Quincy, perhaps the speediest man on the field, appeared to be catching Shaunessy, but a lunge, too early, and O'Brien lay on the field, his arms empty of the ball carrier. The disconsolate Quincy fans, remembering the previous game played in the driving rain, wondered if it were again the destiny of the Quincy team to lose to a North team that came into the game as the underdog.

Fortunately for the Quincy team, Carl Leone was the quarterback. When the third quarter had ended, Quincy, galloping up and down the field as if the North team were shorthanded, scored four times. Quincy added another score in the final quarter and their victory margin stood 31-6.

Carl Leone was carried off the field on his teammates' shoulders. In overall athletic ability, as a passer and runner and team leadership, Leone stands without peer in this era of Quincy football. Except for Gayton Salvucci who played halfback at AIC, Leone was the first of the Quincy players to make a name for himself in college football. As the quarterback to put an end to Brown's football mediocrity, helping to beat out Harvard and Columbia for the Ivy League crown in his senior year.

The 1947 Quincy-North game matched two very strong teams. During the season North routed Weymouth and Milton and a win over Quincy would clinch the state Division C crown. At quarterback was perhaps the finest North player of this era, Leo Luchini, who was an elusive runner and an accurate passer, was the heart and soul of this excellent North team.

Quincy was equally strong with wins over Brockton, Weymouth, and Newton. Except for an unexpected loss to Lowell, Quincy, with a win against North could have won the State B Crown. Perhaps never in its history had a Quincy team such depth. The first two teams were interchangeable with linemen such as Dom Delforno, Jack Granville, Pudge Kennedy, Don Lundin who caught the winning pass against Weymouth and the extraordinary array of backs which included two sophomores, Charlie Sacchetti and Aldo Lombardi, Al Halloran, Dave Montani, Lindsey Tate, and Jack DiAntonio who was the team's punter, besides being a hard runner.

In the first series of downs, the fired-up North defenders stopped the Quincy offense dead in its tracks. The bleacher section seemed a sea of red and black pom-poms. But early in the game the North rooters were stunned to silence. While returning a punt, Leo Lucchini was brought down hard by at least three Quincy defenders.

After a long time on the ground, he was helped off the field. The Quincy team seized the opportunity of North's momentary collapse of morale, and scored twice in the first half. The valiant Luchini re-entered the game. It seemed even an effort for him just to stand upright on the field. His superlative playing skills were no longer a factor in the game. Yet, he persevered, a hurt warrior at his position in the secondary. In his few attempts at running the ball, his bad leg betrayed him as he sank to the ground with just a nudge from the defender. The final score was 19-6 in Quincy's favor. One can speculate that it might have been a different outcome if Luchini had remained uninjured. But, we must remember the depth of the Quincy team, especially the offense with seven or eight players of equal caliber

As I write I can still see the clash of red and blue jerseys, young gods in a fierce struggle. In the ensuing years Dom Delforno, Don Lundin, and Pudge Kennedy have succumbed to the end that awaits us all. Yet, somewhere, perhaps with the sky growing dark, a pink trace in the clouds, young men, ageless now, continue their struggle, not in a spirit of desperation, but rejoicing in their vigor and strength and boundless optimism.

In 1948, Quincy, coming into the game with a 7-2 record was highly favored against a small North team. With an interception, Quincy scored first, and led 6-0. Around me the Quincy fans yelled "Pour it on." But the North players digging down into themselves, thwarted drives by Quincy.

By the second half the Quincy team knew it was engaged in a great struggle. The predictions of a Quincy rout failed to take into account the traditional tenacity of North teams. It was a game of near misses, the Quincy end, Charlie Pappas, bobbling and then dropping a pass in the end zone. The tackling of Quincy player Aldo Lombardi in his end zone by Ronnie Wray gave North two points for a safety, and an immediate uplift of its morale.

Late in the game, a North defender dove on a Quincy fumble. The North team with a surging offensive line and Jack Gilbody handing off the ball to his runners moved closer to the Quincy goal line. At a goal to goal situation, the Quincy defenders led by Jack Granville, Charlie Pappas, Dan Roffo held on for dear life.

It took the North runners four downs to nudge the ball into the end zone. The disheartened Quincy team was unable to garner any offense in the few minutes remaining. North prevailed, 8-6.

This game typified many of the Quincy-North games of this time with a North team making up for its lack of size with a spirit, a pluck which we attribute to the underdog in American lore.

In 1949, the final game of this decade, the Quincy team, coming into the game with a losing record, swarmed all over the North team, winning 25-0. The Presidents were led by Charlie Sacchetti who, capping three years of varsity football, gained over 100 yards on the ground, scoring twice.

There were great games later between these two rivals. In the later years corresponding to a national trend, the players were bigger, stronger. And as with teams all over the country, more of these young players went on to college, seeing in an education, a door to the good life which most Americans consider a natural right.

But in the 1940's, spanning a terrible war begun by a puny man with a ridiculous moustache and ending with the Soviet Union's detonation of its first atomic bomb, the American people, especially the young, were full of pride in themselves for being America, themselves for being American, and full of hope for the future, secure in their belief that hard-work, dedication would ensure the good life.

The Quincy-North games of the 1940's exemplified this unique American spirit of determination in the face of great odds and an untarnished optimism that things would work out. In their athletic feats, these young men became heroes to the entire community. Their pictures appeared week-by-week in the Ledger. I have alluded to my admiration, almost worship of Lou Marini. While playing pick-up football on the fourth hole of Furnace Brook Golf Course, I imagined I was Marini, bursting through a hole in the line and thens streaking down the field. The cheering was entirely in my head. But this heroism carried beyond the enclave of Quincy. We all admired Truman's unexpected victory over Dewey.

As Americans we still believed that almost anyone could rise to heroic stature The Quincy and North players of that era are enshrined as heroes in my memory. As Americans we not only lived in the greatest country of the world, but we thought of ourselves as unique, as if God had picked us out of all other people. It was a comforting illusion.

Recently I brought up the subject of heroism with my students. When I asked them to name their heroes, most of them refused to respond. Later, I wondered if a country, especially its young, can endure, without identification with someone who typifies the qualities we admire. The hero becomes a spur to one's own fulfillment.

But no one can blame the young. And if too many kids prefer a job and car to making a commitment to a football team, we can only look to ourselves, to the society we have helped mold, one dedicated to the advancement of one's self, a denial of the idealism which once rendered Americans unique among the peoples of the world.

In the dusk I still see the football lofted high in the air, a receiver, arms outstretched, waiting for the ball. The fans have all gone home but the young players continue in their great struggle.

"Paul Revere's Life and the History of the Paul Revere House" will be the topic Wednesday, Dec. 16, at 1:30 p.m. as the Quincy Historical Society continues its "Quincy Remembers" lecture series.

Built in 1680, the Paul Revere House is the oldest house in Boston proper. The house was owned by Paul Revere from 1770 until 1800; it was from this house that he left on his historic ride. One of the oldest house museums in the nation, the Paul Revere House will mark its 80th anniversary open to the public in April 1988.

McBride will speak on Paul Revere's public and personal life. Although well-known as a silversmith, Paul Revere was involved in a wide range of business and charitable undertakings and was highly regarded as a major industrialist at the time of his death.

WEEK OF: December 10

BIRTHDAY THIS WEEK
You take charge in crises, and people respect you for your ability to make quick and -- usually -- wise decisions. A humanitarian cause captures your attention in the coming months. Interesting travel opportunities are highlighted in the first half of 1988.

AQUARIUS — January 21 - February 19
Your generally good taste is particularly noteworthy through this period. More distractions than usual come your way; the key is to hone your organizational skills.

PISCES — February 20 - March 20
Thursday-Friday highlight financial planning. The weekend offers a surprisingly successful social engagement. Career environment becomes less tense after the weekend, thanks to your initiative.

ARIES — March 21 - April 20
Thursday-Friday feature a surprise announcement. The weekend offers opportunities to catch up on obligations. Monday-Wednesday favor travel and significant improvements on the job front.

TAURUS — April 21 - May 22
Week offers rare opportunity for mending an injured relationship. If traveling, allow for possible delays. If planning a function, don't hesitate to issue reminders.

GEMINI — May 23 - June 21
The year end offers opportunities for self-improvement and creative expression. Small non-monetary bonus may arrive by Wednesday. Chance to travel unexpectedly may open up.

CANCER — June 22 - July 22
Compromise is the key in a week that brings together individuals from various backgrounds. Coordinating events is your chief role, although you can enjoy private moments with loved one.

LEO — July 23 - August 22
Good week for expressing feelings to those you care about most. Avoid excesses, especially in diet, and dress for the season rather than for style. Children earn your respect.

VIRGO — August 23 - September 22
Your skill this week is to realize your own potential and to help others realize theirs. Travel ideas benefit from review. Willpower is especially strong now.

LIBRA — September 23 - October 22
As the year draws to an end, take inventory of incomplete tasks and wrap up as many as reasonably possible. Curiously, this is a good time for making sensible resolutions.

SCORPIO — October 23 - November 21
With a modest amount of effort you can master an important new skill. If traveling, make allowances for possible detours. Relative is more openminded than you realize.

SAGITTARIUS — November 22 - December 22
Allow more flexibility in any schedules that you prepare this week. You and a neighbor may discover a common interest. Family reunions have a way of expanding.

CAPRICORN — December 23 - January 20
Your sense of style is unusually exciting this week, winning praise from various corners. Good week to launch a budget, host a small party, and look ahead to 1988.

N.C. Firm Proposes:

Coal-Burning Generator Plant For Shipyard

By NANCY McLAUGHLIN

Local city, state and business officials were scheduled to meet yesterday (Wednesday) with a North Carolina group interested in building a coal-burning electric generator at the Quincy Shipyard.

The venture proposed by Cogentrix could also tied in with efforts by former workers to return to the closed yard and build ships.

The 185-acre yard was recently purchased by the Massachusetts Water Resources Authority for $49 million.

The MWRA has said it will use 35 to 50 acres of the yard as a staging area to transport workers and materials to the Deer Island Sewage Treatment Plant.

It has not announced what it will do with the rest of the property.

"I'm very optimistic," said Peter Gwynn, head of Mass. Shipbuilders which is comprised of former shipyard workers.

"They are one of the largest cogeneration companies in the country," said Gwynn, who explained that he had discussions with Cogentrix dating back to October, 1986.

Cogentrix was scheduled to address Mayor Francis McCauley, Sen. Paul Harold, Rep. Robert Cerasoli, Councillor Theodore DeCrisofaro as well as Gwynn.

Representatives of State St. Bank were also to attend.

According to Harold, the plant which would produce electric energy would not be an incinerator, but a cogeneration plant.

It could sell steam to the shipbuilders and electricity to the New England power grid, Harold said.

The group would build the facility in the Braintree portion of the shipyard, explained Harold.

But the Quincy connection would be that the plant would need water from Quincy, since Braintree would not have

A Year Later

Police Have Suspect In Damon Murder But Not Enough Evidence

It has been one year since Lois Quintiliani Damon of Quincy was brutally murdered in the Braintree convenience store she owned with her husband.

But her husband, William, and daughters Sheena, 5, and Sara, 15 months, are still waiting for the person who killed her to be brought to justice.

According to sources close to the case, authorities have a suspect in the early-morning slaying of Mrs. Damon, 31, in the Dairy Mart on Hayward St. Dec. 14, 1986. She was raped, strangled and stabbed.

But they lack sufficient evidence to ask a grand jury for an indictment.

"I understand and sympathize with the frustration felt by the victim's family, and by the whole community," said Judith A. Cowin, the Norfolk County assistant district attorney who is directing the investigation.

She said authorities are pressing forward.

According to reports, investigators are concentrating on a handwritten message, "Will Open at 7:30," taped to the door of the store and believed written by the murderer.

The message, scrawled on a paper bag, has been matched by at least two experts to a handwriting sample obtained from the suspect.

The suspect, who was known by the Damons as a customer, has been questioned several times by investigators, according to reports.

Some $1,700 was also reportedly stolen from the store.

More than $100,000 has been pledged as a reward for information leading to the conviction of Mrs. Damon's killer.

Owners of the Dairy Mart franchise have offered a $5,000 reward.

Mrs. Damon opened the Dairy Mart that morning because her husband was home sick with the flu.

He has since sold the store.

Hearing On Cafe's Hours, Capacity Jan. 5

By KRISTINE STRENGE

Chevy's Belair Cafe, Parkingway, Quincy Center, will go before the License Board Jan. 5 to show cause why its hours should not be rolled back from 1 a.m. to 11 p.m. and its capacity lowered from 400 to 200.

The roll back of hours had been suggested in a letter by Mayor Francis McCauley who wrote the License Board last week "strongly urging" that the hours be rolled back.

McCauley said he took the action because of complaints from Kinney Systems, which operates the Ross Parking Garage adjacent to Chevy's, alleging drinking outside the establishment.

Police Chief Francis Finn said Tuesday morning at the License Board meeting at City Hall that Chevy's capacity should be lowered.

In an earlier meeting Police Sgt. Richard Laracy said it is difficult to tell if someone is drunk in the lounge because of the number of people that are in the establishment.

Finn also said that Chevy's will appear before the board on three specific cases.

The incidents involved, police said:

- A woman was seriously attacked in the Ross Parking lot Nov. 30, coming from Chevy's where she had been from 7 p.m. until closing had a blood alcohol count of .245, (.10 is legally drunk).
- Four young Quincy men who died in an early Thanksgiving Day auto crash were seen at Chevy's before the accident.
- A 25 year-old man from Scituate who was arrested at Chevy's for being intoxicated.

McCauley also forwarded to the License Board a letter written by Gerard A. Cyr, an attorney for Chevy's.

Cyr said, "Chevy's Belair Cafe desires to operate its business in full compliance with all local licensing requirements, and in a manner which is conducive to the safety of its patrons, and with due regard for the safety and rights of adjacent property owners and the citizens of Quincy."

Animal Shelter Out To Bid In January

Plans for a new, $450,000 animal shelter at the site of the current facility on Broad St. are scheduled to go out to bid in mid-January, according to Mayor Francis McCauley.

McCauley said that he met recently with David Colton, Deputy Commr. of Public Works, and Gale Engineering to discuss the project.

The plans had been scheduled to go out to bid a year ago, but were delayed because of problems with the soil which have since been solved, he noted.

McCauley said he expected construction to get underway in May, and to take seven to nine months. It should be completed by the end of 1988, he said.

"The building is old and dilapidated," said McCauley. "I'm pleased that we are moving on a very important project."

Colton said that the new facility will have room for 15 dogs with indoor-outdoor runs. Cats, kittens and puppies will be housed in a smaller room, he said.

He said that when the old building is torn down at the start of construction, the animals will be moved to a heated garage at the DPW headquarters on Sea St.

Colton said that fences will be erected so that the animals can run.

A heated trailer will also be available as an office for the dog officers, Colton said.

Norma Gacicia Named To Hospital Board

Mayor Francis McCauley announces the appointment o Mrs. Norma A. Gacicia of 20 Stanley Circle, Quincy, to the Quincy City Hospital Board of Managers.

She will fill the unexpired term of board member Helen I. Cook, who resigned in November.

Mrs. Gacicia's appointment is effective immediately and will expire on the first Monday in January, 1989.

Mrs. Gacicia worked as a medical secretary for a local pediatrician from 1944 to 1954. She is now employed as a realtor and an insurance broker.

NORMA GACICIA

Mrs. Gacicia is also a member of the Quincy Altrusa Club, Stella Del Norde Lodge #1436 and the Quincy Citizens Association.

She and her husband Peter, owned and managed an insurance agency. A graduate of Quincy High School, she has three children, Susan, Peter and Alan.

Quincy To Benefit From Open Space Program

Governor Michael S. Dukakis has signed into law the largest open space program in Massachusetts history aimed at acquiring public open space, preserving farm land, and protecting watersheds.

Rep. Michael W. Morrissey of Quincy attended the signing ceremony and pointed out that there are several appropriations for the Quincy and South Shore area.

"The residents of Quincy will benefit from this open space bill in many ways. Most importantly, it will provide over $10 million for flood protection and flood related programs in the Town Brook basin," Morrissey said.

The open space bond issue contains funds for more than two dozen programs to protect, preserve and enhance critical environmental areas. It includes funds for farmland preservation, watershed protection and acquisition of wildlife corridors and land along rivers and streams.

There are also funds to acquire properties along the Neponset River to continue the rehabilitation and completion of a greenbelt from Castle Island to the Blue Hills Reservation.

"The M.D.C. has gone to great lengths to make this area most attractive to local residents and to provide public access to the water's edge. The Boston Harbor Islands will also receive funds for rehabilitation facilities on the islands," Morrissey said.

It is important to point out that there is more than $30 million for land acquisition at the Wachusetts and Sudbury Watersheds to further protect the M.D.C. water supply, and $15 million for the D.E.Q.E., to provide funds for a Aquifer Land Acquisition Program to issue grants to cities and towns to acquire land for protecting groundwater resources.

"As a member of the Water Supply Commission, I am happy that the state is taking steps to ensure the future drinking water supply by making funds available to preserve land around our drinking water resources to protect it from contamination," Morrissey said.

"I am pleased that this bond issue has included funds for the purchase of public marina rights to preserve the public's access to marinas; funds for improvements to public docks and funds for dredging public channels. The proposed Marina Acquisition Fund will work similar to the current Agricultural Fund which will allow the state to buy the development rights of a marina, which will help relieve the constant pressure that marina owners are under to sell them valuable waterfront space. There is something here for everybody in the state, from the Berkshires to Boston. I am happy to be a part of it."

Q: What's up and coming in health care?

Quincy City Hospital will sponsor a two-session program, "Early Pregnancy - For Healthy Mom and Healthy Baby," for expectant women in their early stages of pregnancy, beginning Thursday, Jan. 7.

The program, which is for women only, will cover the emotional and physical changes of pregnancy, fetal development, nutrition, exercises, and other information that will guide mothers-to-be in making important decisions for themselves and their baby.

Classes will be held from 7 to 9 p.m. on two consecutive Thursdays, Jan. 7 and 14, in the Childbirth Education Classroom of the Family-Centered Maternity Unit. Expectant women, regardless of their hospital affiliation, may call 773-6100, extension 3017, to register for the program, or to receive a brochure. The program is free to all participants.

Quincy Hospital offers classes in Sibling Orientation and Breastfeeding, as well as the program in early pregnancy education. Information on any of the maternity programs sponsored by the hospital may be obtained by calling 773-6100, and asking for the Family-Centered Maternity Unit.

Liquor Establishments Open Until 2 A.M. For New Year's

The city License Board voted Tuesday to continue the tradition of allowing liquor establishments to stay open until 2 a.m. New Years Eve.

City Clerk John Gillis, also chairman of the board said it is only fair for the clubs to remain open so they can compete with other towns. "The establishments pay big taxes and big money for licenses," he said.

Police Chief Francis Finn stressed that proper precautions must be taken.

Finn suggests that the clubs give pins to designated drivers and allow them to receive free tonic and coffee.

"If people don't have a designated driver then it's the responsibility of the club," stated Finn.

He also said, in spite of the tragedies Quincy has had, he does not attribute an extra hour for the establishments a factor. The problem is that the people are not being monitored properly.

DeCristofaro Wants Old Quincy Lumber Co. For Open Space

Ward 2 Councillor Ted DeCristofaro has written to Gov. Michael Dukakis requesting his assistance in acquiring the area of the former Quincy Lumber Company for open space.

DeCristofaro said:

"I call your attention to the former Quincy Lumber Company located on Southern Artery in Quincy.

"This area is the last piece of open space that we would like to utilize for something other than development.

"It consists of five acres of land that has been vacated by the former Quincy Lumber company.

"Rep. Robert Cerasoli and myself have been working with William Geary of the M.D.C. concerning the future utilization of this land.

"We would appreciate any assistance you could render to ensure that this land could be acquired for open space."

City Budgets Due

Mayor Francis McCauley has asked city department heads to submit their budgets for fiscal 1988 by Jan. 11.

"Basically we are requesting level funding," said McCauley.

"We'll sit down and review all the budgets with the department heads at the end of January and the beginning of February.

"Then we will wait for the Cherry Sheets to see what money we will get from the state," said McCauley.

Last year, the Cherry Sheets were released in early March, according to the mayor.

Christmas Mailing Tips From The Post Office

Don't let your holiday greetings end up in the dead letter office because of poor mail preparation. By following these mailing tips from the U.S. Postal Service cards and packages will get to their destination in time and in good shape for Christmas.

Addressing: Write legibly, use correct ZIP codes and always include a return address. When mailing packages, it's a good idea to include a slip of paper containing address information inside the box in case the outside address label falls off.

Postage: Be sure mail has sufficient postage and keep in mind that non-standard size mail requires a surcharge in addition to postage. The minimum size standard for cards and letters is 3½ inches high by 5 inches long.

Packaging: Use a sturdy carton adequate in size for the item being mailed and provide enough space for cushioning material. Seal it with pressure-sensitive, filament-reinforced tape. String and wrapping paper are not recommended. Packages must not exceed 70 pounds and total length and girth must not exceed 108 inches.

Film: Tape a label containing your complete name and address onto the roll of film so that if your film becomes separated from its mailing envelope, it can be returned to you.

This year for the first time, you can purchase your Christmas stamps by telephone, using Visa or MasterCard for payment, by calling 1-800-STAMP-24 (24 hours a day). You can also order them through the Stamps by Mail program from your local post office.

The Postal Service recommends mailing cards and packages as early as possible in the month. But if you've waited until the last minute, Express Mail provides overnight service - delivering even on Christmas Day - at no extra charge over regular Express Mail rates. Just $10.75 for a 2-pound package and $12.85 for 5 pounds - prices even Ebenezer Scrooge would love.

A Cat Named Henry

Okay, so the mayor has a cat he named after me. I'm flattered.

SANDRA

Especially since the mayor's wife, Sandra, told me: "Henry is really a good cat. He's friendly and behaves himself."

Well, if you're going to have a cat named after you, it's nice to know he's not some kind of a rogue out prowling all night.

I had a goldfish named after me once. I never had to worry about him cavorting. You always knew where he was.

Cats are more fun than goldfish, though.

We have a tiger cat named Maggie. I haven't told her about the mayor's Henry yet. Don't know how she would take it.

Cats are characters. So independent -- except when they're hungry, then they're buddy-buddy.

Cleveland Amory who fell for a stray cat that apparently got his foot inside the door and took over the house, probably said it best when he started a recent article like this: "For anyone who has ever been owned by a cat ..."

Anyway, as I said, I'm flattered that His Honor, Frank McCauley, named his cat after me.

But I can't understand why the Ledger is trying to make an issue out of Henry.

They infer that Henry is evidence that there is some kind of collusion between McCauley and me to deprive the Ledger from owning the town news-wise.

In his Ledger column, Eric Schwartz pouted:

"Indeed, much space in this column has been devoted to my predecessor's (Phil Dine) complaint that Mayor Frank McCauley and other city officials preserve a close relationship with Bosworth by delaying news releases until Tuesday afternoon allowing The Quincy Sun to break the news the same day as the Ledger.

"Perhaps more illustrative is this morsel of information: during the recent election campaign McCauley picked up a new family kitten and named it Henry, after Bosworth."

Boy, that's a scoop!

Aw, c'mon, why drag the poor cat into an old Ledger pet peeve?

Dine beat that one to death before he left the Ledger for St. Louis. Now it's Schwartz' turn at bat. And when he leaves town, the next guy will want to take a shot. And the next one after him.

Frankley, this is getting a little tiring and boring.

The Ledger's beef is that by holding some Tuesday afternoon press conferences or issuing news releases Tuesday afternoon McCauley allows The Sun "to break the news the same day as the Ledger."

Imagine that!

Not allowing The Sun to get the news first. But to get it the same day -- one day in the week.

As we have argued before and still take the same stand, a mayor, governor, senator, or president has the right to call a press conference when he wants to and when feels he will be able to reach more people with what he has to announce.

The Sun comes out once a week, the Ledger six days. Apparently the Ledger wants it all to themselves every day.

Once upon a time the Ledger did have it that way. There was no Quincy Sun, no WJDA and no Quincy Cablesystem. And what you got back then was what the Ledger wanted you to get. Period.

Some 25 years ago, the then Quincy Patriot Ledger decided to drop the name Quincy from its banner. It became a regional newspaper. And it's a good one.

But by taking Quincy out of its name, however, it surrendered it's role as a Quincy newspaper to adopt a new one as a regional newspaper.

Why a big daily that claims to be the largest afternoon newspaper in the state seems to get paranoid about a little weekly getting a news story or two the same day it does is hard to understand.

But isn't it getting to the ridiculous stage when a cat gets dragged into it as an inference of collusion?

Now, if Steve McGrath, Pat Toland or Joe LaRata happen to get a puppy for Christmas and name it Henry, would that mean there's a conspiracy afoot to overthrow the Ledger?

That's how silly it all is.

TWO OR THREE months ago, WJDA's Herb Fontaine while walking his toy poodle Pierre noticed that Maypole Rd., in Merrymount had two different signs.

FONTAINE

The sign at the portion that enters Samoset Ave. said Maypole Rd. but the other end which enters into Furnace Brook Parkway had a sign saying "Maypole St."

He wondered which was correct: road or street and whether residents' mail might be getting fouled up as a result. So he mentioned it on his newscast a couple of weeks ago. Four days later while Pierre was taking him for a walk, he discovered the Maypole St. sign was replaced by a Maypole Rd. one.

So out there in radio land the right person heard the newscast and corrected the boo-boo.

Well done, Herb. But give Pierre an assist.

New Ward 5 Councillor Has Deep Roots

Phelan: 'I Intend To Protect The Character Of The Area'

(This is the second in a series of three profiles on Quincy's three new city councillors who will take office in January).

By NANCY McLAUGHLIN

Charles Phelan, Jr., 30, was born and raised in the section of Quincy which he will represent when he is sworn in as the new Ward 5 City Councillor in January.

"I've lived at the same address on Kemper St. all my life," said Phelan, a data processing supervisor for Burke Distributing, Randolph.

"It has given me good insights into the needs of the area," he said. Phelan will represent Wollaston.

Among those needs are improved traffic lights at such intersections as Elm Ave. and Hancock St., he said.

"It's very difficult to get out of Elm Ave. to Hancock St. because of the traffic," said Phelan.

"A lot of the lights in the area need parts replaced."

Phelan said basic city services need to be improved as well, such as street and sidewalk maintenance.

"Wollaston has a heavy population of senior citizens," he said. "If a sidewalk is cracked, it can be very dangerous particularly for the elderly.

"It's part of my job to bring such problems to the attention of the city."

Phelan sees Wollaston as a stable community of neighborhoods.

"Once people move there, they tend to stay there," he said.

"I intend to protect the character of the area, and look very carefully at any development which might impact such things as sewer, water and traffic."

Phelan said he is monitoring the construction of 240 condominium units being constructed on Linden St.

"I want to look at the traffic impact," he said.

He also said he will keep an eye on the recently reopened Wollaston School to make sure that it stays open.

"A lot of families in Wollaston are very concerned about schools," said Phelan. "The Wollaston School is the only school in Wollaston."

Phelan was elected to the City Council in November after his first campaign for public office.

"I come from a long line of community and public servants, and this is the way I've chosen to put something back in," he said.

CHARLES PHELAN, JR.

His father, Charles Phelan, Sr., was a Quincy police officer for 32 years before he retired. One grandfather was a lieutenant for the fire department, and the other a laborer for the city.

In addition, his mother's cousin was the late John Quinn, who served on the City Council for a record 24 years.

Phelan credits his campaign organization for helping to put him over the top.

"Any candidate realizes it's not a one-man show. It's the key people who work for you."

Phelan has worked on numerous campaigns for other candidates, and was campaign manager for School Committee member Stephen Durkin.

A member of the Quincy and Ward 5 Democratic Committees, he has been a delegate to the Democratic convention for the last five out of six years.

Phelan sees his business background as a plus for the council.

"I think I can help the city as far as my expertise with data processing," he said.

Phelan said he would like to see the council plan more for the future in such areas as solid waste.

"We should look for alternatives to burying trash," he said.

"I think we should also plan development more wisely than in the past.

"Before we expand, we need to bring city services up to par.

"There was a time that we needed development in the city, but we have gone past that.

"It's time to slow down."

Phelan feels the City Council's Task Force on Zoning has gone a long way to limiting development.

"People should adhere to the Zoning Task Force ordinances," he said, "and the Zoning Board of Appeals should be careful about granting variances."

He also thinks the city should take the lead in bringing economic development to Quincy Sq., and the council should monitor the Massachusetts Water Resources Authority's plans for the Quincy Shipyard.

A 1981 graduate of Northeastern University, Phelan feels his major in criminal justice has given him a good background in sociology and political science.

"It peaked my interest in politics," he said.

One of the ways Phelan plans to keep accessible to his constituents is by holding office hours 7 to 9 p.m. on the first and third Thursdays of the month at the Beechwood Community Life Center on Fenno St.

"I hope it will be a good way to keep in touch with people," he said.

100th Anniversary License Plates On Sale

The committee formed to celebrate the 100th Anniversary of Quincy as a city now has a commemorative license plate on sale which would make a low cost unique gift for the upcoming holidays.

The distinctive red, white, and blue plate is being offered to promote the anniversary year "1988." Priced at $5 it would make an ideal stocking stuffer, or a last minute gift for the person on your shopping list that has everything.

The plate is available at the following Quincy Sq. stores, which are volunteering to sell the plates as a public service; Colman's Sporting Goods, Sweets and Things, and Baskin Robbins Ice Cream.

They will also be available at the Quincy Historical Society Gift Shop, the Quincy Department of Civil Defense, the Mayor's office, Quincy Recreation Department, Beechwood Community Life Center, Squantum Community Center, Ward II Community Center, Manet Community Health Center, and the West Quincy Community Center.

Proceeds will help defray the cost of the 100th Anniversary Committee Public Events planned for 1988.

Blood Pressure Screening At Quincy Hospital Jan. 5

Quincy City Hospital will conduct a free blood pressure screening for the general public Tuesday, Jan. 5 in the Ambulatory Care Department from 1:30 p.m. to 3 p.m.

The Ambulatory Care Department is located in Hunting-1.

The screenings, performed by nursing staff, will enable the individual to keep track of his blood pressure, and to be aware of dangerous elevations in the pressure. Persons in need of referral to a physician will be advised to do so. Referrals to physicians are possible through the QCH Doctor Directory at the individual's request.

The screenings, which take place at the hospital on the first and third Tuesday of each month, are free of charge. All are welcome to attend.

Shipyard Launches 37th Warship Of Year

1944
43 Years Ago

The Fore River Shipyard was preparing to launch its 37th warship of 1944, the cruiser Providence, with 28 Quincy school children [redacted] attending as special guests for their work in the sixth War Loan Drive.

The youngsters represented 24 public schools, three parochial schools and the Woodward School for Girls, [redacted] the students of which sold $108,546 worth of war bonds and stamps during a three-day campaign.

They not only attended the launching but they were driven to the Yard from City Hall in a new-fangled vehicle called a "jeep" and were guests of Mayor Charles A. Ross at a buffet luncheon in Quincy USO headquarters.

Meanwhile, workers at the Fore River Shipyard, rushing to complete work on the cruiser Columbus, set what was believed to be a world record by lifting into place the vessel's 300-ton deckhouse.

POLLUTION FIGHT URGED

Quincy Health Commissioner Dr. Richard M. Ash warned that a program to rid Boston Harbor of pollution should get underway right away instead of waiting until the end of the war.

"This job is a must for 1945 at the latest." he said. "To defer action until a later date is to gamble with the health of our own people and those of other communities on these waters."

Festive Ambrosia
An Ann Marie Specialty

While my daughter Sue and Ann Marie were sitting by the fireplace and looking at the Christmas tree, we were reminiscing how much fun Christmas used to be. Now we spend too much time worrying about what to buy and not enough time to enjoy the season. But we made the time this past week and guess what? We talked about food! And this great festive dessert Ann Marie makes. Here is the recipe:

ANN MARIE'S
FESTIVE AMBROSIA

1 pint heavy cream
(whipped with added sugar & vanilla)
1 cup miniature white marshmallows
1 can ;mandarin oranges (drained)
1 small can crushed pineapple (drained)
a half container frozen strawberries
(without syrup)
2 kiwis (peeled and sliced)
¼ cup crushed walnuts (optional)
¼ cup shredded coconut

After you have whipped the cream, add all the other ingredients, reserving a couple of slices of kiwi and strawberries to garnish the top. If you fix each dish individually, a slice of kiwi and a strawberry on top looks real Christmasy. And it is so easy to fix the day before with one exception - don't put the marshmallows in the mixture. They tend to get soggy. Just keep them chilled until the dessert is ready to be served. Merry Christmas!

Marie D'Olimpio is the author of "Simply Italian-And Then Some," a collection of her own recipes. Copies of the book are available at That's Italian, Franklin St., South Quincy; Previte's Market, Sumner St., Quincy Point , Samoset Pharmacy, Samoset Ave., Merrymount and Winfield Gift Emporium, Hancock St., Quincy Center.

'Welcome Back Day' Honors Substitute Teachers

A "Welcome Back Day" for substitute teachers in the Quincy Public Schools was held recently in the arts and humanities room of the Administration Building, 70 Coddington St.

Among the purposes of the event was to express the administration's and teachers' appreciation for the jobs the substitutes have done.

"I substituted in Quincy for three years and had very positive experiences," said Atherton Hough teacher Linda Billikas, one of the organizers of the day.

"But I ran into a few substitutes who did not feel appreciated.

"When I was hired full time by the system, I felt obligated to try to make substitutes feel more appreciated.

"I thought a handbook or guidebook would be helpful and a substitute appreciation day would be superb."

Billikus said she received the support of Carmen Mariano, personnel director, and Alicia Coletti.

"Every Quincy teacher I asked to contribute to the booklet was delighted and many teachers showed their appreciation of the substitutes by attending last spring's appreciation day.

"With supportive administration and teachers and happy substitutes, we can't help but make the school days better for our Quincy students," she said.

During the recent appreciation day, substitute handbooks were given out, as were Christmas booklets of ideas for the classroom during December days.

Fourth Sunday In Advent At Point Congregational Church

Dec. 20 marks the Fourth Sunday in Advent at Quincy Point Congregational Church when church members and friends and visitors will gather for the 10 a.m. service of worship.

The church is located at 444 Washington St., Quincy at Washington St. and Southern Artery.

Pastors Reverends Fred and Carol Atwood-Lyon will conduct the service together.

In preparation for each Sunday in Advent, the Altar and Flower Guild chaired by Mrs. Carol McGhee has added Christmas decorations inside and outside the church with door wreaths and garlands and candles. Each week, another candle of the Advent Wreath is lighted, signifying the 400 years before the birth of Christ in which there was no significant prophetic voice in Israel.

On Christmas Eve, during the 7:30 p.m. Family Candlelight Service of Lessons and Carols and the 10 p.m. Christmas Eve Candlelight Service, the pastors will light the Christ Candle, signifying Christ's birth.

This Sunday, one of the pastors will preach on "The Incredible Claim Is Made Credible." Organist-choir director, Herman Weiss, will play "As With Gladness Men of Old" by Markworth and "Joy to the World" by Gehrke. The church school children will sing "Mary's Boy Child" before going to their classrooms. The Chancel Choir will sing Handel's "Hallelujah Chorus"; and Kimberley Blaney, soprano soloist, will sing "O Holy Night" by Adam.

Child care is provided for infants in the newly decorated and furnished Crib Room so that parents of very young children may attend worship. Church school classes are provided for nursery children (ages 3 and 4) through and including high school each Sunday. Parents who wish to enroll their children or young people in the church school may do so by telephoning the church office at 773-6424 or by speaking to Glenn McGhee, church school superintendent, any Sunday morning at the church.

Family Christmas Services At United First Parish Church

This Sunday, United First Parish Church, "Church of the Presidents," will hold its traditional Family Christmas Service at 10:30 a.m.

Young people of the Church School will participate in the service and children are welcome to attend the service with their parents. Dr. Sheldon W. Bennett, minister, will deliver the sermon, "The Surprise of Christmas." Child care will be provided for toddlers. Visitors are welcome and are invited to the social hour following.

The Youth Choir, under the direction of Sally Bohl, will sing "It Came Upon the Midnight Clear." This familiar carol was written by Edmund Hamilton Sears at the request of his friend Rev. William Parsons Lunt, who was at that time the minister of United First Parish Church here in Quincy, where the carol was first introduced at the 1849 Sunday School Christmas celebration. The carol emphasizes the social message of Christmas - Peace on earth, good will towards men."

Traditional Christmas readings from the Gospel of Luke, Chapter 2, will be read by Gabrielle Bennett, Stephanie Post and Alana Keto of the Church School. Jane Molloy and her son Brendan will light the 4th candle of the Advent wreath, and Tom and Carla Keto will serve as ushers.

The Church Choir, under the direction of Norman Corey, will sing the anthems "Lo, How a Rose E'er Blooming" by Praetorius and "Up, O Shepherds," by Schroeder. Mr. Corey will also play organ works by Pachelbel and Bach.

On Christmas Eve, Thursday, Dec. 24, at 7:30 p.m., the church will hold its traditional Candlelight Christmas Eve Service. The service will include carols and readings from scripture and modern sources, and will close with the distribution of candlelights among the congregation as "Silent Night, Holy Night" is sung. Young people of the church will serve as candlelighters. They are Jamie Beauchamp, Gabrielle Bennett, Zoe Bohl, Eddie Costello, Alana Keto, and Stephanie Post.

The Church Choir will sing Christmas anthems accompanied by the church organ and guest instrumentalists. Visitors are cordially invited to attend.

All the children will be invited to sit in the front while Rev. Fred Lawson explains the meaning of the fourth advent candle. One of the children will then light the candle.

At the 9:30 a.m. Sunday school hour, the participants in the play to be presented that afternoon will rehearse instead of going to their classes.

Rev. Lawson will preach on the topic: "Where Is He?." The scripture will be read by Amanda LaCoste. The choir, directed and accompanied on the organ by Richard Smith, minister of music, will sing "How Lovely Are The Messengers" by Mendelssohn and "And the Glory" from Handel's "Messiah." The prelude, "O Sleeper, Awake" by Bach and the offertory, "Offertorial Christmas Carols" by Guilamant, as well as the postlude, will be played by Smith.

'Seeing God's Hand' Squantum First Church Topic

The title of the sermon Sunday morning at First Church of Squantum was "Seeing God's Hand in What Happens to Us."

Rev. Dr. Gene Langevin, pastor, preached the sermon at both services. It was preceded by a drama about the journey of the wise men to Bethlehem.

Before the service, Kim and Krista Olson played "Sonatina" as a piano duet.

Emily Zaehring, Kate Johnson, Amy Harper, and Gwen Williamson assisted the pastor in lighting the third candle in the Advent wreath in the second service. That candle stands for love. During the early service, Steven and Scott Catton lighted the candle and led in prayer.

In the later service, the Junior Choir, the Youth Choir, and the Chancel Choir combined to sing, "Ev'ry Child" by Natalie Sleeth. Mary Ruth Scott directed. In the early service, the anthem was "Jesu Bambino."

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

Franz Gruber had hoped the old church organ would hold out at least until Christmas, but the mice had eaten at the bellows too long. Father Josef Mohr, the parish priest told Gruber, "We must have something special for midnight Mass."

Two days before Christmas Father Mohr was called to administer the last sacraments of the church to a dying man. On his journey home through the peaceful countryside the thought of Christmas came upon him. He began to think of that first Christmas night - "It was a quiet night - much like this one," he thought. "It was a holy and silent night." Before he knew it, angels voices were singing in his head. Powerfully affected, he hurried home and began to write. He wrote all evening. The next morning he took the verses he had written to Franz Gruber. Gruber instinctively began to hear a melody in his head. The inspiration was so great that he immediately wrote the melody which we are all so familiar with today. That night Gruber brought his guitar to midnight Mass and gently strummed the Immortal "Silent Night" as Father Mohr sang. The people were so awed with the beauty of the new song that many of them sat with tears streaming down their faces. Each person in church that night carried the beautiful words home in his heart and from that time on the words have been instilled in almost everyone's heart until this very day ...

Coal-Burning Generator Proposed For Shipyard

enough to service the facility, he said.

The plant could tie in with Quincy's water supply which comes from the Quabbin Reservoir, according to Harold.

Or it could use water from the Quincy Dam in Braintree, he said.

That water, which is not drinkable, is owned by Quincy even though it is in Braintree, Harold said.

It had been used for a number of years by General Dynamics, he noted.

Cogentrix would have a business arrangement with Mass. Shipbuilders which would assist shipyard workers in financing part of the shipyard declared surplus by the MWRA, according to Harold.

Harold said that the MWRA has been unable to give a definite estimate of the acreage it will need, or to give a time when it will give a determination.

"Their delay is almost fatal regarding the shipbuilders," said Harold. "Time is of the essence for the shipbuilders.

"The MWRA is operating in a void, with no reference to the impact on shipyard workers, or the shortfall of tax dollars for Quincy."

The state agency is tax exempt.

The MWRA did say that Cogentrix is among 35 to 50 groups or individuals which have submitted inquiries on buying parts of the yard, Harold noted.

Harold said that Cogentrix made a presentation to officials in Braintree who said there could be benefits to the proposal, but that they would like to study it further.

One advantage could be to block a hazardous waste incinerator by Clean Harbors, according to Harold.

No one has given an endorsement of the proposal, noted Harold.

"I want to know the impact on air quality for Quincy and Braintree," he said.

Harold said he also wants to learn more about how the proposal could help shipyard workers.

"It could benefit both," he said. "But we don't have enough details to be able to tell if it is a viable proposal.

"It's still very preliminary."

Last Roadblock Cleared For Town Brook Project

The last roadblock has been cleared in the 10-mile Town Brook Flood Control Project and the final portion of the project should be underway by the summer of 1988, according to Sen. Paul Harold.

At a meeting last Friday in the office of Jamie Hoyte, Secretary of Environmental Affairs, two issues were resolved concerning the multi-million dollar project which has been in the works for more than 25 years, said Harold.

In addition to Hoyt and Harold, the meeting was attended by Col. Thomas Rhen, regional director of the Army Corps of Engineers, Thomas McLaughlin of the Department of Environmental Quality Engineering, and MDC Commr. William Geary.

The issues were resolved by the parties agreeing to replicate at another place in the flood plane .9 acre of marshland which would be destroyed as a result of the flood control project, Harold said.

The marshland is near Southern Artery, where Town Brook meets Town River, explained Harold.

The second controversy involved a plan to prevent erosion in Town Brook itself, he said. It was compounded by the question of whether the federal or state government would have jurisdiction, said Harold.

An understanding was reached that the MDC and Army Corps of Engineers would work together on the plan of erosion, according to Harold.

"The problems were almost insoluble," said Harold. "They were adding to the continual length of the project.

"Some feared that money for the project could be taken out of the federal budget because of the continued delay.

"At last week's meeting, all the controversies were resolved."

Harold explained that the flood control project begins in Braintree below the South Shore Plaza, through Braintree, to South Quincy, Quincy Center, and out to Town River.

"It is the single largest public works project in the city of Quincy," said Harold. "It has been built in segments."

Harold said that the state is putting up an additional $10 million on top of millions of dollars the federal government has appropriated.

"The completed project will protect the people of South Quincy and Quincy Center from ongoing problems with flooding," he said.

Harold noted that the whole corridor of Town Brook, the portion under Route 3, has been completed, as has the section under the Burgin Parkway. A section in Braintree under Common St. is being finished, he said.

Strangers At Your Door

In this week's journal you will see a call for a break in progress on West St. where two men, possibly Haitian, gained entrance to a home by claiming to be from the Water Dept. This is an old scam that has been around for years and primarily pulled on senior citizens.

You should always be very careful who you let into your home. Here are some tips on how to prevent this type of crime from happening to you.

- Have a peep hole installed in your door so that you can see who is at the door.
- Never allow anyone into your home until you are absolutely sure who they are.
  a. If a serviceman comes to your door, Gas Co., Electric Co., Water Dept., Cable TV, or anyone else requesting entrance into your home, check the individual's identification first by having him/her slide it under the door. Everyone of the above named companies have ID's. If after seeing the ID you are still not convinced call the service company to verify that someone was sent to your home. If you still have any doubts call the police and let us check out the individual.
- If someone comes to your door and asks to use your phone because their car is broken down, or any other emergency situation, tell them that you will call the local police and let them assist this party.
- If someone comes to your home and asks for a drink of water let them use your outside faucet or tell them to go somewhere else for their water, and then CALL THE POLICE.

By following these tips you may inconvenience some of the service company representatives, but the old adage of "Better safe than sorry" certainly applies here.

Cancer Society Raises $5,443,537 In State

American Cancer Society volunteers raised a record $5,433,537 during 1987 to support the society's Massachusetts programs of research, education, and service to cancer patients and their families for the upcoming year, Francis L. Coolidge, Esq., chairman of the Massachusetts Division Board of Directors has announced.

This total represents an increase of $242,151 over 1986.

Funds were raised through special events such as Daffodil Days and Jail and Bail, the neighborhood Residential Crusade in April, memorial contributions, and special gifts. An additional $2,287,355 was raised through legacies, bequests, and planned gifts.

The society's Massachusetts Division Board of Directors, comprised of 54 medical and lay volunteers, will determine how the funds are allocated. Priority projects for 1988 include cancer prevention initiatives, information and guidance for cancer patients and their families, public education efforts in breast cancer and mammography, and continued support of innovative cancer research, Coolidge said.

A total of $8.4 million in National American Cancer Society grants supported cancer research in Massachusetts in 1987–almost twice the amount raised by the society here. The American Cancer Society's Massachusetts Division devotes 84 percent of its budget to program services, with 16 percent going toward management and fund raising.

Sylvia In 24th Season

Sees Quincy Improving Last Year's Record

By TOM SULLIVAN

Bob Sylvia began his 24th season as Quincy's hockey coach last night (Wednesday) when the Presidents played at Arlington and the veteran coach feels the team will improve on last year's disappointing 6-14 season.

The Presidents will host Everett Saturday night at 7:50 at the Youth Arena and next Wednesday will play Malden at Malden's Laconte Rink at 6 p.m.

"We have a chance to really do something this year, but the future of hockey at Quincy is very cloudy," said Sylvia. "We had only 32 candidates, including 17 seniors, and only two freshmen reported. For the first time in five years we will be unable to have a freshman team and it doesn't appear we will have a junior varsity team next year.

"The way things are going, we may have no hockey at all after next season. It is a very discouraging picture."

Sylvia has led many of his teams into the state tournament, but Quincy hasn't made the tournament for the past five years. Prior to last season the Presidents had two straight years with only three wins.

Quincy's yellow line is made up of veterans Chris LaForest, Rod Davis and Paul Scola. Sylvia expects Scola to be his best scoring threat and feels Davis and LaForest also will score well.

On the green line are Tim Mann, a transfer from Abp. Williams, who looms as a fine scorer; Hank Miller and Chuck Quigley, who saw a little varsity action a year ago, and Scott Mallon.

The blue line comprises Ken and Karl Staskywicz, Mike Ward, Tony Souza and Joe Cotter.

The defense is made up entirely of veterans, Jon Bertoni, Eric Abboud, Wayne Chambers and Shawn O'Neil.

Greg Chambers, who played well last year, is back in goal and other hopefuls are Mark Holler, Craig Galligan, Fred Regan and Kevin Johnson.

"This is the hardest working group I have had in the last five or six years, and I really think we are capable of doing something this year," said Sylvia. "We definitely will have to score and we should get scoring from the top two lines.

"Greg Chambers was a forward who moved to goal two years ago when we needed a goalie. He had some fine performances last season and he should do well this year. Galligan also has been looking good."

Sylvia was pleased with Quincy's showing last week in a scrimmage against a strong Hanover team, coached by his brother Jim.

Bob Troup is back as junior varsity coach and George Peachey, who was freshmen coach the past several years, will work with Troup, as there will be no freshman team.

QUINCY'S Chuck Jaehnig is a tri-captain of the Bridgewater State College basketball team. The 6-5 Jaehnig, the Bears' center, is the top returning rebounder with 5.4 a game while averaging 10.2 points a game last season. The Quincy junior is a graduate of Boston College High.

Jago, North Quincy Look For Better Hockey Season

The North Quincy hockey team opened last night (Wednesday) against Somerville at the Quincy Youth Arena and coach Kevin Jago was hopeful the Raiders would rebound from a frustrating 4-14-1 season.

North Quincy will play Arlington at Arlington's veterans Memorial Rink Saturday night at 7:15 and will play Everett at Everett's Larson Rink next Wednesday night at 6:40.

Prior to last season the Raiders had made the state tournament three years in a row, making a fine showing in each.

"Last year we just weren't competitive and we gave up too many goals," said Jago. "This year I know we will score and the defense and the goalies will be the keys to our success, as they are with most teams.

"We have an inexperienced team but the boys are working hard. We made a lot of mistakes in a scrimmage against Silver Lake, but we have come along well since then."

North's gold line is made up of three veterans, co-captains Jay Rodrigues and Matt Furtado and senior Billy Dineen, with a fine looking sophomore, Joey Fasano, also working with this line.

Junior Paul McGrath, who has played since a freshman, is the only experienced defenseman. Joining him are sophomores Brian Zimmerman, Jimmy McCarthy and Amando Mancini, juniors Joe and John Keegan and senior Mark Rudnisky.

Jago has three goalies who have looked good in practice. The most experienced is senior Brian Mahoney and he is backed up by Jeff McClory, a junior who saw some action last year, and junior Steve Sugarman.

Rick Avery is back as North's junior varsity coach and Jago has a new freshman coach in former Raider star Peter Furtado.

Mite A's Win

Quincy's Mite A hockey team defeated Needham, 4-1, to improve its Greater Boston League record to 6-1-1. The team, sponsored by the Quincy chapter of the DAV, is tied for third place in the league behind Belmont (8-0-0) and Dorchester (7-1-0).

Mark Regan had two goals for Quincy and Scott Cooper and Matt Watkins one each. David Rowell had two assists and Regan, Cooper, Paul Princiotto and Danny Stone one each.

Sports

Pee Wee B's Remain Undefeated

Quincy's undefeated Pee Wee B hockey team, sponsored by A&T Movers, is preparing for the approaching K of C tournament at the Youth Arena and will put its 15-0-4 record on the line against the best teams available in the annual holiday classic.

Quincy's success is attributed to the unselfish team effort on the players and the complete cooperation of all the parents.

The Pee Wee B's have allowed the fewest goals in the Greater Boston League and the team will be one of the favorites in the K of C tournament.

The coaches thank team managers and treasurers Lou and Beverly Carinci for doing an excellent job with administrative duties, practice coaches Teddy Miller, Steve DesRoche and George Schatzl, Terry Schatzl and Mal Morrell, who keep the players informed of games and practices, and Maryann Mantville, who handles the team's publicity.

Mount, Timmins In Title Showdown Dec. 21

The Mount, which won the summer league championship, will face Timmins Contracting for the fall championship of the Jaehnig Chiropractic Basketball League Monday night at 8:15 p.m. at St. Joseph's Hall, Quincy Point. The Jaehnig Club will meet Joe's Pub in the consolation game at 7 p.m.

The Mount remained unbeaten with a 72-65 win over the Jaehnig Club, which held the high scoring Mark Millane to a season low 19 points. The sharp shooting Mount perimeter players provided the necessary outside support to gain the win. Bruno Giles had 14 points, Kurt O'Sullivan 13 and Jim Rehnquist 12. Rich Maguire scored 20 for Jaehnig, Mark Jaehnig had 17 and Marty Connolly 10.

Timmins rallied to topple Joe's Pub, 60-51. Joe's, led by Paul Forbes' 21 points, held a six-point halftime lead but Timmins battled back as it has done all year, despite having to play most of the year with only five players. Steve Millane had 19 points for Timmins, John Timmins and Kevin Hourihan had 14 each and Billy Murphy 11.

In the opening round the Mount defeated the Question Marks, 74-57, with Millane leading the way with 23 points. Giles had 18, O'Sullivan 14 and Ray Baltz 12. John Updigraph had 15 for the Question Marks.

Timmins Contracting, playing with only five men, topped Lower Hills, 75-67, in a game that was tied with only 1:30 left in the game. Timmins was spectacular, collecting 31 points on an assortment of long jump shots and twisting drives. Steve Millane chipped in with 19 points. Mike Keeley had 24 to spark Lower Mills.

Joe's Pub bounced back from a 14-point halftime deficit behind Billy Dacey's outstanding second half shooting to defeat the Quincy Nets, 68-56. Dacey had 22 points for Joe's, Dean Coletti had 21 and Pat Bradley, who had a strong rebounding game, scored 13. Jim Conboy and Rick Stoltz each had 14 for the Nets.

Chuck Jaehnig scored 12 of his 16 points in the second half to lead the Jaehnig Club to a 59-54 win over the Casey Club. Maguire had 12 points, Connolly and Mark Jaehnig 10 each for Jaehnig, while Mark Dwyer, David Britt, Jim Kelly and Mike Jaehnig were outstanding on defense. Paul Wholey led the Casey Club with a game-high 28 points.

Squirt C's Open With Tie

Quincy's Squirt C hockey team opened its season by tying Norwood, 4-4.

Quincy overcame a 4-1 deficit to earn the tie as Josh Wingate scored two goals and Tom Moriarty and Sean McDonald one each. Brendan Mulcahy had two assists and Moriarty, Jenna Nolan, Wingate and Travis Greenwood one apiece.

REVIEWING LARGE SCALE improvements made to the MDC's Shea Rink West in Quincy are Rep. Robert Cerasoli, Rep. Michael Morrissey, Senator Paul Harold and MDC Commissioner William Geary.

Improvements Made At Shea Rink

State Senator Paul D. Harold, along with State Reps. Michael W. Morrissey and Robert A. Cerasoli joined Metropolitan District Commissioner William J. Geary recently to review completed improvements made to the MetroParks Shea Rink on Willard St. in Quincy.

The large scale improvements include the replacement of the ice bed and the refrigeration system as well as the installation of new dasherboards around the skating surface of the Shea Rink. After securing the necessary funding, the legislators, along with Rep. Thomas F. Brownell, worked with Commissioner Geary and other MDC officials to ensure that all repairs and improvements would be done in a timely fashion without interruption to the skating season.

In his comments, Geary praised the legislators saying, "Senator Harold, Representative Morrissey, Representative Cerasoli and Representative Brownell were instrumental in providing the funding that made the improvements to the rink possible. Thanks to their generous support, residents of the Quincy area can enjoy a first-class ice skating facility for many winter seasons to come."

The Shea Rink, which opened recently, offers a varied schedule of public skating and ice rental. It is one of 22 ice skating rinks operated by MetroParks throughout the metropolitan area.

MetroParks, a service of the Metropolitan District Commission, offers free activities for people of all ages. For more information on MetroParks activities, contact the MDC's Public Information Office at 727-5215.

South Quincy Trojans Left Unmatched Mark

By TOM SULLIVAN

Quincy has had its share of outstanding semi-pro and pro football teams through the years and among the best were the South Quincy Trojans jof 1936, who won the Quincy City League championship with a perfect unbeaten, untied and unscored-upon record.

The Trojans repeated for the league crown in 1937, but that team did not have the impact of the 1936 team, which was rated a dark horse at best in the league.

The Trojans opened by surprising the Atlantic A.A., 6-0, on a pass from Art Rochelle to Capt. Bill DeCoste.

The Trojans dropped an 8-6 decision to the Cunningham A.C. in a non-league game, with DeCoste scoring in the first quarter, again on a pass from Rochelle. A rush for the extra point failed. Cunningham scored two points on a safety in the second quarter and the Milton team, which had a huge weight advantage, scored the winning touchdown in the final quarter thanks to a freak punt. Coleman Flaherty got off a nice punt that landed on Milton's 49, but a strong wind and several dizzy hops brought the ball back to the Trojans' 27 to set up the score.

The Trojans then outplayed a strong Hyde Park A.A. team but lost, 7-0, to another team which had a big weight advantage.

The South Quincy team returned to league action and scored an impressive 12-0 victory over the President City Club. Orre Carella and DeCoste scored the touchdowns as the team moved into a top tie with the Quincy Town Team.

The West Quincy Maroons dropped out of the league and, with teams scheduled to meet them being awarded the points, the Trojans were atop the league with a 3-0 mark.

In a return game with the Hyde Park A.A., the Trojans rolled to a 25-0 win at Pfaffmann's Oval, featured by the passing of Rochelle, Carella scored twice and Vic Lange and Flaherty once each.

Scoring 18 points in the final quarter, the Trojans battered the South Boston Shamrocks, 25-0, with Carella again scoring twice and Amio Hill and Lange once each. Fullback Stevie Burke had a big day.

The Trojans went on to wallop the Milton Shamrocks, 26-0, in a game played at Braintree's Hollis Field. This was Braintree's first semi-pro game in years and was played there because several Trojans were well-known in the Braintree section.

Lange, Carella, Les Walsh and DeCoste had the Trojan touchdowns.

Next came a 6-0 league victory over the Fore River Apprentices. A blocked kick was recovered by Hill on Fore River's 21 and, following a pass from Rochelle to DeCoste which put the ball on the four, Lange scored the game's only points.

The Trojans clinched the league crown with a 2-0 win over the Quincy Town team, on a snow-covered Oval gridiron. Eddie Bonner tackled The Townies' Newell in the end zone for the only points of a hard-fought game.

This was the Trojans' first season in the league and few gave them a chance to win the title. Coach Pat Ward branded himself as the outstanding coach on the South Shore.

One of the few who had faith in them was the late Lin Raymond, sports writer for the Quincy Evening News and later one of the top sports writers for the Patriot Ledger for many years.

The Trojans were considered as just a stepping stone for the other clubs in the league, but Raymond wrote, "The 'dark horses' of the City League will perhaps be the Quincy Trojans, but if they can get in some practice between now and the opening game, don't be surprised if they wade through their much heavier league rivals."

Another Trojan supporter was the late 'Honey' Collins. Following the team's unbeaten, untied and unscored-upon championship four years earlier in the Junior League, Collins said, "If you Trojans stick together, you'll some day win the City League crown."

Carella, Hill, Service and DeCoste were named to the official league all-star team. DeCoste and Carella scored 24 points each and Lange 20 in league competition.

According to the point system devised by the Quincy Evening News sports department, St. Francis A.A. of South Weymouth was named the official South Shore champions, with the Trojans just behind.

St. Francis received a 3.33 percentage and the Trojans finished with an average of 3.10 per cent.

Cooper, Provost Power Squirt A's

Dave Cooper scored five goals and Steve Provost had four to lead Quincy's Squirt A hockey team to a 15-2 rout of Dedham in the Greater Boston League.

Eric Zimmerman and Doug Nolan had two goals apiece and Billy Coughlin and Lee Hughes one each. Zimmerman and Nolan each had five assists, Pat Connolly three, Danny Beaton, Brian Bartkus and Coughlin two each and Paul King, Hughes and Cooper one apiece.

In non-league play the Squirt A's edged King Philip, 7-6, with Cooper having a hat trick, and Brendan O'Brien, Hughes, Bartkus and Nolan a goal each. Connolly and Nolan had two assists apiece and King, O'Brien, Zimmerman and Provost one each.

Jay Evans, Danny Donahue, David Pacino, Bartkus, King and Beaton continued their fine defensive play and Brad Watkins and Mark Smith continue to look good in goal.

Bregoli Looking For Good Season For Raiderettes

Paul Bregoli, returning for his eighth season as North Quincy girls' basketball coach, is looking forward to another successful season.

The Raiderettes have qualified for the Eastern Mass. Tournament the last two seasons and four of the last seven years under Bregoli. North is 90-50 during that time.

The Raiderettes, who opened Tuesday against Everett and who will play at Malden Friday at 3:30 and will host Arlington next Monday at 5 p.m., are led by Tri-Capt. Nancy Flukes, their all-everything player who will be doing just that, a little bit of everything. She is a two-year Suburban League all-star.

Tri-Capt. Patty Feeney will start at small forward and is expected to contribute points and play tough defense.

Karrie Pistorino is North's other tri-captain and will start at guard. She will be looked to for her floor leadership and her harassing defense.

Rita Rooney, a 5-9 senior, will start at center. A hard worker, she will be expected to do a large share of the rebounding and contribute offensively from underneath.

Rounding out the starting five is junior guard Paula Tolson, a fine shooter, who will also help with the ball-handling duties.

Also expected to see considerable action will be senior Stacey Welch, an excellent outside shooter; Kellene Duffy, junior guard; Tarra Meyer, senior forward; Melissa Miles, senior forward; Karin Reister, junior center; Kerry Tolson, sophomore forward; Kerri McDonald, senior guard, and Beth Bunker, senior forward.

Debbie Panaro, a standout on the state championship volleyball team, recently had her appendix removed, but should return after the holidays.

"I think our strength will be that we have a senior group which has been successful in the previous three years," said Bregoli. "This should carry over to this year and, although we will be small up front, defensively we will be quick and will pressure teams all over.

"Our pre-season went well. We beat Sandwich, Cohasset and Sharon in scrimmages, but our home opener against Everett will be very difficult as they are very big up front. But I expect to get a real good effort from everyone. Naturally, Nancy Flukes will be counted upon to play well, but our teams have characteristically had several other players who can score when we need them. Feeney, Tolson, Rooney and Welch all have that ability. And Pistorino will be our spark plug. She is a tough defensive player and gets the whole team going with her gutsy play."

Ken Panaro is back for his third year as junior varsity coach. Last year his team finished second to Brockton in the league.

Earl Metzler, a teacher at Sterling Middle School who attended Bridgewater State, is the new freshman coach.

Finnegan Making Name As California YMCA Trainer

By TOM SULLIVAN

Ritch Finnegan, a graduate of Quincy High where he played basketball on one of the Presidents' better teams, is making a name for himself as a one-on-one trainer at the Glendale, Cal., YMCA, where he is beginning to work with some movie people.

The 26-year-old director of adult and corporate fitness at the Glendale Y graduated from Springfield College, where he played basketball and volleyball, with a degree in health fitness.

"Ritch is also a fine handball player and is an alternate on the 1988 Olympic team," said his father, Quincy athletic coordinator Marty Finnegan.

"Recently he received a call from Beverly Hills and was told some movie people were interested in taking his course."

Mary E. Forgione, a staff writer for the Glendale News-Press, recently joined Finnegan's class and wrote about her experience.

She admitted to being overweight and wrote:

"I declared nuclear war on fat. I met Ritch Finnegan and when he asked me what I wanted from a personal instructor, I told him all he had to do was make me look like Raquel Welch.

"I was ready to eat nothing but pineapple until my lips burned, down as many liquids as I could siphon through a straw and do leg lifts until gravity prevailed. During my tirade, Ritch never laughed or belittled me. Worse, he tried to educate me.

"He started by telling me that, as my personal trainer, he would help me set realistic goals and teach me how to achieve and maintain them. I agreed that I would abide by whatever he asked of me."

Finnegan began by doing a physical fitness evaluation of her. She said she broke into a nervous sweat when Ritch came to her with a pair of skinfold calipers, tong-like instruments that painlessly measure the amount of fat on your body. "It's like the Special K pinch but more accurate," he said.

"He measured the fleshy part of my hips, abdomen, triceps, thighs and upper back and informed me that roughly 32 per cent of my 150 pounds was fat," she said. "He also took my blood pressure, heart rate (resting and active) and tested my endurance and flexibility with situps, bench presses, bicycling. I then embarked on a program that was nothing like the living hell I had anticipated.

"He started by asking me what I liked to do. He assured me that I would get a proper workout doing these things I enjoyed - activities that could turn into a habit rather than a chore. I told him he would have to settle for running and biking. He took that into consideration and started me on a fitness program that had one key ingredient - variety."

She added that seeing him three times a week for one-hour sessions, she realized that she felt more of a commitment to working out. "It was nice to have my own personal cheerleader," she said.

Miss Forgione said she lost five pounds in three weeks, lowered her percentage of body fat and increased her flexibility and upper body strength.

"And yes, I felt much better," she concluded.

Sheehan Shines In Net As Mite B's Win

Quincy's Mite B hockey team, sponsored by the Quincy Firefighters Association, defeated Belmont, 5-1, behind the stellar goaltending of Timmy Sheehan, for its fifth win in a row.

Quincy will play Brookline Saturday night at the Boston Skating Club and Sunday at 2 p.m. will host undefeated All-Bright at the Youth Arena.

In the first period Chris DiMattia took charge of the defense as he and Eric Joyce, Matt Langille and Timmy Wood worked together to hold the Belmont offense in check at the blue line. They were put to the test when Quincy was shorthanded late in the period.

Joyce gave Quincy a 1-0 lead with an unassisted goal in the second period and John Manning scored two minutes later for a 2-0 lead. John Barron was outstanding with his fine back checking and Joe Bracken, Betsy Stone and John Dobbins played good positions hockey and contributed some solid passing.

In the third period Manning made it 3-0 and Langille sent a bullet pass from the point to Tommy Sullivan, who scored the fourth goal.

Belmont answered with its only goal. Quincy wings Jeff Coleman, Eric Wood and Billy Barron dug in the corners and peppered the Belmont goalie, who made several fine saves.

Sullivan stole the puck at mid-ice and scored the final goal with 44 seconds left.

Excel Bancorp And Lincoln Trust Sign Definitive Agreement

Excel Bancorp, Inc. and Lincoln Trust Company announce the signing of a definitive agreement providing for the acquisition of Lincoln by Excel.

A preliminary agreement was announced Oct. 12.

Terms of the cash acquisition will provide Lincoln common stockholders a total consideration of $137.77 per share, or an aggregate of $37 million. Shareholders of Lincoln's preferred stock will receive par value per share, or an aggregate of $500,000.

In connection with the agreement, Lincoln granted to Excel an option to purchase up to 31,432 shares of Lincoln's common stock.

This acquisition is subject to the approval of regulatory agencies and Lincoln's stockholders. Completion is expected by mid-1988. Following the acquisition, Lincoln Trust will become a wholly-owned subsidiary of Excel Bancorp.

"We believe this acquisition is in the best interest of our customers, shareholders, and employees," said Charles A. Pearce, chairman and chief executive officer of Excel Bancorp. "Upon completing this acquisition, Excel will be able to offer a broader array of services to our customers. Our employees and shareholders gain the opportunity of sharing and participating in the success of an institution with added size and strength, a definite plus for prospering in our changing financial service environment."

"Excel has a long and prosperous history of serving the people of the South Shore," said Thomas E. Curtis, chairman of Lincoln Trust. "We're very enthusiastic that this transaction will open new opportunities for us to serve our customers and communities."

As of June 30, 1987, Lincoln Trust Company had assets of $184 million and deposits of $164 million. It serves the South Shore of Massachusetts from seven locations in the towns of Hingham, Weymouth, Scituate, Marshfield, Hanover, and Brockton.

Excel Bancorp, Inc., with assets of $622 million, is the holding company for Quincy Savings Bank. Headquartered in Quincy, Quincy Savings Bank was established in 1845 and conducts business through nine offices located in the South Shore of Massachusetts.

Embellish Center Opens In Quincy Center

Embellish hair, face and beauty center which opened recently on Hancock St., Quincy Center, provides men and women with esthetic and hair services.

They range from facials, manicures and pedicures to massages, hair styling and sculptured nails.

Accessories and costume jewelry are sold as well as skin care and cosmetic products.

Plans at Embellish include seasonal fashion shows, a weekly lecture series, and morning stretch classes.

Embellish was created to bring Boston's high standards for professional and customer service to the suburbs without Boston's high price tag, according to owners Karen Murano and Maureen Ryan.

Men and women who have neither the time nor desire to travel into the city can go to Embellish to relax, meet people, and receive a facial, hair style, or body massage in a comfortable, elegant atmosphere, they said.

In over 1600 square feet of space, the decor is traditional with cherry tables and desks, upholstered sofa and chairs, framed mirrors. Hairstyling posters of beautiful men and women are not visible, neither is there an abundance of formica and chrome.

Upon entering the salon, customers are welcomed by people who are genuinely glad to see them, said Murano. Coffee and scones or muffins are always on hand. The staff is professional and attentive. "As you are led on a tour through the facility, you are made to feel a part of it," she said. Private rooms for facials and massages are decorated uniquely. Small decorative touches are felt throughout - even in the restrooms."

Ryan added that the facility is by no means finished - drapes are being custom made, furniture is being delivered daily, systems are still being developed. But after just six weeks, Embellish seems to be just what the South Shore needed, she said.

Karen Murano, a licensed hairdresser for more than 10 years, had an esthetic operation of her own before combining efforts with Maureen to start this venture. Maureen's background has been in sales and marketing with various high-tech companies.

Located at 1624 Hancock St., Quincy, Embellish is open evenings Monday through Friday, and Saturday until 5 p.m. Appointments are always recommended, but a customer is never turned away, they said.

Amy Vermette Performing In Boston Ballet's 'The Nutcracker'

Amy Vermette of North Quincy is among 180 young dancers from the New England area who is performing in the Boston Ballet's annual holiday favorite The Nutcracker at the Wang Center for the Performing Arts now through Jan. 3.

The daughter of Gil and Marybeth Vermette, she is a student at the Montclair School. This is her third performance in The Nutcracker.

Performing in a full-length ballet exposes children to aspects of ballet life they don't experience in a regular ballet class. Children learn about the hard work, rigors and enjoyment that goes into every facet of a live ballet performance.

CITY OF QUINCY, MASSACHUSETTS
DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC WORKS

REQUEST FOR PROPOSALS

The City of Quincy, Department of Public Works, seeks proposals from qualified engineering consultants to perform an infiltration/inflow analysis in the South Quincy/Faxon Park area of the City.

The project area is defined in the 1978 report entitled "Report on Sewer System Evaluation Survey for South Quincy and Faxon Park." Since that time, the Fort Square Pump Station and Town Brook Relief Interceptor have been constructed within the project area. Rehabilitation of the sewer system, as outlined in the report, was completed in 1987. Flows in the area's sewer system, however, dramatically increased during the heavy rains in April, 1987.

Proposals should include a description of the CAD mapping capabilities and a separate estimate of the engineering fee required to prepare CAD maps showing existing utilities in the SSES service area.

This project may be funded, in part, under the Massachusetts Division of Water Pollution Control Infiltration/Inflow Rehabilitation Grant Program. Proposers should indicate their experience with projects funded under the program.

Proposals (five copies) are due at the office of David A. Colton, Deputy Commissioner, Department of Public Works, 55 Sea Street, Quincy, MA 02169 by 2 p.m. on January 14, 1988. Proposals received after the time stated above will not be considered.

The aforementioned SSES repaort and Town Brook Relief Interceptor plans are available for review at the office of David A. Colton. Mr. Colton should be contacted for additional information at (617) 773-1380.

Council Approves $280,400 For Fire Dept.

The City Council voted recently to appropriate $280,400 from the free cash account to the Quincy Fire Department after a problem at the Houghs Neck Fire Station was ironed out to the ward councillors satisfaction.

The appropriation had been held up last month when Councillor Michael Cheney requested time to resolve a problem regarding a 100-foot serial ladder truck at the Houghs Neck Station.

Cheney claimed that the truck was too large to maneuver the street of Houghs Neck and asked that it be removed.

Since that meeting, Cheney has spoken to Fire Chief Carl Valenti and says he is satisfied with the response.

"The chief agreed that the next ladder truck that the department obtains will be sent to the Houghs Neck station," said Cheney.

"The men who are operating the 100 foot ladder truck say they have the same feelings I do about it being too big for Houghs Neck, but they feel confident they can handle it," he said.

"We'll get the next new piece of equipment when the Fire Department puts in for it in the next budget."

The Fire Department appropriation is for such things as a new pumper and air mask cylinders.

Shipyard Sludge Facility Agreement Draws Fire

By NANCY McLAUGHLIN

Several officials have criticized Mayor Francis McCauley who announced Monday that the city has entered into an agreement with the Mass. Water Resources Authority for an interim sludge facility at the Quincy Shipyard at least until 1995.

They complained of no prior knowledge of the agreement, and charged one part of the city, Quincy Point, was sold out for another, Houghs Neck.

But McCauley said the best interest of Quincy will be served if the city works with the MWRA.

"We pressed the court case as far as we could," said McCauley, referring to the city's legal efforts against the purchase of the Quincy Shipyard by the MWRA.

The agreement was announced at a press conference Monday also attended by MWRA executive director Paul Levy, Quincy DPW Commr. Paul Anderson, and consultant David Stanley.

McCauley and Levy said the agreement would accelerate the Boston Harbor cleanup, provide the city with tax revenue as well as eliminate planned sludge processing activities at the MWRA's Nut Island Pollution Control Facility in Houghs Neck.

"The MWRA was planning to process sludge and transport the sludge by truck from Nut Island which is primarily a residential area," said McCauley.

"Under terms of the city's agreement with the MWRA, sludge will be processed at the Fore River Staging Area, which is primarily industrial.

"Sludge will then be transported in sealed tanker cars by the Fore River Railroad as soon as possible after sludge operations commence.

"The city will receive tax revenue from private companies on MWRA Property from 1991, or before, to 1995 until permanent sludge processing facilities are established by the MWRA," he said.

"The MWRA has also agreed to sign a significant mitigation agreement with the city to compensate the city for the impact of MWRA activities upon the community."

"I am confident that Quincy, its residents and Boston Harbor will all benefit," McCauley said.

At the press conference, Rep. Robert Cerasoli said the agreement could be invalidated could be invalidated by a bill he cosponsored with Rep. Robert Ambler, which would prohibit siting of a sludge facility within four miles of a hazardous waste incinerator.

Cerasoli also said McCauley "sold out one part of the city for another."

McCauley responded later that an interim sludge facility was to be located in Quincy, and a decision had to be on either Houghs Neck or Quincy Point.

"We'll work hard to show that this will work," he said. "Quincy Point will not be adversely affected."

Ward 2 Councillor Theodore DeCristofaro, in whose ward the shipyard is located, said at the press conference and at the City Council meeting that night that he was disappointed he had no prior knowledge of the agreement.

"It is an insult to myself, the representative, senator and the rest of the City Council to make a decision without informing us.

"We walked the shipyard last week with Levy and nothing was said."

McCauley said that there was nothing to report until the end of last week, and he jheld a meeting with DeCristofaro, Sen. Paul Harold, outgoing City Council president Stephen McGrath and incoming president Patricia Toland before the press conference Monday morning.

"DeCristofaro and Harold were opposed," said McCauley. "I asked them what the solution was, but they didn't have a viable solution."

Also at the council meeting, Councillor Joseph LaRaia said, "The mayor sold Quincy Point down the river. He sold you (DeCristofaro) down the river.

"Everything has been very secretive since the sale of General Dynamics.

"He acted without input or feedback, and that's a system of government I can't accept."

McCauley said that removing the sludge by rail from Quincy Point is preferable to transporting it by truck in Houghs Neck.

Councillor Michael Cheney commented at the meeting that he was happy the interim facility would not be in Houghs Neck, but not happy that it would be in Quincy Point.

"Levy kept his word that there would be no trucking in Houghs Neck," noted Cheney.

"But I don't want to see one section of the city pitted against another."

Later in the meeting, Cheney submitted a resolve, adopted by the council, asking that the city request the MWRA to allow Quincy to have free water and sewer service during the time that it owns the shipyard.

"We're going to talk about compensation for use of the shipyard," said McCauley.

In an interview Tuesday, McCauley said the interim facility could begin operating as early as 1989 in Quincy Point. It will be run by Bio Gro in enclosed buildings not expected to emit odors, he said.

He said he would work on an agreement whereby the MWRA would use the yard's railroad to bring in materials for the staging area for the Deer Island Sewage Treatment Facility rather than truck them on city streets.

"We'll ask them to take as much staging material as possible by rail," McCauley said.

McCauley also said he didn't think the interim sludge plant would adversely affect a proposal by Cogentrix for a coal burning plant to produce steam and electricity. The proposal was presented to city officials last week. A tie-in with efforts by former workers to return and build ships has also been suggested.

The mayor noted that the sludge plant would only require about five acres of the shipyard's 185-acres.

"The MWRA has to determine its needs, and then declare the rest of the property surplus," said McCauley.

"Cogentrix is only one of many proposals for the yard."

McCauley said the Cogentrix proposal seems viable. He said the plant would employ 400 temporary employees and 90 to 100 full time workers.

McCauley said he would like to see the proposal presented to city councillors and neighborhood groups for their input.

"PEOPLE HELPING PEOPLE"

Food, Toys, Gifts Donated

A Brighter Christmas For Many Needy Families

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

Many needy Quincy families and children will have a happier Christmas and holiday season this year thanks to several Quincy organizations and residents who have once again demonstrated the true Christmas spirit of giving.

Because of the generosity and charitable efforts of so many, local organizations were able to distribute 335 food baskets, hundreds of toys, serve meals and hand out much-needed articles of winter clothing and also provide shelter for the homeless.

The Koch Club, Quincy Lodge of Elks, Salvation Army, the Quincy Interfaith Shelter Coalition and Quincy Police Department along with churches, other organizations and individuals combined their efforts to make this season brighter for the less fortunate.

The Koch Club of Quincy and its Charitable Committee, now in its 32nd year, provided 60 food baskets to needy families in Quincy. The baskets were distributed this week through the Department of Social Services, Atlantic Neighborhood Center, St. Vincent De Paul and Quincy City Club as well as a number of other groups concerned with the welfare of those in need.

Baskets were stocked full of turkeys, hams, canned goods, dry food, fresh fruit and vegetables along with wrapped toys for children according to age.

According to Tom Koch of the Koch Club, the purpose of supplying additional food is to provide a sufficient amount for the holiday period rather than just Christmas Day.

Koch said the club's charity committee was able to accomplish this extensive project because of the continued support and assistance of many organizations, families and individuals.

The Koch Christmas program began in 1956 when the late Richard J. Koch Sr., Tom's father, and founder of the Koch Club, delivered two food baskets to two needy families in Quincy.

"After that, the program grew larger and larger each year," Tom said.

Richard Koch Sr., a champion of many charitable causes including the basket program, died unexpectedly in August.

Tom said the basket program, initiated by his father more than 30 years ago, has been successful because of the dedicated support of so many groups who annually contribute food, toys and/or funds.

Those providing assistance this year include Sacred Heart Church and School of North Quincy, Parker School, VFW Bryan Post, South Quincy Social Club and the Telephone Pioneers of America.

New dolls, toys and games for boys and girls in Quincy were donated by the YMCA, Sacred Heart Youth Organization, North Quincy Catholic Women's Club and the Parker School. Sacred Heart also conducted a canned food drive and the church's CYC donated $1,000, Koch said.

Koch also thanked Ray Cattaneo, executive director of the city's park, forestry and cemetery departments, and Frank Nestor for their effort and support.

During the past year, and especially the past several weeks, many articles of used clothing jhave been delivered to agencies for distribution. The Koch Club also purchased a number of woolen men's and women's socks for the guests of the Long Island Shelter.

And once again, the Quincy Lodge of Elks has done more than their part, distributing 125 baskets to needy families in the Quincy area Sunday morning.

Leo Antonelli, exalted ruler of the Elks, said the basket distribution has become a tradition at the lodge, dating back over 36 years ago.

"This is a tradition with us. We do it every year. We look forward to doing something for the people in need,"

SANTA'S MAILBOXES, just the right size for youngsters like Andrea Larsen, 3, and Kristen Bowes, 6, to mail their letters to the North Pole, were at three locations in Quincy Sq. Accompanying the girls was Thomas Koch of the Koch Club, which sponsors Christmas activities. The Park Department has made the mailboxes available to youngsters for the past 15 Christmases.

Don't Dismiss LaRaia

This year is winding down and it came close to going down in Quincy history as "The Year of Joe LaRaia."

He came within a political whisker -- 460 votes -- of upsetting incumbent Francis McCauley and regaining the mayor's office. He would have been the first former mayor to unseat an incumbent.

A near miss, as they say, may be as close as a mile, but don't dismiss LaRaia as a political has-been.

LaRAIA

And don't eliminate him from the mayor's race in 1989.

HAROLD

Although he has said it is "highly probable" he will run against former political ally Paul Harold for the latter's Quincy-Braintree-Holbrook-Avon Senate seat, some close to him doubt he will.

They think he said it more in anger because Harold endorsed McCauley for mayor as he has in the past. In a close election, every bit helps or hurts. And in this cliff-hanger election, LaRaia figures Harold helped McCauley and hurt him.

LaRaia would give Harold a good run but the latter would be tough to beat. He does his homework and works full time at the job.

LaRaia could damage Harold by tossing his hat into the senate ring and splitting the big Quincy vote which could allow a third candidate to win the seat.

But LaRaia is more likely to pass that up and make one more run for mayor.

You could say he staked out his claim this year and could cash in two years from now. He certainly would be a major contender with a name that still attracts voters.

This year, 11,449 voters favored a fourth term for McCauley while 10,989 preferred to give LaRaia another shot at being mayor. And 1,029 voters wanted neither and indicated so by casting blanks.

LaRaia has been in some pretty good brawls through the years, losing and winning and being able to come back after defeat.

In 1977 he was elected mayor in a bitterly fought campaign with incumbent Walter Hannon, winning by a recount margin of 483 votes.

Two years later, after one of the stormiest administrations in the city's history, he was ousted by Arthur Tobin by more than 5,000 votes.

LaRaia, they were saying back then, was done. Finished. So long, Joe.

And at that time, it looked like they were right.

But two years later he was back at City Hall, winning one of the three City Council at-large seats by a scant 97-vote margin over newcomer Richard J. Koch, Jr. A defeat that year would probably have been the political end for LaRaia.

But he had his foot back in the door and just two years later was perched on the roof. He topped the at-large race in 1981. He was back and a factor. He dropped to second place behind Koch two years later but in 1985 was again No. 1 in the council race.

If he could come back after a 5,000-plus vote thumping at the hands of Tobin, it would seem he could come back again after a 460 vote loss to McCauley.

LaRaia supporters and critics rarely see eye-to-eye on anything but most will agree on this: he certainly made this an interesting election year.

And, he could make it interesting again in 1989.

WELL, BRIAN BUCKLEY came up with another celebrity Christmas card this year. This one is a photo of him with Burt Reynolds.

BUCKLEY and FRIEND

In the past, photos have shown him with Bo Derek, Bob Hope, Rafer Johnson, Bobby Orr, Reggie Jackson, Rodney Dangerfield, Carroll O'Connor and Jerry (The Beaver) Mathers.

Buckley, incidentally, will be leaving his posts as coordinator of the Council on Aging and Youth Commission, probably in January, to become executive director of the Park-Forestry-Cemetery Depts. He will fill the post left vacated when Ray Cattaneo was named director, succeeding the late Richard J. Koch, Sr.

SORRY IF I hurt Eric Schwarz' feelings by sticking a "t" in his name, making it read Schwartz. Eric, your's isn't exactly a household name so it is somewhat easy to tangle it up with a little, dinky "t." You should see what they do to me: Boswell, Boswith, Bobsworth, Boswerk, etc.

But if that little "t" is bothering you, Eric, I'll gladly take it back. But maybe you could do something for me, as long as we are splitting hairs -- er -- "t's": Like getting quotes straight. I didn't say I was proud to have a cat named after me. I said I was flattered. There is a difference.

Misquotes can get you into more trouble than misspellings, especially as you go on to bigger and better stories.

Merry Christmas, Eric. Hope Sana is good to you. Oops! I'll take that 't' I gave to you and give it to Santa.

A Week Before Christmas Outside Fenway Park

I was a week before Christmas and outside Fenway Park, a line had been forming in the cold and the dark.

For someone who wondered what could be the reason? There's tickets on sale for the '88 season!

And even though prices are the same as last year, they'll probably want more for a hot dog and beer.

As we waited and shivered, I heard someone say: "Gee, I hope it don't snow on opening day!"

The Red Sox were dealing and trading with care, and word that Marc Sullivan wouldn't be there.

And visions of pennants danced in our heads, of another World Series with the Mets or the Reds.

The doors opened at nine as we gave a great shout, twenty people went in, but no one came out.

"Why aren't we moving?"

asked the people in line. Moscato's computer wasn't working too fine.

A cutoff was made, and much to their sorrow, most people were told to come back tomorrow.

"What about us?" the rest of us cried!

"Don't worry," they said, "you'll be waiting inside."

We waited all day, and into the night, and slowly the box office came into sight.

Our turn finally came we had made it inside! We made our selections with purpose and pride.

And what can be said of all those who came? It's the Fenway Faithful's love of the game.

New Ward 3 Councillor:

Chretien Takes Office With Four Years Experience

(This is the final in a series of profiles on Quincy's three new city councillors who will take office in January).

By NANCY McLAUGHLIN

Newly-elected Ward 3 City Councillor Larry Chretien, 26, won't officially start his term until he is sworn into office in January.

But Chretien has already had nearly four years of governmental on-the-job training as a legislative aide to Rep. Thomas Brownell.

"Rep. Brownell gave me a good opportunity to learn all aspects of politics and government," he said.

"The reason to be in government is to get things done.

"I enjoy seeing a problem and then figuring out how to get things done.

"I enjoy working with people."

Chretien, who lives on North Central Ave., was a student at the State University of New York when he interned in Brownell's office between his sophomore and junior years.

He found that he enjoyed the work, and returned after he was graduated with a B.S. degree in environmental resource management. He is now working towards his master's degree in economic policy.

"It was a good education, but I decided against going into forestry management. I got interested in policy," said Chretien, who was born and brought up in Quincy.

Working for Brownell, Chretien's responsibilities have included a variety of duties ranging from solving constituent problems to attending public meetings.

He has also worked on legislation dealing with such topics as extending tax credits for solar collectors, and creating a consumer utility board.

Brownell is currently pushing a bill Chretien drafted which would require the Massachusetts Water Resources Authority to pay taxes to Quincy for its property in the city such as the recently acquired Quincy shipyard.

"I've learned about government at the federal, state and local level," said Chretien. "I've learned how to get things done.

"And I have an awareness of the issues.

"I think I can step in now, and pretty much know what to expect. I don't think there will be too many surprises.

"I think I can work well with the mayor and City Council."

Chretien said that outgoing Ward 3 Councillor John Lydon, who did not seek reelection, has been helpful in sharing his knowledge of the ward.

"He has been very gracious," said Chretien. "I think there will be a smooth transition.

He will also be making a transition in his work life when Brownell leaves at the end of the year to accept a judgeship.

Chretien expects to secure a job in the private sector by then.

LAWRENCE CHRETIEN

As Ward 3 City Coucillor, he will represent the section of the city bordered by Newport Ave., Burgin Parkway, Granite St., and the Town of Milton.

When the wards are redistricted, he will also represent part of Quincy Sq.

He feels one of the largest issues he will deal with will be the proposed Summit View project in West Quincy.

"I think it is one of the biggest projects any councillor could have in a term," said Chretien, who noted that he is not for or against it.

"We need more affordable housing, but I wish it didn't have to be in one huge chunk," he said.

"A total of 1,340 units is way too big."

He said he is concerned about the effect of such things as traffic on the surrounding neighborhood.

"I'd like to help mold Summit View to the neighborhood," said Chretien.

He said it is regrettable that because of the so-called anti snob zoning, the project will not be before the City Council, but instead the Zoning Board of Appeals.

However, Chretien said he has attended both Zoning Board of Appeals meetings on the project so far, and has spoken to developer Stephen Ricciardi as well as residents of the area.

He said he and another newly elected city councillor, Timothy Cahill, met with city traffic engineer David Kinnecom about traffic concerns regarding the project.

Chretien said he intends to send letters to abutters of the project before the next Zoning Appeals Board meeting in January.

He is concerned about traffic problems in general in his ward, and hopes to work with residents to gather information and arrive at solutions.

Also in Chretien's ward is Quincy City Hospital which is undergoing an expansion and renovations.

"The hospital presents a lot of challenges," said Chretien who spoke of parking problems and construction impacts.

He said he intends to meet with hospital director Mark Mundy on a regular basis.

Chretien is also interested in working on a recycling program for the city.

"It's time for the city to adopt an environmentally sound recycling program," said Chretien. "We could set one up on the existing dump site."

Chretien said he is in favor of a new state law which would allow the City Council, on a two-thirds vote, to raise the school budget.

"We need more financial resources for the schools," he said.

Expanding the city's child care involvement is also among his goals, Chretien said.

He also intends to spend time on day to day city services, such as seeing that streets are plowed and parks are maintained.

Does he aspire to any higher political office?

"Right now, I'm just focusing on doing as good a job as I can," said Chretien.

Nursing Home Residents Taking Santa Calls

Residents of the Robbin House and the Quincy Nursing Home are working as Santa's helpers by receiving telephone calls from children.

Santa or Mrs. Claus can be reached by calling 70-1585 or 786-7669 through today (Thursday). Calls are answered from 2-4 p.m. and 6-8 p.m.

Earlier this month residents attended a Ho Ho Academy to brush up on the latest in children's gifts. The hotline itself is an annual program to help Santa with the wish list.

It is fun for the children who cal. And it is fun for the residents...talking with children, reliving memories, and helping others.

Children's requests range from dolls and bikes to computers. One little girl wanted Santa to take back last year's gift...her baby brother.

After Christmas many children have called back. This year the helpers will answer "thank you" calls Dec. 28 through Dec. 31 from 2-4 p.m. and from 6-8 p.m.

Amazing Coconut Pie

A Great Dessert For Christmas

The best part of waking up wasn't Folger's in my cup, but the fact that my Christmas shopping was finally done!!!! And that I had a hold on my holiday cooking.

Today's recipe is for a delicious dessert that my daughter Sue and I had at a niece's house. She found out that the recipe came from her Aunt Doris and was most anxious to try it out. Her aunt was kind enough to drop it by and Sue made it that very night. It was super delicious and wait until you see how easy it is. It will make a great dessert for Christmas!

AMAZING COCONUT PIE
FROM AUNT DORIS

2 cups milk
¼ cup sugar
½ cup bisquick mix
4 eggs
½ stick butter or margerine
1½ tsps vanilla
1 cup shredded coconut

Combine milk, sugar, bisquick mix, eggs, butter and vanilla all in a blender. Cover and blend on low speed for 3 minutes.

Pour into greased 10 inch pie plate. Let stand about 5 minutes. Sprinkle top with coconut.

Bake in a pre-heated oven for 40 minutes. The top will look light brown. Serve warm or cold with whipped cream. Doris said she sometimes uses a 9 inch pie plate and puts the rest in a small custard dish. Happy Holidays! And Happy Cooking!!

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

MERRY CHRISTMAS! We rejoice in the sound of these words and the glory of the message: "Peace on earth, good will to men." But we do not always feel the full meaning in our hearts and put it to work in our lives ...

One who did was Henry Van Dyke, the late American clergyman, writer and poet whose famous "Story of the Other Wise Man" has brought joy and inspiration to thousands of people over the years. Among his writings is a piece called "The Spirit of Christmas" and we think you will like it as much as we did.

"We are thinking of you today because it is Christmas ... and tomorrow because it will be the day after, and so on through the year. We may not be able to tell you about it every day, but that makes no difference, the thought and the wish will be here just the same ..."

And so, in this time of year when good-fellowship, in spite of some commercial overtones, becomes contagious ... when friendly, kind thoughts and actions are directed toward our fellowman ... when voices are heard in song and prayer ... We wish you a very Merry Christmas. May the quality of the "Merry Christmas" of Christmas Day be extended to you and yours the rest of the year ...

CHRISTMAS IN CHURCH

lights the way to the spirit and brotherhood of Christmas

The Christmas Story

Luke, 2, 1-14. At that time, there went forth a decree from Caesar Augustus that a census of the whole world should be taken. The first census took place while Cyrinus was governor of Syria.

And all were going each to his own town, to register.

And Joseph also sent from Galilee out of the town of Nazareth into Judea to the town of David, which is called Bethlehem - because he was of the house and family of David - to register, together with Mary his espoused wife, who was with child.

And it came to pass while they were there, that the days for her to be delivered were fulfilled.

And she brought forth her first-born Son, and wrapped Him in swaddling clothes, and laid Him in a Manger, because there was no room for them in the Inn.

And there were shepherds in the same district living in the fields and keeping watch over their flock by night.

And behold, an angel of the Lord stood by them and the glory of God shone round them, and they feared exceedingly.

And the angel said to them, "Do not be afraid, for behold, I bring you good news of great joy which shall be to all the people; for today in the town of David a Savior has been born to you, Who is Christ the Lord.

And this shall be a sign to you; you will find an infant wrapped in swaddling clothes and lying in a manger."

And suddenly there was with the angel a multitude of the heavenly host praising God and saying, "Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace among men of good will."

Mayoral, Council Recounts Cost $23,738

Mayoral and councillor at large recounts cost the city a total of $23,738.94, according to City Clerk John Gillis.

That breaks down to $4,360 for the mayoral recount, Nov. 18-20; $5,080 for councillor at large, Nov. 23 to 25 and 27, and $14,298.94 for police to guard the ballots since the Nov. 3 election.

Councillor Joseph LaRaia, who requested the mayoral recount, gained 11 votes after the recount.

Ronald Iacobucci, who requested the councillor at large recount, realized no appreciable difference.

City Clerk John Gillis said he plans to propose legislation that would require a candidate who loses an election by a substantial margin to pay for the work involved if the election outcome doesn't change.

The city would continue to pay for recounts when the difference between the winner and loser is "reasonable," Gillis said.

Ledger Publisher Ruled Legal Voter

The Board of Registrars voted Tuesday morning to allow Patriot Ledger publisher K. Prescott Low to continue as a registered voter at 13 Temple St., Quincy, the newspaper's address.

"I'm satisfied that we had the process and we were able to present our views," said City Councillor Jospeh LaRaia who had requested the hearing.

"But whether they were used properly as a basis for decision, the politics of it, is something else," said LaRaia, who lost the mayor's race to incumbent Francis McCauley by 462 votes.

LaRaia gained 11 votes after the recount.

He questioned Low's eligibility to vote and stated "13 Temple St. is a business C location and does not constitute a place of residency which is required for registered voters in the city of Quincy."

However at the 40-minute hearing, City Clerk John Gillis, board of registrars chairman, said that eligibility is determined by such things as the address on a person's driver's license, where they pay their excise tax, and where they receive their mail.

"We don't care about the type of zoning as long as the street is an address in Quincy," said Gillis.

Atty. James Heigham of Boston, who represented Low, produced documents such as a driver's license, vehicle registrations and charge account bills with his client's address as 13 Temple St.

When Heigham asked Low if he considered Quincy his domicile, he replied, "This is the center of my life."

Low said that he and his wife sold their home in Cohasset, and that he occasionally stays in the executive office of The Patriot Ledger which has a full kitchen and bathroom with shower.

Low said he also stays at his home on Cape Cod in the summer, at a home in Florida on weekends and holidays, and at a Brookline country club.

He registered to vote in Quincy Aug. 1, 1983, according to Gillis.

"I appreciate Mr. Low's openness," said LaRaia.

Some last minute gift suggestions

There is still time to give just a few more things in the real spirit of Christmas. And all they cost is a little of you. You can probably think of many more but these are just a few suggestions to start with.

- Ask someone who's far from home (or has no home) to share your Christmas dinner.
- Use your mistletoe generously.
- Say thank you a lot.
- Take one of your favorite presents to that kid in your class you suspect Santa might miss.
- Take a thermos of hot chocolate to your school crossing guard.
- Pick some up and take them with you to Christmas services.
- Put out bread crumbs for the birds and nuts for the squirrels.
- Pull out your mother's chair for her when she sits down to dinner.
- Offer to say grace yourself.
- Invite someone who has no fireplace over to enjoy yours.
- Call your doctor and ask how he's feeling.
- Help the little kids in your neighborhood build their first snowman (if there's snow).
- Tell someone you love them.

Merry Christmas from the people who care

If I Could Have One Wish Come True . . .

Students in Quincy public schools again this year were invited to submit articles for Christmas and Chanukah. This year's theme is: "If I could have one wish come true this Christmas-Chanukah it would be;"

Students participating are in Grades 3, 5 and 8.

In addition, students at St. Joseph's School also contributed articles.

The Sun is happy to share these young thoughts with you at this holiday season. Publishing these articles has become a tradition which all of us at The Sun look forward to and, we hope, you do, too.

We were again swamped with entries and because of space limitations we regret we cannot print every single one.

So many others were worthy of publication, too. We plan to publish some more next week, however.

To all who participated we extend season's greetings and a happy, healthy, New Year.

Thank you all, most sincerely.

If I could have one wish come true this Christmas I would like people who live on the streets or the people who are very very poor to get jobs and live in houses. They would get some food. People who live in foreign countries would be helped. I already have enough things and I don't need any more than I have. I am lucky to have a family, a home, and everything else that I need.

My wish is that all people would get along. If everyone is mad at each other it would be a terrible place to live. I hope the two superpowers get an agreement so there will be no war and no one will get hurt.

Billy Coughlin

If I could have one wish come true this Chanukah it would be to go on another vacation with my family. I like going places with my family. Usually if we go somewhere my whole family doesn't get to go together. I like going on vacations and I would let my family pick where we would go!

Julie Silverman

It would be a pair of tickets to Hawaii, because then I could see Santa Claus come on a surfboard. Since I live here in the Northeast, I think that it would be a spectacular sight!

Rod Lynn

It would be that everyone in the world has a very very happy holiday. For my friends and family I wish a very merry Christmas and that all the kids and teachers in Wollaston School have a happy year.

Jessica Esdale

It would be for world peace. I know that a lot of people wish this too, because of the wars going on now. I wish for world peace because of the killings and the destruction wars cause. I'm frightened because it could happen to the United States and people I know and people I care for, and people I don't know could be hurt or killed. This is why I wish for world peace.

Nicole Noseworthy
Broad Meadows Gr. 8

It would be to have my next door neighbor not to be alone on Christmas Day.

Stacy Bonavita

That no one be so poor. People would live happily. People would love it because then no one will have to beg for food or other things. I would wish for this because then everybody could do what they wanted if they weren't poor. I would hope that they can live happy during their lives.

That everyone in the world could have freedom. If someone didn't like the country they lived in, they could move to another country. If anyone didn't like the church or temple they were in, they could change it. Freedom is very important. If we didn't have freedom we probably wouldn't be very happy and everyone should be happy for the holidays.

Karen Shea
Wollaston Gr. 5

It would be that all the less fortunate could get what they wanted for CHRISTMAS and for the rest of their lives. That would be one of the most important wishes not just for me but for a lot of other people in the United States and the world.

James Hallahan
Broad Meadows Gr. 8

It would be that people would learn to treat Christmas like it is supposed to be treated. Nobody really takes time to think about the true meaning of Christmas. Christmas is a time for giving gifts not just receiving gifts from others.

Susan Byrne

It would be a glass doll. I love glass dolls, and I want to make a set of glass dolls.

Rhonda Rowell
St. Joseph Gr. 5

It would be that someone would find a cure for some diseases, like AIDS, cancer, and muscular dystrophy. I would like this wish to come true, because diseases are killing people so they can not enjoy Christmas. Also their families will be full of sorrow so they too could not enjoy Christmas, and Christmas is a holiday full of joy, not sorrow. There are many reasons why people would like cures for diseases but I think there should be cures for diseases, because kids wishes could be shattered.

Jennifer Gay

It would be to go way back in the past and be one of the people to see Christ the Lord be born. The reason why I would like to do such a thing is so I could see the Saviour be born.

It would be to give all the poor people a very nice Christmas with food, presents, clothes, shelter, heat, money and love.

I wish that the homeless people could have a home. I feel sorry for them when I see them on the streets. I wish they had a home so they wouldn't freeze to death in the winter. They are eating leftover food every day. They wear raggy clothes and they would have good clothes if they had a home.

Danny Kenney
Daniel Webster Gr. 5

If I had one wish I would wish for the homeless to have homes, the hungry to have food, and the children to have toys for the holidays.

I think it is very important for people to have just a couple of things to make the holidays happy for them. That would be my Christmas wish.

Gerard Bacallao

I sure wish everyone were happy on Christmas. There are a lot of sad people on Christmas. Some of them are sad because there are people in their family that have died. Some people don't like Christmas and I just wish everyone would be happy on Christmas. I sure hope my wish would come true.

Cynthia Tripp

It would be to have my family be happy and glad what they got for Christmas. I hope nobody gets sick like last year. Last year my whole family was sick. First my father, then my oldest brother, then my other brother, then me, then my mother. Then we all felt better. This year I hope we have a awesome Christmas.

Jimmy Connery

If I had a wish, it would be a good present for me. It would be a bike because I like bikes. It is my favorite. Every day I would ride my new bike.

It would be terrific if all wars could be stopped by this Christmas. I think wars are dreadful! I mean, there has to be other ways to settle things. I don't know anyone who likes them. Many, many, people get killed in wars. Sometimes whole cities can be destroyed. Wars are a stupid way to settle things.

Terry M. O'Neill

I wish that my great-grandmother were alive today. I would like to see her every day. It would be nice to hear her voice. I wish she could see my new baby sister. It would also be nice for her to see my new father.

This Christmas I wished I could have a Toys R Us shopping spree. I would have five minutes to race through and get as many toys as I could. First I would run to the Transformer department. Then I would go and get some Ninendo cartridges to play. Next I would get one special bike and a bunch of bike accessories. By the time I would be done I would have a carriage full of toys.

Sean Gilden
Daniel Webster Gr. 5

It would be to have the world disease-free. People would live longer, healthier and happier lives. They would not have as many worries about dying and of older relatives getting sick. Our pets would live longer. Some of them are real special to us and they don't live as long as people, so we would not have the worry of losing a good animal friend. Also people wouldn't get sick and take an accident overdose on medicine and get even more sick then die. Plants would not get sick and the world would be a more pretty place to live.

Marieva Miller
Merrymount Gr. 5

It would be to have peace. I would want world peace because nobody would fight. Everybody would be friends probably.

We have atom bombs, nuclear bombs and others. I really can't name. WHY DO PEOPLE FIGHT IN WARS? There are terrorists trying to take over countries and the world. If we can't have peace why don't we just kill ourselves?!!!

It's not fair for innocent people to die just because other people want war. We have enough nuclear bombs to kill the earth ten times over. Why can't there be peace?

You might think I'm just saying this to say it but I'm not. There has been World War I and World War 2 and lots of others like the Civil War. We were fighting ourselves in the civil war, north vs south. So let's just keep it that way and not have any more wars. SO DON'T GIVE ME WAR GIVE ME PEACE.

It would be to have a puppy. Everyday, I would go outside and put out fresh food and water. Then later, I would call him. I could walk him. "Here Sammy, Sammy!" I would call. Then I would walk him. He would be a golden brown Cocker Spaniel and I would love him a whole bunch!

All I really want for Christmas is love. When I get a present, that does not show me that people love me. But when somebody hugs me or kisses me, then I know that they love me. Love is definitely better than toys. But toys is a great present for Christmas. I know that all of my relatives love me, because they show me by hugging me. The thing I definitely want for Christmas is just love. But a few toys wouldn't be bad.

That the poor people would be cured from all diseases. I wish that because they don't have all the things we have. They have to walk to get somewhere. They don't have as many clothes as us. We have drawers full and they might only have one set of clothes. Even though they might not need clothes because the temperature is very hot, in some places it might be very cold. When you think about just having a little amount of clothes when you are somewhere cold you kind of get the chills. These are only two reasons why I wish that they would have more things and be cured from their diseases.

When my uncle was born he could not speak. And when I was born he was in a special school. He came and visited us for a while. I miss Uncle Steve. And I hardly get to see him a lot. He is one of my favorite Uncles. Now he comes every month. We go out to eat or they go get some Chinese food. Two social workers come with him. I'm glad he is not dead. But what I'm really asking that he could speak. And we all could live together. That's what my Christmas wish is.

If I Could Have One Wish Come True . . .

It would be for all homeless people be in a home for the holidays. I think they should be happy during the holidays. I have given money to promote shelters for the homeless. I have also heard about the homeless freezing to death because of the cold. I think that children should have one or two toys and shelter during the holidays instead of suffering through the holidays. I am happy to be so lucky to have shelter and a nice family.

It would be for clean air and water. I never liked pollution because it blocked off Wollaston Beach and Boston Harbor. There are probably a lot of other places I don't know about that have pollution.

It would be to have Super Mario Brothers a tape from Nintendo. I know how to play it because my brother's friend got it. My brother borrowed it before. I played it three hours straight before but you can't borrow it forever so I want it. The main idea is to save the princess. There are eight phases and seven maids. The maids are in the first seven phases. The eighth phase has the princess. When you save a maid, you get an extra life. The maids are protected by a fire-breathing dragon. There are mushroomlike midgets, Venus flytraps, turtles, flying turtles, and lots more. There are square metals you hit and coins come out. If you get a hundred, you get an extra life. Secret squares and invisible squares also give an extra life. There is a warp zone where you go to the future. My brother's friend saved the princess twice in a life. I almost saved the princess, but I died.

It would be for the hungry and homeless to be fed and sheltered. Not just on Christmas Day but every day of the week, three hundred and sixty-five days a year. People tend to forget them on other days. We should thik think about them and help someone every day of the year.

It would be for the whole world to remember the things that really matter to them. We should think of all the hungry people who don't have a big Christmas dinner to look forward to or all the homeless people who may not have a family to spend Christmas within a nice cozy warm house. We should stop helping ourselves and remember the people that really need us. If every homeless person was sheltered and every hungry person was fed, I think that would be a wonderful way to remember such a beautiful and loving season.

If I Could Have One Wish Come True . . .

It would be for homeless people to have a Christmas dinner and a bed for the homeless to sleep in. That would be my wish.

Julie Berry
Central Middle Gr. 8

It would be for everyone to love each other. Because then no one would be afraid.

Beth Downey
Squantum Gr. 3

It would be that peace would be throughout the land. Then there would be no fights. And the world would be a better place.

Kara Timbone
Squantum Gr. 3

It would be to see Santa Claus because I think he is a special man. I want to see if he is real and I want to see what he brings me even though it is a surprise.

Laurie Parsons
Squantum Gr. 3

It would be that the ozone layer will protect us from the sun.

Arthur Macklin
Squantum Gr. 3

It would be for a bike. I really want one because my bike is ruined. I can really go fast on bikes. I sure wish I could have a new one. I like bikes because they are fun and good exercise. I also like them because they can do stunts.

Heath Carson
Furnace Brook Gr. 3

It would be to get money because you could buy a lot with it. I would put some in my bank account to go to college and buy some toys. I would buy Christmas presents for my family. I would like that for Christmas.

Kathryn Quinn
Furnace Brook Gr. 3

It would be to get the GI Joe Aircraft Carrier. I would take real good care of it. I would let my friends play with it. I would keep my brother away from it. I would never break it. I would do anything for it.

John Lovendale
Furnace Brook Gr. 3

It would be for the game of Fireball Island. That is what I wish for Christmas. It is an adventure game. For Christmas I want Torpedo Run. It is a floor wars game.

John Ferraro
Furnace Brook Gr. 3

It would be to live in the biggest house in the United States. I would be the richest person on earth. My bathtub would be the size of a built-in swimming pool and my bedroom would be twice the size of my classroom. I would live in California about ten minutes from the beach. I would be on "Lifestyles of the Rich and Famous."

Amey Riley
Parker Gr. 5

It would be to have a BMX scooter because my bike doesn't work right and I've always wanted one. I can go places with my friends. Also, I could go places with my Mom. I would like it to be the size of me and the color red.

Patrick Kinneavy
Parker Gr. 3

It would be that I got lots, and lots of presents. If I got something that my brother wanted I could share it. Or, if my family wanted something like my sister wanted to play Topple I would play with her. That's my Christmas wish I hope it comes true.

Julie Kingsbury
Parker Gr. 3

It would be for the kids and parents that had no homes and had no food to eat and have clothes. I would wish they would have all those things.

Sharleen Campbell
Parker Gr. 3

It would be for all poor people to have food and clothes, money, homes and schools for their children to go to.

Kara Lightbourne
Parker Gr. 3

It would be to give food to the needy for Christmas. They have nothing. I would be happy if they were happy. I would give toys and clothes, too.

Ross King
Parker Gr. 3

Hello, if you could have a wish what would it be? If I had a wish, it would be peace, because on TV and in newspapers there is so much killing. I really do wish for peace. I hope people in other countries will stop making war. I know people are trying.
I thank you. Have a safe and Merry Christmas.

Vivian Chan
Parker Gr. 3

It would be to treat everyone to a big Christmas dinner with the finest foods and the best entertainment. It would be like feeding all the poor and hungry people of the world.

David Khaw
Central Middle Gr. 8

It would be to get a keyboard. I'd like to have a keyboard because I like music that can be played by a keyboard. The keyboard I like and want costs a lot of money, but it's super. It's a Casio keyboard. It has 50 mini keys, a speaker, drums and a lot of other fantastic things. It's going to be fun owning one. I'm not absolutely positive I'll get one, but I'll still hope to get one.

Nita Luci
Parker Gr. 5

I wish for peace in the world because too many people get killed in the war. The war is no way to settle anything. The only thing the war is doing is killing people in the world. The war is nothing but killing people. That is what I want for Christmas.

Shannon Williamson
Parker Gr. 3

It would be not to fight with my sister and to get a football. The first wish is because I always fight with my sister and this Christmas I would not like to fight with her. The second wish is because I like football very much.

Zana Luci
Parker Gr. 3

It would be to get more Nintendo games. The games I like best are Top Gun, Donkey Kong 3, Kung Fu.

Chuck O'Brien
Parker Gr. 3

I'd wish it could snow out.

Leanne Joyce
Parker Gr. 3

My wish for Christmas is to have land. I would like land because I would like to do things. Without land, you can't do anything. Land gives us food to all.;

Melissa Slack
Parker Gr. 3

It would be for world peace! It would make me happy and it would be a better place for us.

Craig Gifford
Wollaston Gr. 3

A skateboard for Christmas because I could ride on it.

Jimmy Wong
Wollaston Gr. 3

It would be to have Christmas the way my family usually celebrates. Usually we have Christmas the way almost everyone does, but we are going to New Jersey early on Christmas morning and we won't have time to open our presents then. We'll have to open them on Christmas Eve. I like to wake up early on Christmas morning, get my stocking and play with my sister, then open presents. We're going to a service at church and we won't get back until late, so we still won't have very much time.

Angela Bohl
Parker Gr. 5

It would be for everyone in the world to have peace and harmony year round. I would also like the problems between different countries to be solved and for the sick and homeless to have a place to live and enough to eat.

Bridget Malloy
Central Middle Gr. 8

It would be for all alcohol to vanish forever. If that happened, there would no longer be careless drunken drivers. No longer fights, and people would live happier and healthier lives forever.

Josh Gannon
Central Middle Gr. 8

It would be to have a trillion dollars. With the money I would buy three toy stores. With the rest of the money I would buy an apartment building. I would let the needy live there.

Joey Donnelly
Parker Gr. 5

It would be that everybody who doesn't have a home would have a home and have a happy Christmas. That I would wish that is because everybody deserves a home and a happy Christmas.

Joseph Brown
Parker Gr. 5

If I Could Have One Wish Come True . . .

If I could have one wish come true this Christmas, it would be to have love and peace on earth, because sometimes everybody fights and gets hurt. I don't like that. Christmas is a time for loving and caring. It's a time for giving and receiving. I think you should be nice to people on special holidays, especially on Christmas.

Kerry Monahan

It would be to have world peace, because I don't want to have a World War III. I don't want us to fight against each other's countries.

Robert Ragusa
Squantum Gr. 5

•

It would be that there would be no nuclear weapons. If there were no nuclear weapons, the world would be a much safer place. There would really be no reason to worry about blowing up the world, and we wouldn't have to worry about other nations starting war with us. There would be a better chance of making peace with Russia, too. I don't know how nuclear weapons were invented, but it was a mistake. I know nuclear power helps with street light and electricity and that's okay, but nuclear weapons are not.

Brian Driscoll
Squantum Gr. 5

•

It would be that on Christmas day, no person would get sick. I would like everybody to be real happy. If a kid was sick they might not have fun with their toys. One big wish is that everybody gets the toys or other things they would like, real bad from Santa. I forgot one wish that all animals don't get sick like I hope people will not get sick.

Brenda Linehan
Parker Gr. 3

I have cousins who live in Germany, and I haven't seen them since 1982. They are Dougie, my uncle, Nerada, my aunt, Allen, who is in college, Michael, who is in high school, and Mary, too, is in high school. The years are whizzing by, and before we know it, I'll be all grown up! We all really love them, especially my father and his mother, because Dougie is my father's "big brother" and my grandmother is his mother. I really don't know much about them except for Mary, because we are pen-pals, but we haven't written in a while, either. All I know, is, more than anything, I wish they would come home and spend Christmas with us.

Amy L. Parsons
Squantum Gr. 5

It would be to become a fast runner. That way when I play football the kids can't catch me. I could win races. I could go to the store and get back fast, but most of all I could get places faster.

Greg DiBella

•

It would be that I will become a graceful, young prima-ballerina with a well-known dancing corporation. I've taken seven years of ballet, three years of jazz, and two years of tap. I love to dance. My whole life is practically devoted to dancing. My parents say that I was stumbling around and trying to dance before I could speak. Dancing makes me feel very excited, full of energy, and full of joy. I know dancing is a job of very hard work, but I love it and I am willing to do it. I want ballet dancing to be my career. I hope my wish comes true.

Pietra Check
Parker Gr. 5

•

It would be for a farm up in the country so I could be with my horse. Her name is Buttercup. She is the color of butter and she goes as fast as lightning.

Rene Siroy
Parker Gr. 5

•

It would be to have a bike. I would want one because I don't have one. Mine got stolen. I would ride it all around. It would be fun to get a new bike on Christmas Day. I would be so happy to open it.

Robbie Callow
Parker Gr. 5

•

It would be to get a 10-speed bike. I couldn't wait until summer to ride it. I've been wanting to get a ten speed bike since I was 8 years old, but when I tried my sister's ten speed bike I was still a little small for it. So now I wish I could get a ten speed bike now that I'm bigger.

Melissa Christopher

•

It would be to get my own computer. With my computer I could play games and I could practice typing. With my computer I could type stories.

Ken Goun
Parker Gr. 5

•

It would be to live in peace all around the world and for everyone to be friends. That's my Christmas wish.

Lisa Kelly
Central Middle Gr. 8

•

It would be that everyone's troubles would disappear and his problems solved. Maybe people would be kind to each other year round.

Renan Yesilcimen
Central Middle Gr. 8

•

It would be getting an IBM computer. Since a computer is useful and handy, I could do lots of things with it. It not only entertains you, but it also teaches you things. It helps me with my homework and my parents with shopping and income tax, and anything you can think of. With a computer, I could plan a better future for myself.

Steven Wong
Central Middle Gr. 8

•

It would be for world peace. I'd wish that all the nuclear bombs and weapons would vanish from the earth forever and that there would never be another war again.

Dennis Roberts
Central Middle Gr. 8

•

It would be that people were all treated fairly. I wish that people wouldn't be called names for their religion, race or handicap. I also wish that people would be friends all over the world.

Dan Canavan
Central Middle Gr. 8

•

It would be to give the poor a roof over their heads and food on their tables. I would also wish all the people who are sick and dying would get well.

Michelle George
Merrymount Gr. 5

It would be to help animals who have been beaten or ignored. I want this because I care about animals and I don't like to see stray cats or dogs wandering around streets alone and hungry. I'd love to see animals that were healthy and full of pep. That would be my one and only wish.

Julie McDonald
Parker Gr. 5

My wish is to buy my family a nice big house in Milton, so I can have my own room and have family and friends over. I like the town.

Jamie Christo
Parker Gr. 3

My wish would be that my whole family could come for Christmas, because some live in Florida and some in Japan. It is hard for them to get here for Christmas. It costs a lot of money and so many people are flying. When I was little they were always here for the holidays. Maybe in the years to come they will be able to get here!

Jaime Monahan
Squantum Gr. 5

To have 1,000,000 more wishes because I could have anything I want.

Jimmy Butruccio

A trip to Fantasy Land. That would be wonderful. There would be mushroom hotels, giant caterpillars, humungous snails, Opa Opa's and weegots. There would also be giant dragonflies, eedle eedle's, slycots and weeble wos.

Ah that would be the life! Well I hope it comes true.

Tom Hawer
Atherton Hough Gr. 5

It would be for peace all over the world. I wish there would be no wars. I want this because many people are losing their husbands and sons. I don't think that it is right for countries to fight each other.

I also wish that all people were good and there were no bad people. If there were no bad people everyone could live a happy life.

It would be for everyone to stop fighting and being cruel to one another. I wish for everyone to rejoice and be blessed and have a very "Merry Christmas." But, I don't have many holidays in my religion. I only have one holiday. So when Christmas comes alone, I'd like to celebrate it. I really don't know what in Christmas makes me happy. I guess it's the sharing, and giving, and wrapping, and buying. All these things are an annual tradition I like. Walking in the streets and seeing the wonderful lights glowing brightly in the night. It would be to have a halfpipe (a camp) built for me. I have always wanted one but my parents would not build one for me. If I did get a halfpipe I would let my friends over to use it. A lot of my friends want one too. If I got good enough on the halfpipe I might have a good chance of being sponsored someday.

A Brighter Christmas For Needy Families

(Cont'd from Page 3)

Antonelli said.

Those baskets also contained turkey with all the trimmings, including potatoes, green vegetables, bread and candy.

Antonelli said the baskets were made possible through donations by Lodge members.

"I want to thank all the members for making contributions and for making this program a success," he said.

Purchased from Rosie's Market on Southern Artery, baskets were then delivered by Lodge members who donated their cars and trucks. Names of needy families are submitted by Lodge members, churches and other organizations, Antonelli said.

The exalted ruler also thanked members Leo Nunnaro, John Guiney, Bob Graham, Walter Belcher, Bob Tufts, James Dalton as well as other Lodge members connected with this project.

Antonelli added that he has received many phone calls from basket recipients thanking the Elks for their generosity.

The Quincy Police Department lit up the eyes of many youngsters as it distributed several hundred brand new toys and games to children at Quincy City Hospital and in Germantown neighborhoods.

Robert Hanna, crime prevention officer for the Quincy Police Department, said the department along with McGruff the Crime Dog and Fruity the Elf visited the children's ward at Quincy City Hospital Wednesday at 6 p.m. and treated youngsters to a Christmas party.

In addition to giving out many new toys, the department also donated a video cassette recorder to the ward. Hanna said. Both toys and VCR were made possible through collections and donations solicited by the police department.

At 4 p.m., the Quincy police department distributed toys and gifts to needy children in Germantown at the Germantown Neighborhood Center, 333 Palmer St. Hanna said about "five bags of brand new toys" were given to the youngsters.

Jeff Burrell, secretary of the Quincy Police Betterment Association, and Sgt. Richard Curran, president of the Superior Officer's Association, coordinated the efforts for both programs. Hanna said several hundred toys were collected by the police department and all involved did a "super job."

Another community helping hand is the Salvation Army which presented food baskets, new toys, food vouchers and other items to more than 2000 people in Quincy, said Major Paul Carlino, officer in charge.

Among the many charitable efforts performed by the Salvation Army Baxter St. Corps is the delivery of 150 food baskets, canned food drives, supplying food vouchers and Christmas parties for youngsters as well as senior citizens and nursing home residents.

Major Carlino said the Salvation Army's various Christmas programs are made possible mostly by fundraisers, including the famous Kettle drives. "The kettle drives are doing very well. People are responsive to the Salvation Army and they are very supportive.

"We are grateful for their support," he added.

Carlino said there is a "steady stream of distribution" during the last days before Christmas. "We don't turn any legitimate need down," he said.

Major Carlino said the Salvation Army tries to meet the needs of all those in need during the holidays. He said the Army is still taking applications for assistance.

The Quincy Interfaith Sheltering Coalition is also opening their hearts as it will host this year's Central Baptist Church Christmas Day dinner for the homeless.

Jim McGill, case manager supervisor, said the Central Baptist Church Center, Foster St., Quincy, will serve Christmas dinner for anyone from 2 to 4 p.m. The church will open at 1 p.m. and people are invited to enjoy the company of one another, McGill said.

Donations may be sent to the church center.

In Wake Of Fatal Fire

Mulvey Seeks $150,000 Budget Increase For More Building Inspectors

City Building Commissioner Matthias Mulvey has asked Mayor Francis X. McCauley for a budget increase of at least $150,000 in order to hire more building inspectors.

The budget increase sought by Mulvey comes in the wake of a fatal fire in a North Quincy building last week that was in violation of two building codes.

Richard Schoonover, 30, of North Weymouth, and Brent Johnson, 33, of New Jersey, were killed in the Dec. 16 fire that destroyed their makeshift apartment on the second floor of 98 Holmes St.

No permits had been issued for use of the manufacturing building as a residence, Mulvey said.

The building's sprinkler system was also disconnected, apparently without permission from the building and fire departments as required by law, Mulvey said. The law states a building used for manufacturing must be sprinklered, he said.

Mulvey, who toured the apartment site after the fire, was expected to meet with police, state and local officials as well as the city solicitors and a representative from the district attorney's office Wednesday to decide whether to file charges against Rosemary Kelly, of Milton, the building's owner. According to city records, it is listed as an office building for manufacturing and is in an industrial zone.

Mulvey said it is a landlord's responsibility to see to it that a building complies with proper codes. "Basically, if you own a building, you're supposed to know what's going on," he said.

However, Mulvey added, "There's probably not a structure in the world that would comply with all the building codes."

FIRE OFFICIALS sealed off a building at 98 Holmes St., North Quincy, the scene of a two-alarm fire which killed Richard Schoonover, 30, of North Weymouth, and Brent Johnson, 33, of New Jersey. Probable cause of the fire was careless disposal of smoking material, according to the State Fire Marshal's office. Charges may be filed against the owner because part of the building was apparently used as an apartment without a permit.

Mulvey is seeking the budget increase of at least $150,000 in order to hire six more inspectors. He said one of the problems with building code compliance is infrequent inspection.

According to Mulvey, his department does not have enough inspectors to conduct frequent inspections of the city's buildings. "We definitely need more help. If we don't go in, people don't do it (comply with codes)," he said.

"I think the Mayor does understand this problem," Mulvey said.

The building commissioner said he believes if the sprinkler system had been connected, it would have "put the fire right out."

The cause of the fire is believed to be the careless disposal of smoking material.

"It is my feeling that if the sprinkler system had been working, those two men would still be alive," Mulvey said.

Expanded Pool Program For School Vacations

The Quincy Recreational Department will operate the pool at the Lincoln Hancock Community School on an expanded schedule during the school vacation period.

Recreation Director Barry J. Welch said the pool will operate on a special day schedule Monday, Dec. 28; Tuesday, Dec. 29; Wednesday, Dec. 30 and Thursday, Dec. 31.

The program is for youngsters age 6-high school and will be conducted from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. The swims will be supervised by the Recreation Department Aquatic Staff. Participants may use their regular pool participation card or pay a guest fee at the door. Parents who accompany youngsters may also swim at that time.

This day program is for additional hours of swimming, the normal evening schedule departmental swims will still be held Monday, Dec. 28, Tuesday, Dec. 29, Wednesday, Dec. 30. The pool will be closed Dec. 24, 25, 26, 27, 31, Jan. 1 and Jan. 2nd. Normal programs will resume Sunday, Jan. 3 at 1 p.m.

Additional information is available by calling the Quincy Recreation Department at 773-1380, ext. 204.

First Varsity Win For Stevenson

Raiders Cut Malden Down To Size, 63-49

Ted Stevenson, who had spent seven years as freshman coach, assistant boys' coach and for the past three years as boys' assistant, collected his first win as North Quincy boys' varsity basketball coach last Friday with an impressive 63-48 victory over a big, strong Malden team.

Except for a poor night from the foul line, Stevenson would have had a win in his first game as Ed Miller's successor as the Raiders missed 14 foul shots in dropping a 68-66 squeaker to Everett.

North was scheduled to play Peabody last night (Wednesday) and will host Taunton Saturday night at 7:30. Next Tuesday and Wednesday it will play in the annual holiday tournament at Quincy. The Raiders will play Weymouth South Tuesday at 6 p.m. and will meet either the Quincy-Weymouth North loser in the consolation game Wednesday night at 6 or the Quincy-Weymouth North winner in the championship game at 7:30.

Stevenson, who has coached most of the North players since the fourth or fifth grade, was delighted with his first varsity win.

"About midway through the final quarter when I realized we would probably win, I got the most wonderful feeling inside," he said. "I'm elated. We won't play many bigger teams physically than Malden. Our zone press in the second quarter took them out of their game. The kids worked awfully hard and it paid off."

The Raiders came up with eight steals four by Teddy Stevenson, the coach's son, and North allowed Malden only four points and one field goal in the second quarter.

After taking an 11-10 first quarter lead, North outscored the visitors, 18-4, in the second quarter and its 29-14 halftime lead was more than enough.

Stevenson hit on two of four three-point shots in the second quarter and the new three-point rule hurt Malden as it took itself out of the game in the second half by attempting several wild three-point shots.

"Teddy played a fine game, Kip Caldwell did a fine job on the boards (six rebounds) and Billy MacDougall came off the bench to give us 11 big points," Stevenson said. Dave Lawless and B.J. Sylva also had excellent games.

Stevenson led all scorers with 22 points, including four three-pointers. MacDougall had 11 points and Sylva 10.

Earlier at Everett North lost, 68-66, despite 21 points and 11 rebounds for Sylva. Lawless had 12 points and Stevenson 10. The 14 missed three throws were costly to the Raiders.

North trailed, 48-41, after three quarters, but Sylva hit a three-pointer to make it a two-point game with three seconds left in the game.

LeVangie Completes Good Volleyball Season At NU

Marlo LeVangie of Quincy recently completed another outstanding seson on Northeastern University's volleyball team, and as a result received her second varsity letter.

The talented outside-hitter helped to push her team into the Eastern College Athletic Conference Division I finals, where they placed third overall defeating fourth-ranked Fairleigh-Dickinson in the consolation game. James Madison, seeded second, won the conference championship after knocking off number one-ranked Hofstra University.

The Huskies concluded the season with a 30-6 record, sweeping their biggest rival, the University of Massachusetts, in all three meetings this fall.

This is only their second season in the NCAA Divisision I, as they have moved up after dominating the New England Division II ranks in 1984 and 1985. Considering the upgraded caliber of competition, their impressive record can be even more appreciated.

According to Coach Mark Massey, "Marlo was by far the most intense player on the team. She might also be the best defensive specialist in the Northeast."

MARLO LEVANGIE

Marlo attended Quincy High School where she lettered in both spring and winter track, basketball and volleyball. Some of her numerous honors include Suburban League All-Star in 1984-85, Suburban League MVP, Ledger All-Star and the All-Scholastic Team, both also in 1984-85. She was class president during her sophomore and junior years and belonged to the National Honor Society.

Marlo is majoring in electrical engineering, and is a member of the Class of 1991.

Presidents Must Sharpen Shooting

The Quincy boys' basketball team is hoping to rebound from a winless season and must improve greatly on last year's poor shooting.

However, the Presidents got off to a bad start last week, losing to the Greater Boston League's Medford and Peabody and again poor shooting played a large part in the losses.

Quincy was scheduled to face Somerville last night (Wednesday), and next Tuesday and Wednesday will host the annual holiday tournament. The Presidents will play Weymouth North at 7:30 Tuesday and will face either the North Quincy-Weymouth South loser in the consolation game Wednesday at 6 p.m. or the North Quincy-Weymouth South winner in the championship game at 8.

Last Friday the Presidents lost to Peabody (2-0), 73-50.

Joe Russell and Frank Calabro scored eight points apiece for Quincy.

Earlier in the week the Presidents lost to Medford, 57-44, as they shot only 21 percent from the field and 44 percent from the foul line.

Dan Biagini had 13 points, nine rebounds, six assists and six steals. John Regan had 15 points, Bob Richmond came off the bench and scored 13 points, including five of six free throws in the last quarter, and Russell had eight points and six assists.

Quincy moved to within five points three times in the second half.

Cronin No. 2 Scorer At Holy Cross

Denis Cronin of Quincy is the number two scorer for the Holy Cross College hockey team with 22 points.

Cronin, a forward defenseman, has seven goals and 15 assists for the Crusaders (4-5), who return to action next Monday, Dec. 28, in the Codfish Bowl at UMass-Boston. They join host UMass, Salem State and Elmira in the annual tournament.

Walsh, Rowell Lead Mite A's To Win

Quincy's Mite A hockey team defeated Medfield, 6-3, to improve its record to 7-2-1 in the Greater Boston League.

The game was featured by the outstanding work of Brian Walsh in goal, David Rowell had a hat trick and Mark Regan, Scot Cooper and Paul Principotto one goal each. Regan had four assists, Cooper three and Rowell, Matt Watkins and Danny Hughes one each.

The Mite A's suffered their second defeat as it bowed to Pembroke, 3-1, with Regan scoring the lone Quincy goal. Walsh again played well in goal.

North Takes Somerville, Bows To Arlington

North Quincy's hockey team, trying to rebound from a frustrating 4-14-1 season, broke even against Greater Boston League teams last week and Coach Kevin Jago was pleased with the Raiders' performances.

North opened with a 4-2 victory over Somerville and last Saturday dropped a 5-1 decision to perennial powerhouse Arlington, which again looks like one of the top teams in the state. (Arlington had opened with an 11-5 win over Quincy).

The Raiders were scheduled to play at Everett last night (Wednesday), will play Malden's Laconti rink and next Monday will face Medford at 7:45, also at the Laconti rink.

"We played a fine game against Arlington and trailed by only a 2-0 score after two periods," said Jago. "Arlington is as strong as any team we will face and I was pleased with the way the boys played."

Matt Furtado scored North's goal with Paul McGrath assisting.

"Our first line of Furtado, Joey Fasano and Billy Dineen played especially well," said assistant coach Rick Avery. "And Brian Mahoney had an excellent game in goal, making 42 saves, including many tough ones."

Fasano scored two goals and added an assist in the earlier win over Somerville.

Fasano broke a 1-1 tie early in the third period with Furtado and Dineen assisting. Dineen also had a goal and Sal Manganaro scored what proved to be the game-winner.

Quincy Bombed By Arlington, Rebounds Against Everett

The Quincy hockey team rebounded from a thrashing at the hands of Arlington, once again one of the top teams in the state, to defeat Everett, 6-4, last Saturday at the Quincy Youth Arena.

Earlier in the week the Presidents lost to Arlington, 11-5, as the Spy Ponders scored six goals in the second period.

Quincy played Malden last night (Wednesday) at Malden, will host Medford Saturday night at 7:50 at the Quincy Youth Arena and will be home to Peabody next Monday night at 7:50 at the Youth Arena.

Paul Scola scored two goals to lead the Presidents against Everett and Chrisd LaForest, Sean O'Neil, Ken Staskywicz and Erik Abboud scored a goal each. Quincy scored three times in the first period, twice in the second and once in the third.

Goalie Greg Chambers played an excellent game and recorded 25 saves.

Quincy had no jchance against a strong Arlington team, but came alive with five goals in the last period.

Rod Davis scored the first goal with Scola assisting, Hank Miller had the second with Tim Mann assisting, O'Neil had the third with assists for Abboud and Ken Staskiewicz and Staskiewicz and Mann scored unassisted.

"Arlington coach Ed Burns has been coaching for 40 years and has more than 600 wins," said Quincy assistant coach George Peachey. "He has another outstanding team this year and we won't face a stronger team.

"The boys came alive in the last period and it carried over to the Everett game. They really came to play and turned in a very good performance. I think we will do all right in the Suburban League this year."

MacFarlane Pleased

54 Turn Out For Quincy Girls Basketball

By TOM SULLIVAN

Doug MacFarlane is back for his second year as Quincy High girls' basketball coach and he was pleased at the large turnout of 54 girls.

"I am extremely excited about the interest in the program, as last year we had only 20 girls turn out," MacFarlane said. "We have two starters and four lettermen back from last year's 4-14 team. Ten of our losses were by a combined total of only 20 points. We were very competitive and it looks as though we will again this season."

The First Ladies are led by senior tri-captains Gayle and Patti Morrell, 5-10 twins, who led the team in scoring and rebounding last year, and Kristen Curtin.

Gayle Morrell was a first team Suburban League all-star and Patriot Ledger all-scholastic last season.

Curtin starts at guard and leads the team's fast break.

Senior Kristen McGhee starts at the other guard and quarterbacks the set-up offense. "She is our sparkplug," MacFarlane said. "Her hustle and desire, especially on defense, inspires her teammates."

Senior Tracey Thornhill is the fifth starter at small forward. She plays both forward and guard and is a fine rebounder for her size.

Senior Karen Craig is the team's 'John Havlicek' off the bench. Also seeing action are senior forwards Jennifer Fay and Janet Morrell, cousin to Gayle and Patti; freshmen Christie Barrett and Jennifer Richmond, who show great promise; and first year players Marion Miller, Pam Norton and Laura Mullen.

Quincy got off to a good start and defeated Medford of the Greater Boston League, 52-29.

Patti Morrell had 23 points and 13 rebounds and Gayle Morrell had 10 points and 12 rebounds as the First Ladies led all the way.

Quincy's full-court zone press and fast break offense were too much for Medford. Curtin had nine points and led the break, and Thornhill started several fast breaks and had nine defensive rebounds.

"I was very pleased with the way the girls executed the full court press and fast break," said MacFarlane.

Last Friday Quincy hosted top-ranked Peabody, another Greater Boston league powerhouse, and lost, 64-42.

Quincy was hurt badly by 37 turnovers and shot only 27 percent from the floor.

Patti Morrell had 12 points and Gayle added 10. Craig played an exceptional floor game.

"Peabody is very strong and I can see why it is ranked number one," MacFarlane said. "It is a very poised and patient team and every time we made a run at them, they would come down and fire in a three-pointer, which really put a damper on our comeback."

Quincy played at Somerville last night (Wednesday), and next Tuesday and Wednesday will play in the annual holiday tournament at Weymouth North. The First Ladies will paly host Weymouth North Tuesday night at 7:30 and will face the North Quincy-Weymouth South loser in the consolation game at 6 o'clock or the North Quincy-Weymouth South winner in the championship game at 7:30 Wednesday night.

2 Impressive Wins

North Girls Off To Good Start

The North Quincy girls' basketball team, which has made the Eastern Mass. tournament the last two years and four times in the past seven years, is off to a good start with two impressive wins over Greater Boston League teams last week.

Paul Bregoli's Raiders battled from behind to edge a strong Everett team, 44-42, in their opener and followed up with an easy 39-16 decision over Malden.

The North girls faced Peabody, ranked eighth in Eastern Mass., last night (Wednesday), and will play in the annual holiday tournament next Tuesday and Wednesday at Weymouth North. They will face Weymouth South at 6 p.m. and will play the Quincy-Weymouth North loser in the consolation game at 6 p.m. or the Quincy-Weymouth North winner in the title game at 7:30 Wednesday night.

North fell behind Everett, 17-12, in the first period as Nancy Flukes had six points and Rita Rooney four. The Raiderettes cut the gap to 23-19 at halftime as Patti Feeney, Melissa Miles and Karrie Pistorino played excellent defense.

Everett scored 10 straight points at the start of the third quarter to lead by 14 points but Bregoli changed his defense and trapped all over the floor as North scored 19 unanswered points to take a 38-35 lead. Tarra Meyer, Miles and Kellene Duffy were outstanding on defense. Flukes broke the school scoring record held by Joanne Runge in the third quarter.

North, with a 24-1 spurt, holding Everett scoreless for six minutes, widened its lead to 43-34 and held on for the big win.

Flukes scored 24 points, a personal high, Rooney had six points and 11 rebounds, Feeney had four points and five steals and Stacey Welch and Paula Tolson played excellent games.

The Raiderettes held Malden to just one field goal in the first half as they raced out to a 24-4 halftime lead.

Flukes, Pistorino, Feeney, Kerrie MacDonald, Kerry Tolson and Duffy played outstanding defense. In the third quarter Flukes and Paula Tolson scored all 10 North points as the lead increased to 34-8 going into the final quarter. Beth Bunker played a fine two-way game and Tricia Mitton also played well.

Flukes had 14 points and six rebounds, Meyer nine rebounds and three assists and Mitton had five rebounds.

"It was a fine way to start the season," said Bregoli. "I was really worried about Everett. It was our third win in three years over them. It was nice to give everyone on the squad a chance to play against Malden."

'Hansel And Gretel' Puppet Show At Library

The You and Me Puppets will present "Hansel and Gretel" at the Thomas Crane Public Library, Quincy Center, Tuesday, Dec. 29, at 7 p.m.

The "Me" of You and Me Puppets is Judith O'Hare, professional puppeteer and specialist in children's drama. The "You" is her audience who are involved directly in the presentation. This particular presentation is suggested for children age four and older and for adults and is sponsored by the Friends of the Library.

Other vacation week activities for children include self-directed activities at the Quincy Square library and at the three branch libraries. Among the activities being offered are: making holiday windsocks or paper chain gingerbread men, playing rebus games with the titles of holiday songs or the chorus of "Jingle Bells," and assembling a snowman out of felt.

Dates for these activities are: Dec. 29 and 10 a.m. until 4 p.m. at the Quincy Square Library; Dec. 29 from 2 until 4 p.m. at the North Quincy Branch Library; Dec. 30 from 9:30 a.m. until 4:30 p.m. at the Adams Shore Branch Library; and Dec. 30 from 2 until 4 p.m. at the Wollaston Branch Library.

Vacation time is also a good time to catch up on pleasure reading, to Dial-A-Story (471-2405), and to watch the Library Book Nook on community television.

WJDA Begins Evening Broadcasts Christmas Eve

Radio station WJDA will feature its first nighttime broadcast Christmas Eve as the station extends its hours to 10 p.m.

General manager James (Jay) Asher received approval for evening broadcasts from the FCC earlier this month.

"We decided to make Christmas Eve our first evening on the air. WJDA will be giving our listeners special Christmas programming that will include a church service.

"In the future we look forward to coverage of local sporting, political and community events," Asher said.

This is the 40th year of broadcasting by WJDA. "It's exciting to have a new door opened as we celebrated our 40th birthday. WJDA proves that life really begins at forty," he said.

65 QHS Students Visit New York City

The Quincy High School Science Department, under the direction of Charles MacLaughlin, recently sponsored its annual field trip to new York City.

Sixty-five students supervised by faculty members Catherine Smith, Maureen Mulvey, Ronald Martin, and George Koolian visited a wide variety of sites including the Metropolitan Museum of Art, NBC Studios, the Guggenheim Museum, the Empire State Building, Rockefeller Center, the World Trade Tower, St. Patrick's Cathedral, the Statue of Liberty, and the American Museum of Natural History.

Students also engaged in skating, swimming, and attended a New York Nets game at the Meadowlands.

They also visited Chinatown and the South Street Seaport, Greenwich Village, the USN Nautilus and the USS Intrepid.

Central Students Present Inventions

Combining creativity and problem solving skills, students fashioned a variety of unique devices.

Regina Murphy blended a pen, pencil, and eraser into a single writing instrument. Jessica Murphy and Lisa Healey redesigned women's shoes with heels that can be switched from high to low.

Mike Kenney, aggravated by hot air poppers that scatter popcorn around the room, designed a Popper Stopper. A tube guides the popcorn to the bowl and a wire mesh covering keeps it there.

Carrie Frenette made sorting the laundry easier. She suggested a two compartment hamper for bleach and nonbleach washes.

After chatting with her grandmother, Maureen Lind recognized the need for a magnifying glass which would fit over the face of a watch.

Jeff Craig was trying to eat and catch up with his reading when he thought of "Eat and Read," a stand which will hold a book and leave the hands free for eating. His grandfather helped him produce the product.

Luke Sheets felt that there was a market for flavored sugar. Combining lemon flavor and sugar could be popular with tea drinkers, he said.

Pets provided a source of inspiration. Suzanne Hamilton offered a glow-in-the-dark collar for the elusive runaway hampster. David Goodman designed a dog diaper and Kevin Price suggested a car carrier for small dogs.

Nicole Tantillo knows the frustration of sitting behind tall people at a theater or sporting event. With short statured people in mind, she designed the "Super Seat." Modeled after an inflatable boat, it expands instantly to enhance viewing.

Slipping eyeglasses would no longer be a problem with Arthur Crosby's "Nosies." This is a small nose bridge which holds glasses in place.

David Johnston designed a kit to offer bike tires traction for snow and ice travel. Tucker Trainor thought of a "Bundle Belt," a conveyor belt which would transport groceries from car to kitchen. Maureen Mellett proposed a protective edge for kitchen wrap dispensers.

Michael Siteman planned and created a "Hatomatic." A baseball cap contains a case with a plastic raincoat for protection against surprise showers.

The students presented their projects during language arts class under the direction of Mrs. Mary Schiess. Each student received a certificate of participation and one project from each class will be sent to the national contest.

WEEK OF: December 24, 1987

BIRTHDAY THIS WEEK
Your powers of determination are impressive; when you pursue a goal, you do so with stamina. Generally a strictly practical person, the coming 12 months see you involved in new areas of interest that may range from public speaking to the fine arts (notably painting and decorating).

AQUARIUS – January 21 - February 19
Home improvements are indicated through this period. Small bonus may arrive by Tuesday. Artistic skills are sharp; this is a good week for creating gifts or decorations.

PISCES – February 20 - March 20
Self-improvement activities are favored, but avoid extremes. Moderation generally is the week's byword. Family decision requires careful consideration. Good week for writing letters.

ARIES – March 21 - April 20
Creativity shines during this holiday week – just watch that imagination doesn't run too wild. Partnership arrangements require careful review of each participant's responsibilities.

TAURUS – April 21 - May 22
The year-end accents financial planning and setting up a realistic budget. Some travel or travel arranging is on tap. Among gifts received now is one with tremendous sentimental value.

GEMINI – May 23 - June 21
After a period rich with career and domestic responsibilities, you start to see the light at the end of the tunnel. Former neighbor may approach you with interesting news.

CANCER – June 22 - July 22
Your creative skills can be put to profitable use; this is a good week for planning your next move. Romantic relationship demands more of your time but should be worth the effort.

LEO – July 23 - August 22
A friend's unusual ideas may be more practical than you believe. Communications improve and this is a splendid week for speaking up. Relative may surprise you with the depth of his or her sentimentality.

VIRGO – August 23 - September 22
Varied events make this one of the year's most interesting weeks. The key is to cling to your sense of humor. A favorite old friend may contact you by Wednesday.

LIBRA – September 23 - October 22
As the year comes to a close, concentrate more on the near future. You may be called on to assume the role of "understudy". Humanitarian interests are accented.

A White New Year's

It was a little late for Christmas, but Quincy was pretty much assured of a White New Year's holiday after Tuesday's snowstorm with blizzard-like conditions.

Mayor Francis McCauley declared a snow emergency about 11:15 a.m. allowing police and the Public Works Department to tow cars if necessary for snow plowing efforts.

McCauley said that [illegible] city's sanders got an [illegible] start about 2 to 2:30 a.m. shortly after the snow began.

At full strength, the city has 63 pieces of equipment clearing streets, including 50 of its own and 50 hired vehicles.

The Quincy Public Schools are on vacation, so it was not necessary for classes to be cancelled for the day.

1987 In Review

It Was A Year Marked By The Unexpected

By NANCY McLAUGHLIN

The year 1987 was marked by the unexpected for the City of Quincy.

It featured one of the closest Quincy elections in recent years with Mayor Francis McCauley winning a fourth term over City Councillor Joseph LaRaia by a slim 474 votes.

McCauley's victory came after his announcement of a $10.1 million city surplus shortly before the election almost backfired when Quincy teachers, who wanted a share of that money, threatened to strike.

The General Dynamics Quincy Shipyard, which had lain dormant since the spring of 1986, was purchased by the Massachusetts Water Resources Authority for use as a staging area for the Deer Island Sewer Treatment Facility.

And the MWRA later announced an agreement with the city for an interim sludge treatment plant at the shipyard.

The city also lost some prominent citizens, such as Richard Koch, Sr., executive director of the Park, Forestry and Cemetery Departments and founder of the Koch Club.

On the plus side, plans moved along for the $55 million Presidents' Place Project in downtown Quincy, the $7.1 million addition and remodeling of the Quincy Police Station, and over $55 million reconstruction of Quincy City Hospital.

In addition, a Broad St. site was selected as a permanent location for a shelter for the homeless.

Some of the highlights of 1987 were:

JANUARY

In his mid-term address, Mayor Francis McCauley predicted a "great year" for the city in 1987.

"As we look forward to 1987, there is no reason why we cannot have as good a year in 1986," said McCauley.

"There are a number of important and very exciting projects coming on line.

"First, there are two public projects that are coming off the drawing board and coming into the bidding stage this month.

"One is the major addition and construction of the Quincy Police station and the second is the construction of an animal shelter.

"...Both are long overdue projects.

"We expect the animal shelter to be completed in the fall of this year and the station which is a much more complex project, we hope will be finished in the fall of 1989.

"There is also another important public, private project that has been going on. It has been in the discussion and drawing board stages all year long and it is the Presidents' Place project."

The mayor also referred to an ordinance change he had submitted earlier that would increase the Zoning Board of Appeals from three to five members.

"I think that is an important step to take. With changes coming up from the zoning task force, I think the expansion of the Zoning Board of Appeals is critical."

McCauley also said he would recommend to the council that the position of traffic engineer be established to implement recommendations in the Traffic 2000 report.

In addition, McCauley announced the establishment of a committee to organize the celebration of the city's centennial next year. Eugene Creedon principal of Broadmeadows Middle School, and Joyce Baker, chairman of the Quincy Historical Society, were appointed cochairmen.

In his address, City Council President Stephen McGrath pointed to the reopening of the Wollaston School planned for September, the study of the police department and Zoning Task Force recommendations as the highlights of his first term as council president.

McGrath was unanimously elected to a second and final term as president of the council.

A special task force from the district attorney's office, Quincy, Milton and Boston Police searched for the knife-wielding attacker of four women in Quincy and Milton.

The first attack was reported Dec. 30 when a woman was stabbed twice while waling to work on Willet St., Wollaston.

On Jan. 15, Lois Walker, 27, of Milton, was stabbed in the back while jogging in Milton during the evening.

Third victim was Kelda Caldwell, 26, of Quincy who was stabbed twice the morning of Jan. 16, while she was walking to work at the State St. South Complex, North Quincy.

The last attack occurred Jan. 19, at 6:30 p.m. when Patricia Sullivan, 41, of Medford, was stabbed from behind as she walked on Governer's Rd., Milton, near the Quincy line.

In all instances, the attacker did not speak. He was described as a light skinned black man with closely cropped hair, 5 feet 8 inches to 5 feet 9 inches tall.

A crime prevention meeting was scheduled in Quincy after a similar session in Milton drew more than 200 people despite a winter storm earlier in the day.

One of the largest crowds in several years overflowed the Council Chambers at City Hall to overwhelmingly support the $54 million Presidents' Place project planned for downtown Quincy.

Twenty people ranging from the developers to laborers spoke in favor of the proposal during the first of two public hearings held by the City Council regarding the proposal. A total of 118 people recorded themselves in favor.

Only one person, Michael Jovanovic, spoke in opposition. He said he would have preferred a four-year college at the site of the former Bargain Center.

No one signed in opposition.

The council took no action on the proposal which is to include retail, office,

Last Chance To Nominate

'Citizen Of Year' Nominations Deadline Today

Today (Thursday) is your last chance to have a voice in who will be The Quincy Sun "Citizen of the Year" for 1987.

All nominations must be in The Sun office, 1372 Hancock St., Quincy Sq. or postmarked by today.

After nominations close, a judging panel will be named to select the final winner from the nominations submitted.

Prior winners are Tony Siciliano, Deputy Director of Civil Defense and Ruth Wainwright of Houghs Neck, long-time community volunteer.

The award was established by The Sun in 1985 to recognize an individual or group for outstanding community service.

The honor may be for a single achievement or for outstanding service over a period of time.

Anyone receiving one nomination will be considered for the award. The award will not necessarily go to a person receiving the most nominations. This is not a popularity contest.

The name of the winner will be announced in January.

Here is the opportunity for you to voice your opinion as to who is Quincy's "Citizen of the Year" for 1987.

Those nominated in the past two years are eligible to be nominated again this year.

This is your last chance to help select this year's winner.

Fill it out and send it in. You may have the winner.

The Same Frank McCauley

Mayor Francis McCauley would like to have won his fourth term bigger than by the 460-vote margin that he did.

McCAULEY

But don't expect to see him change his image or style the next two years because of it. It's going to be business as usual with the accent on business.

"Are we going to get the same Frank McCauley?" he was asked.

"Yes," he says. "The same Frank McCauley."

He is still going to bite the bullet when he thinks it needs to be bitten.

"I'm still going to say no when I think I should," he says. "It may not be politically wise or politically popular to say no sometimes. It doesn't help when it comes to votes. It usually hurts."

"But that's the way I am. I'm straight. I'm not a polished politician. Maybe that's my problem."

He wonders if his margin of victory might have been larger if the voter turnout had been heavier. But he is not sure.

Quincy has 46,681 registered voters of which 50.3 percent went to the polls.

"If it had been 60 to 65 percent where would those votes have gone," he wonders. "Were these people who were satisfied with how we were doing things and just didn't turn out to vote?"

McCauley says challenger Joseph LaRaia "threw a lot of stuff out there" during the campaign.

He noted, for example, the MWRA buyout of the General Dynamics shipyard, the closing of Remicks as two that quickly came to mind.

"Things like that were beyond my control," he says. "But I got the blame for them. I even got blamed for having a surplus."

"I think there were a lot of one-issue people out there. Whatever the problem, they wanted someone to blame and as the mayor I got it."

McCauley feels his six years in office have been positive and that the city is in good financial shape.

Although his margin of victory was narrow, he feels the important thing is that he was re-elected. He notes that eight incumbent mayors in Massachusetts were [illegible] and several lost two years ago.

"It's a tough business," he says. "If I had lost, I could have walked out of here with a feeling of accomplishment during my time as mayor."

And, he adds:

"If I had lost by the margin that I had won by, I would not have asked for a recount. That would have been it. Period."

McCauley doesn't intend to be a "lame duck" mayor the next two years.

He said the morning after the election that this might be his last term. But that was the morning after the election.

"It's really too early to even think about running or not running for a fifth term," he says. "I'll make a decision on that a year from now."

If McCauley were to run, win and complete a fifth term, he would be making Quincy history as Plan A mayoral longevity champ.

ROSS

He would be the only mayor to win five Plan A terms consecutively. And he would be the only mayor to complete five terms. Late Mayor Charles Ross was elected to five terms under Plan A but not consecutively. And, he served nine of the 10 years.

Looking ahead to 1989, you've got to remember that McCauley is a history buff who both loves and respects history -- especially Quincy history.

And he wouldn't mind making some of his own before departing City Hall.

WHEN CITY CLERK John Gillis administers the oath of office to Mayor McCauley Monday, Jan. 4, it will be the 15th time he has performed that duty.

GILLIS

Gillis swore in Amelio Della Chiesa to three terms starting in 1960; James McIntyre three terms; Walter Hannon, two terms; Joseph LaRaia, one term; Arthur Tobin two terms and McCauley, four terms.

The inaugural ceremony will take place at 10 a.m. at the Vocational Technical High School gymnasium.

McCAULEY indicates his inaugural address will be brief and to the point with "nothing really earth-shaking." As has been his custom, he will not read from a prepared statement address but deliver it in an off-the-cuff style.

TWO OF THE city's three living mayors -- Walter Hannon and Arthur Tobin -- are expected to accept invitations from McCauley to be guests at the inaugural ceremony.

But Joseph LaRaia informed McCauley two or three weeks ago that he has another commitment and will not attend.

30 Density Zoning Orders commercial and residential space.

Some 30 zoning orders aimed at reducing density were introduced by the council president and three city councillors.

The proposals, part of a special zoning review report, were submitted by McGrath and task force members Thomas Nutley, chairman; Michael Cheney and Patricia Toland.

They included such recommendations as increasing the square feet per dwelling unit in Residence C from 1,000 to 1,800 and reducing the maximum number of building stories in Residence C from eight to six.

A group of Quincy residents calling themselves Citizens Advocating Proper Planning (CAPP) submitted an initiative petition to amend the Zoning bylaws in the city.

Except for Residence B, where the requirements would be 3,500 square feet per dwelling unit, the zoning changes would require a minimum of 2,50 square feet of land area for each residential unit in multi-units housing.

It would also limit the height of all buildings to six stories.

City Treasurer and Collector Franklin Jay said he was "just shocked...I'm stunned" when Mayor McCauley announced he would not reappoint Jay to the position he had held since August, 1982.

Instead, McCauley said he would appoint Dana Childs of Hingham to the $40,800 a year position effective Feb. 2.

The Quincy Board of Registrars voted unanimously to keep Richard Koch Jr. on the city's voter registration list which kept him in his city councillor at large seat.

John J. Walsh of Squantum had filed a complaint charging Koch had relinquished his right to vote in Quincy since moving to Brewster last spring.

Koch gave a Quincy apartment at 164 West Elm Ave. as his address for voting purposes.

The General Dynamics Quincy Shipyard was rezoned from Industrial B to Planned Unit Development so that the City Council would have control over what went into the yard which was in the process of being sold.

The Quincy Housing Authority received a gift of 27.5 acres of waterfront land in Germantown from a private family trust.

The city was hit with five winter storms, four in nine days.

A committee on implementation of recommendations in the police study conducted under the auspices of the Massachusetts Municipal Association held its first meeting.

Ronald P. Iacobucci, 31, announced his candidacy for councillor at large.

After 66 years, Quincy Furniture, pioneer business in the downtown center, closed its doors at 1604 Hancock St.

Ruth Wainwright of Houghs Neck, a long-time volunteer in community causes and activities, was selected as The Quincy Sun's "Citizen of the Year" for 1986.

Deaths during Jan. included: H. Maurice Hughes, 75, retired bank executive; Lawrence S. Butler, 71, former election officer, taxations examiner; Leland Anderson, 90, retired Quincy High School assistant principal; Alice Spangenberg, 84, professor emeritus of English at Eastern Nazarene College and a member of the first graduating class in 1923; Ruth L. Haggerty, 62, former principal of the Squantum Elementary School; Robert S. Osborne, 64, a former manager of the Sheraton Corp. and a former Patriot Ledger sports writer.

Ross Warns $33 Tax Rate To Rise

40 Years Ago

Mayor Charles A. Ross warned in his inaugural address that Quincy was faced with an increase of $1.5 million in the cost of running the city government in 1948. He predicted a $7 or $8 boost in the tax rate.

Ross listed a new municipal health center and widening of Revere Rd. and Canal St. as two of the chief objectives of his administration, the last before Plan E goes into effect.

He also promised a city-wide recreation program, construction of more stands and a garage in the municipal stadium and completion of plans for a proposed new surgical and medical addition to City Hospital.

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

It has been said that blessed is the person who has the gift of making friends, for it is one of God's greatest gifts. It involves many things but above all it is the power of going out of one's self, and seeing and appreciating whatever is noble and loving in another person ... Yes, friendship is a great gift in life. It is equally great in the giving as well as in the receiving. Real friendship requires a genuine like of the person; not what the person can give or do for us. To receive the gift of friendship, we must in turn give it ... Unlike a Birthday or Christmas gift, the gift of friendship is intangible. Above all, it is a gift we must earn. This is often a forgotten truth. Because of this friendships can be easily forfeited. For example:

All of us have forgetful friends. And lest we forget, let us remember that we, too, at times are the forgetful friends to others. Too many times we forget to say "thank you;" too many times we forget to say nice to hear things on this 'n that; too many times we forget to do things we know we should do. When our actions and thoughts lapse in this way, friendships can wane.

John Ruskin, the late English writer, once said: "Friendship is the nearest thing we know to religion. God is love, and to make religion akin to friendship is simply to give it the highest expression conceivable by man."

Traffic Improvements Would Cost $12 M

(Cont'd from Page 5)

FEBRUARY

A traffic engineering firm reported to Mayor Francis McCauley that it would cost some $12 million to improve Quincy's traffic circulation.

Vannesse Hangen Associates of Boston, contracted in March, 1986, to conduct a Traffic 2000 study, recommended targeting for improvements 28 locations within three areas of the city: Quincy Center, Southern Artery, and North Quincy where development has taken place.

Also included in the firm's recommendations was the potential use of federal aid and possibly MDC funding for construction.

The city so far had received some $71,265 in volunteer contributions from developers in the targeted areas which was being used to offset the $107,000 cost of the study.

The study objectives were to define a traffic circulation pattern and network so as to provide a safe and efficient traffic pedestrian movement and to develop a multi-year comprehensive capital improvement program aimed at implementing recommended traffic patterns and a proposed network.

Among the recommendations in the report was to convert Hancock St. in front of City Hall to two-way traffic, eliminate parking around First Parish Church and make parking in front of City Hall parallel.

A total of 30 spaces would be lost in Quincy Sq., seven in front of City Hall, according to Vanesse Hangen.

"We need more parking and we have to keep that up front in our mind," said Councillor Patricia Toland when the report was presented to the City Council.

"Eliminating parking in Quincy Center is not wise," said council president Stephen McGrath. "We want people to park and stop in the center."

Mayor McCauley said later that all the recommendations would be examined after a traffic engineer was hired in July.

"We have to look at all the proposals with an open mind," McCauley said. "Some will be implemented depending on the recommendations of the traffic engineer.

"We'll deal closely with the council."

Developers of the $55 million Presidents' Place project began working towards a spring construction start after the City Council unanimously approved four orders regarding the project.

"We're extremely pleased and look forward to working with the city to make Presidents' Place the showcase that it is and will be," said one of the developers, Stephen Ricciardi of Ricciardi Co.

The other developer was Campanelli Industries of Braintree. The Boston Five Cent Savings Bank was to finance and be the principal tenant of the project at the site of the former Bargain Center in Quincy Sq.

Ricciardi said the office building, with four and eight stories, would probably be the first structure under construction along with the five-floor garage.

Also included in the project was a 10-story, 100 foot condominium building and $1.1 million, two-story building on Saville Ave. to replace classroom and office space being lost by Quincy Junior College.

QJC had been using the old Norfolk County Courthouse which was expected to be included in the project.

The former Bargain Center was scheduled to be demolished to make way for the project.

The council noted some concerns about design and parking.

"The project will be a 1000-fold better structure than what is there now," noted McGrath.

Redesign plans for the first two buildings of the project won the approval of the Historic District Commission as well.

Mayor McCauley said the city intended to reapply to extend the life of its landfill if two areas were negotiated out of the Environmental Impact Report.

But the West Quincy landfill would still close, at least temporarily, in May when it ran out of space, McCauley said.

However, no interruption of residential trash pickup was expected, according to the mayor. Commercial users were prohibited from using the landfill the previous fall to extend the life of the dump for residential customers.

McCauley said he reached the decision after a meeting with representatives of the Department of Environmental Quality Engineering (DEQE) and Executive Office of Environmental Affairs.

Councillor Joseph LaRaia announced that he would run for mayor.

He said he believed he could successfully return to the mayor's office by putting together a political coalition built on "many pockets of concern in the city."

LaRaia contended that McCauley's personal interests had taken over his administration.

For example, he said, McCauley initiated two pay raises which would have doubled his salary from $25,000 to $50,000, and made an unsuccessful attempt to make the mayor's term of office four years instead of two.

"These are pockets of concern," said LaRaia, who had been elected to that office on a recount in 1975 after a bitter campaign with incumbent Walter Hannon.

Quincy residents concerned about the threat of high rise buildings in their neighborhoods packed the Council Chambers at City Hall to overwhelmingly support two proposed zoning changes.

One change would regulate the future use of land at a busy intersection in North Quincy; the other would change a zoning ordinance which allows the automatic "cross-over" from one zoning use to another.

A community meeting was held at the Atlantic Neighborhood Center, North Quincy, to acquaint women with means of self-protection in response to the recent stabbings of four women in Quincy and Milton.

Registry To Move To Downtown Location

(Cont'd from Page 9)

Mayor McCauley said the city had spent a total of $309,000 so far that winter on snow removal, not including the storm of Feb. 9.

That was $9,000 over the budgeted $300,000 but it didn't mean that any future snow removal would be endangered, he said.

Remick's Department Store was expected to remain in the city despite the fact that its building at 1513-1523 Hancock St. was sold for $1,600,000.

Investigators continued to probe the suspicious Washington's birthday, three-alarm house fire at 280 Fayette St., Wollaston, which injured seven firemen, none critically.

A second informational meeting regarding the establishment of a residence for deaf adults in Quincy was held at the South Shore Rehabilitation Center, 3 Arlington St.

Over 50 percent of Central Middle School students signed a National Forum petition to urge a forum on nuclear weapons and other issues be aired by the major networks.

Broad Meadows Middle School attended a Just Say No Substance Abuse Assembly.

Deaths during February included: William F. Pedersen Sr., 79, a managing editor of the Tribune Publishing Co. for more than 50 years; Gerald S. Shea, who received his high school diploma at age 84; Zella J. (Clemens) Johnson, 63, a founder and volunteer at the Squantum Community Center; Sidney L. Gardiner, 78, a deputy collector in the billing department of Quincy City Hospital for 25 years.

MARCH

The Registry of Motor Vehicles announced that it would move from its Broad St. location to the Quincy Fair building in Quincy Sq. no later than September, clearing the way for a shelter for the homeless at the city-owned site.

"This gives us time to take care of the details," said Mayor Francis McCauley," such as renovations, terms of usage and liability."

McCauley said he directed the Mayor's Committee to Find a Permanent Location for the Homeless to study the feasibility of housing the Detoxification Center in the same building with the homeless, and to report back to him.

The center currently had a three-year commitment from Quincy City Hospital for use of the Gordon House, noted McCauley.

"Space is the critical question," said McCauley. "Is there enough space to house both groups?"

"I have an open mind on the situation, but I don't want to see the two groups jammed in," he said.

At its meeting later in the month, the committee recommended that a homeless shelter be the only tenant of the building.

Committee members agreed there would not be enough space for both groups at the building, according to committee chairman David Smith, also the city's personnel director.

Nancy Powers, executive director of the Quincy Interfaith Sheltering Coalition, said the shelter would have sleeping space for 40 men and women, bathroom facilities with eight showers, kitchen area, food storage area with two to four refrigerators and a dining room with seating for 50 people.

Also, a utility room with two to four washers and dryers, offices, staff station, and entry area for clients to prevent lines outside the building.

Mrs. Powers could not estimate how long it might take to renovate the registry building for use as a shelter.

But she did say that a shelter at the Faxon House at Quincy City Hospital was ready after a month's remodeling.

"And that needed extensive work," she said.

Zoning continued to be a hot issue as an estimated 250 people filled the Council Chambers at City Hall to speak for or against 17 changes proposed by the City Council's Zoning Task Force.

The changes, discussed at a joint public hearing of the City Council and Planning Board, would increase parking requirements, lower building heights, reduce the density of housing units, and raise minimum setbacks.

No action was taken at the two and one half hour hearing.

Proponents generally favored the changes as a way to preserve the city's neighborhoods. Some called for stricter restrictions.

Opponents noted that development allows revitalization and urged caution in tightening zoning restrictions.

A total of 26 people spoke in favor of the changes, and 12 spoke against them.

Mayor McCauley trimmed an additional $1,660,893 from the budget in light of reduced state aid, and planned to submit a $96,143,060 budget to the City Council in April.

McCauley said the additional reduction would not result in cutbacks of city services or layoffs of personnel.

"We'll maintain the same city services," said McCauley, who declined to specify the cuts until the budget was presented to the council.

The mayor had proposed a municipal budget of $97,803,953 for fiscal 1988.

But after learning the city would receive the smallest annual increase in state aid since fiscal 1982, he reviewed some areas of the budget and did additional trimming, he said.

Ward 1 City Councillor Michael Cheney said he would hold a meeting to form a city-wide committee to promote racial harmony in Quincy.

Cheney said he would meet with the Rev. Francis Kelley of St. Boniface Church, and Charlene MacDonald, the Planning Department's representative to community centers throughout the city, to discuss the committee.

"We want to assure that every neighborhood in the city of Quincy is safe," said Cheney.

The idea for a committee came ot of a meeting of 35 county and city officials and community group members to discuss steps to prevent possible racial and other civil rights violations in the city.

The meeting followed an incident in Germantown which involved 15 to 16 white and black youths, an arrest and two minor injuries.

The number of drug and alcohol incidents in the Quincy Public Schools was the lowest in a long time, but the social health coordinator said he wasn't letting his guard down for a minute.

"According to John "Butch" Mahoney, whose job it had been for the past 16 years to keep those substances out of the schools, such incidents have involved youngsters as young as fifth graders.

And fourth graders know where they can get it, said Mahoney.

City Councillor Theodore DeCristofaro said he would work diligently to keep Point Middle School open after it was rumored to be the likely choice to close among the city's five middle schools.

"This is our final public school in Ward 2, and it is going to be my job to work with the neighborhood and the parents of the school children to see that this school stays open," DeCristofaro said.

Former Quincy School Supt. Lawrence P. Creedon was placed on three years probation and ordered to undergo counseling after he pleaded guilty to indecent assault and battery on a mentally ill, homeless woman in 1986.

Carl Valenti learned that he would soon be able to drop the word "acting" from his title of Acting Fire Chief of Quincy.

Valenti learned that the Civil Service had raised his mark to a passing grade for the last test given for chief. He had entered his second appeal.

Mayor McCauley said he would act to make Valenti permanent chief after he received the Civil Service list.

The City Council unanimously approved final design plans for the renovation and addition to the Quincy Police Station.

Federal and City officials announced that a $250,000 study of the amounts of sludge and pollutants in Quincy Bay from the wastewater treatment plant at Nut Island would begin in May.

The nine-month study would be done by the Environmental Protection Agency.

Mayor Francis McCauley and his wife, Sandra, left for a trip to Taiwan with a delegation from the U.S. Conference of Mayors.

In an effort to save $14 million, the Stop & Shop Companies announced they would move the bulk of their Quincy corporate headquarters s to Braintree in a restructuring program that included cutting 450 jobs.

Mayor McCauley established a Centennial Committee to plan activities and events to make the 100th anniversary of Quincy as a city.

Cartoonist Jim Davis, the creator of "Garfield" came to Quincy to present St. Mary's School fifth grader Robert Tobin, 11, a $1,000 savings bond as the grand prize winner in the "Create a Character Contest."

Deaths during March included: Robert Littlewood, 80, past monarch of the Taleb Grotto, Quincy; Mason LaCoste, 64, member of the board of directors of Southwest Quincy Neighborhood Housing Services; Irene Kelly, 55, former director of the Quincy Track Club; Arthur Newton Jr., 72, manager of the former Sanborne and Damon Hardware Store in Quincy for 23 years; Ellen (Tighe) O'Connor, 84, restaurant manager of Manet Lunch for 35 years; Daniel Munkley, 81, retired fire captain in the Quincy Fire Dept.

APRIL

Mayor Francis McCauley submitted a record $96 million budget to the City Council which included increases of over $1 million each in the education and refuse disposal budgets.

"The budget reflects an increase of $2,818,220 or 3 per cent over fiscal year 1987 expenditures to date," McCauley said.

"I believe the amount funded for the various city departments will allow our city government to provide an acceptable level of city services in fiscal year 1988," the mayor said.

The city had so far had exceeded the current budget by $1,376,595 which actually made the new budget $4.2 million higher than the original fiscal year 1987 budget.

Later in the month, McCauley said he would recommend to the City Council in May that commercial, industrial and personal property be valued at 150 percent of full fair cash value for tax rate setting purposes for fiscal 1987.

CIPP categories were assessed at 130 percent of full fair cash values for fiscal 1984, 1985 and 1986, according to McCauley.

The residential tax rate would be set at $11.41 per thousand dollars of assessed value, according to McCauley's classification plan.

The tax rate for commercial, industrial and personal property would be $20.99 per thousand dollars of assessed valuation, he said.

Groundbreaking ceremonies were held for the $8.9 million addition and renovation to the Quincy Police Station despite a last minute problem.

SUN PUBLISHER Henry Bosworth presented "Citizen of the Year Award" to Ruth Wainwright of Houghs Neck at a ceremony at Quincy Sons of Italy Social Center in March.

The problem involved flood-proofing the original building potentially increasing the project cost by as much as $160,000, according to Department of Public Works Deputy Commr. David Colton.

But the start of construction and expected completion in 27 months was not expected to be affected, said Colton, the project manager.

"It's not a serious problem," said Colton. "It's nothing that can't be handled."

Site preparation was expected to start in early May with full construction underway near the end of that month.

Completion target date was fall, 1989.

Mayor McCauley announced that the city received approval for its final payment request of $153,596 from the federal Emergency Management Agency for damages caused by Hurricane Gloria in 1985.

Hurrican Gloria had hit the eastern seaboard in September, 1985, leaving behind substantial damage to the city. Damage was caused to city streets and sidewalks by driving rains, and trees uprooted.

The Adams baseball field and the Stoney Brae and O'Rourke playgrounds were damaged when falling trees hit park lights and bleachers and demolished a 44-foot chain link back stop. Also damaged was the Houghs Neck Fire station hose tower.

Quincy police detectives searched the New Bedford apartment of a suspect in the stabbings of four women but reported no new developments in the case.

The apartment of William Marguetty, 29, of New Bedford was searched, said Quincy Police Capt. David Rowell who headed up the task force that was searching for the stabber.

Marguetty was being held in Boston in connection with the stabbing murder of a 29-year-old Roslindale woman in her apartment.

Detectives were checking for a possible link to four stabbings of women in Quincy and Milton last December and January. No deaths occurred.

Friends organized a reward fund for information leading to the arrest of the person who murdered Lois Quintiliani Damon of Quincy Dec. 14.

She was slain after opening up the Braintree Dairy Mart on Hayward St. which she owned with her husband, William.

He ordinarily would have opened the store that morning but was ill at home.

The Quincy License Board proposed a new smoking ordinance for Quincy restaurants.

The proposed ordinance was drawn up by Health Commr. M. Jane Gallahue and reviewed by the board which voted to send a draft copy to Asst. City Solicitor Donald Hansen for consideration.

It would then be sent to the City Council for approval.

The ordinance, which would apply to all new and existing restaurants in the city, would require those with a seating capacity of more than 40 people to maintain a nonsmoking area comprised of one quarter of the seating capacity.

City Councillors said they would continue to oppose construction of a commuter rail line through Quincy.

Council president Stephen McGrath said the commuter line would "do serious damage to Quincy."

Acting Fire Chief Carl Valenti was set to be sworn in as permanent chief by Mayor McCauley in early May.

"I feel really good about being sworn in as permanent chief," said Valenti. "Now I can start making longer range plans."

Quincy Police Lt. Dennis R. Mannix, 39, of Quincy, a 15-year veteran of the Quincy Police Department, was named Bourne's police chief.

A curling iron accidentally left on a bed was believed to be the cause of a two-alarm blaze at 85 Sea Ave., Houghs Neck, which caused an estimated $80,000 damage.

Mayor McCauley announced the formation of a citizens advisory committee to work with the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) on the study of effects on Quincy Bay of years of sewage pollution.

He was back to work part time after undergoing prostate surgery at Quincy City Hospital.

The city learned that it would receive $1,837,000 in its annual Community Development Block Grant Program from the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development.

The Quincy High School Basketball Alumni Club held its seventh reunion at the Fore River Clubhouse and honored the 1986-1987 Quincy High team.

Those who announced their candidacy for the November election were Timothy Cahill, Stephen McGrath, councillor at large; Charles Phelan, Kevin Burke, John Keenan, Ward 5; John Lydon, Ward 3.

Deaths during April included: Mary C. (Lineberger) Gossard, 88, wife of the late Quincy School Supt. A. Paul Gossard; Arthur I. Burgess, 65, retired social studies and driver education teacher at North Quincy High School; John T. Williams, 70, former business liaison officer for Quincy District Court and a founder of the court's "Earn It" program; Dr. Jessica (Drooz) Etsten, 74, retired pediatrician who maintained a practice in Quincy for many years; Hazel F. (Price) Olson, 87, former leader of Hazel Price's all girl orchestra that broadcast on radio in the 1920s; Elsie S. (Haajamen) Mattson, 92, a founding member of the Veli Hall, the Finnish meeting center; Frank W. Vallier, 79, retired Quincy Police captain with more than 42 years of service and a founder of Survival Inc. drug rehabilitation program; Peter J. Barnicle, 71, former feature writer for The Boston Herald and staff writer for The Quincy Sun; William R. Smith, 54, Quincy firefighter for 27 years; John L. Chiminiello, former owner of John's Oil Co.; Edward E. Corey, 82, retired operator of Wollaston Clam Shop; Aurelio M. Guerra, 71, vice president of the Quincy Sons of Italy; Clarence B. Tarr, 87, retired Quincy Police sergeant with 41 years service.

MAY

The city closed its 110-acre landfill in West Quincy in compliance with an order by a superior court judge.

Mayor Francis McCauley said that residential rubbish would still be picked up by Browning Ferris Industries which would transport it to other landfills.

Cost to the city would be $69 a ton, or about $1.2 million for six months, according to McCauley who explained that the initial money would come from the landfill account.

The additional money was passed by the City Council in the fiscal 1987-1988 budget.

Public Works Commr. Paul Anderson said that pickups had been reported a "shade later" in the day, but nothing major.

In ordering the landfill closed, Superior Court Judge Cortland Mathers criticized the way Quincy had operated the dump and called it "an ecological disaster."

The mayor had maintained that the landfill was not causing any "great environmental problems."

Mather also said that the city could not go ahead with plans to dump in what is known as the Phase III area of the landfill until a number of conditions are met and approved by the state Department of Environmental Engineering.

The superior court jduge also ordered Quincy to make interim improvements such as provisions to release methane gas.

City Solicitor Joseph (Jay) MacRitchie and special counsel Peter Koff obtained a stay from the court on certain aspects of the items required by DEQE.

The attorneys were also scheduled to determine what the state's "real" intent was regarding the landfill, according to Anderson.

"I've felt for quite some time that they don't really, truly want to help us," said Anderson, who explained that it wouldn't make sense for the city to spend more money to try to reopen the landfill if the chances of success were slim.

McCauley said it would cost between $750,000 and $1 million to prepare plans to try to get approval for expansion of the landfill.

Negotiations for the 102-year-old Quincy shipyard began between General Dynamics and a partnership which included former shipyard workers and Reilly-Athy Associates.

The Massachusetts Water Resources Authority also said it wanted to buy or lease part of the property as a staging area for construction of a multibillion dollar regional sewage treatment plant on Deer Island.

The group had raised its bid for the yard from $35 million to $51.3 million.

"I'm very optimistic," said Peter Gwyn, chairman of Mass. Shipbuilders, Inc., comprised of former shipyard workers.

"We have every indication from the chairman of the board of General Dynamics that if the price is in the ball park, which it is, and the money is there, which it is, then we will have the shipyard," he said.

The group was among bidders who received copies of the purchase and sale agreement sent by General Dynamics to let them know what the company expected from a buyer.

Mayor McCauley and developer Stephen Ricciardi announced that two, 130-room hotels and an office building were scheduled to be built at Yankee Heights Corporate Center, off Ricciuti Drive, West Quincy.

Construction of the three buildings, at an estimated cost of $20 million, would comprise the first phase of development at the center, according to Ricciardi, of the Ricciardi Co. of Quincy.

More office buildings could be planned in the future, Ricciardi said.

"We're very pleased that we're finally getting a hotel in Quincy," said McCauley.

Construction was expected to begin in the summer on the first hotel, a Hampton Inn, a division of Holiday Inn, Ricciardi said.

A fall start was planned for the second hotel, he said.

The City Council unanimously passed a municipal budget of $96,058,260 for 1987-1988, but not before it cut $84,800 from the amount Mayor McCauley had proposed.

The cuts included $34,800 in raises for department heads proposed by the mayor, as well as a salary decrease for the treasurer-collector initiated by the council.

Councillor John J. Lydon, Jr., moved to cut the raises and said he "couldn't go along with them."

In addition, $3,800 was cut from the salary of Treasurer-Collector Dana Childs.

McCauley said he was disappointed the council didn't pass what he considered "modest" raises for department heads.

He said the council's action in regard to Childs was in reaction to his not reappointing Franklin Jay Treasurer-Collector and hiring Childs to replace him.

A plan to revitalize the Quincy Center retail district was reintroduced by mayoral candidate Joseph LaRaia.

LaRaia, a city councillor, said his plan, developed when he was mayor 10 years ago, would create a new retail district within a covered mall located in the parking lot bounded by Cottage Ave., Hancock St., Revere Rd. and the Quincy Courthouse.

A major element would be a cross town connector which would link the Southern Artery and Burgin Parkway, he said.

At a meeting of the City Council's Post Audit Committee, LaRaia contended that Quincy City Hospital's budget required City Council approval even though it operates on an enterprise account.

McCauley questioned LaRaia's timing, but stopped short of calling the action political by LaRaia.

"He voted for the enterprise account back in April, 1988," said McCauley.

"It never bothered him until now when he decided to become a candidate for mayor," he said.

Since becoming an enterprise account, QCH had operated on its own revenues.

The City Council voted unanimously to approve one of the first of a number of zoning changes proposed by the council's zoning task force.

The change affected the so-called "crossover" ordinance whereby developers could freely "crossover" from one zoning category to another.

Now developers would have to apply for a secial permit from the Zoning Board of Appeals, and abutters 300 feet in either direction would be notified of the hearing.

Veteran School Committee member Frank Anselmo, who had resigned, said he would return because supporters urged him to come back.

Anselmo walked out of a School Committee meeting in a huff after discussion about closing a middle school. He was strongly opposed to closing any more schools.

Mayor McCauley, School Committee chairman, had not moved for a bond issue to finance the repair and maintenance of the schools, which Anselmo favored.

The head of the Quincy Education Association spoke against the Massachusetts Teachers Association resolution that condoms be made available to school children in seventh grade through high school to fight AIDS.

Rep. Thomas Brownell said there was no truth to fast spreading reports that he had been nominated for a judgeship.

A unique First Communion liturgy was held at St. John's Church for 20 Haitian orphan boys, ages 8 to 18, who were touring the United States.

The Winfield House, a landmark in Wollaston for 50 years, announced that it would close its doors in August.

Mayor McCauley announced his candidacy for a fourth term.

Larry Chretien announced his candidacy for Ward 3 City Council seat, and Robert Jarnis announced his candidacy for School Committee.

Deaths during May included Percival "Joe" Streadwick, 83, former wrestling coach at Quincy High School for 22 years; Agnes E. (Howlett) Malvesti, 72, past president of the Quincy School Department Traffic Supervisors and Guild of St. Mary's Church, West Quincy; Josephine (Lalongo) DeLuca, 100 years old; Mary A. Crowley, 89, past president of the state American Legion Auxiliary.

JUNE

About 35 uniformed Quincy Police officers picketed in front of City Hall before the City Council's Public Safety Committee meeting on the status of the auxiliary police.

The officers later joined a larger group of fellow officers inside at the meeting.

Thirty members of the auxiliary police department also attended.

The auxiliary had not performed its duties since late 1986 when Police Chief Francis Finn delivered a cease and desist order because of the legal liability of the officers.

According to the order, auxiliary officers could only perform in case of disasters or emergencies. They had previously performed duties ranging from crowd control to patrolling city buildings on a volunteer basis.

Councillor Michael Cheney, committee chairman, said that at an earlier meeting, police representatives had expressed the fear that outside law enforcement agencies and the sheriff's department were slowly taking their details from them.

They also felt that the auxiliary police would soon be seeking pay for detail work now being performed by full-time sworn Quincy Police officers, Cheney said.

He said he explained that Tony Siciliano, auxiliary police chief, offered to sign an agreement that auxiliary officers would not seek pay for details, according to Cheney.

Police Chief Francis Finn praised the auxiliary police as "most excellent."

"I'd like them to continue some of the things they've done, but I can't allow them as in the past," said Finn.

Asst. City Solicitor Paul Barbardoro said that auxiliary officer's houses could be subject to attachment and the city couldn't cover them.

"There is almost every reason we shouldn't be out on the street," said Sicilhano. "But we've given 50 years of dedicated service."

Mayor Francis McCauley announced that the city would file a countersuit against the Department of Quality Engineering which ordered the 100-acre West Quincy landfill closed in May.

The DEQE order was upheld by Superior Court Judge Cortland Mathers who criticized the way Quincy had operated the dump and called it an "ecological disaster."

During a press conference, McCauley said, "There are times when you have to stand and fight for what you believe in, and this is one of those times.

"I'd like to see Quincy vindicated. I feel we run a pretty good landfill."

The city was looking forward to a fall start for the trial which should take at least 10 days, said Atty. Peter Koff, the city's special counsel.

Mayor McCauley met with representatives of Kinney Systems to discuss complaints regarding operation and maintenance of the city owned parking lots and garage.

The complaints were made by residents who called the mayor's office and by City Council president Stephen McGrath and other councillors.

"The validated system works well," said McCauley, referring to the system whereby those who park in the lots or garage received a ticket which could be validated by merchants.

"But there are problems such as graffiti on the walls of the garage, lack of continuity maintaining the grass.

"We want to see things kept clean on a continuing basis.

"We're going to insist that they keep the place right."

McGrath said he observed instances where no attendant was present at the ticket booth in the Hancock Parking Area, preventing cars from entering or leaving.

McCauley assigned an individual to spot check the city's parking lots and garage to see if conditions improved.

By the end of the month, McCauley reported, "Conditions are generally better, but we're striving to continually improve."

A fund was established at a local bank for the approximately 15 families left homeless by a four-alarm fire which caused an estimated $200,000 damage to a Merrymount apartment building at 151 Sea St.

Careless disposal of smoking material was the probable cause of the blaze which forced the evacuation by firefighters of residents, including some handicapped, according to Fire Chief Carl Valenti.

No injuries were reported.

Quincy Junior College administrators opposed a plan which would merge QJC into the state system as a subcampus of Massasoit Community College, Brockton.

"We want to keep doing what we're doing," said Dr. Clayton Johnson, QJC president.

The City Council adopted a resolve, submitted by Councillor Patricia Toland, that reaffirmed support for the continued existence of Quincy Junior College as an independent municipal college.

Two municipal rating services upgraded Quincy's credit rating.

Moody's Investors Service upgraded the city's rating one step from Baa to Baa1. Standard and Poors increased the rating two steps, from BBB to A-.

The upgrading would mean that the city would save $100,000 to $125,000 in interest charges when it borrowed $5 million as the first step in renovating the Quincy Police Station and constructing an addition, Mayor McCauley said.

The city learned that a shelter for the homeless at the site of the Registry of Motor Vehicles might take longer than anticipated because the registry was not expected to move to Quincy Sq. before late fall because of a furlding program.

A newsman made news in the Council Chambers at City Hall when Herb Fontaine of WJDA radio was honored with a bronze plaque for his 32 years of service.

Former Boston Bruins star Derek Sanderson spoke to North Quincy High School students about his problems with drugs and alcohol and subsequent recovery.

A majority of women in all age groups said they felt safe on Quincy streets at night according to a questionnaire distributed citywide by the Mayor's Commission on the Status of Women during the spring of 1986 and answered by 374 women.

More than 200 friends, teaching colleagues, former students and former college classmates gathered at the Quincy Neighborhood Club to pay tribute to Ken Rickson who retired after 35 years in the Quincy Public Schools in a variety of positions.

Michael Condon and Patricia Toland announced their candidacy for City Councillor at Large. Howard MacKay announced he would run for the Ward 3 City Council seat.

Deaths during June included John A. "Cappy" Caporale, Sr., 75, a retired health inspector for the City of Quincy and former manager of the Quincy Adams Beverage Co.; John D. Bonomi, 68, Quincy Constable; Richard F. "Pete" Varney, 65, former first vice president of the International Union of Roofers, Waterproofers and Allied Workers; Larry Antonelli, 86, founder and chairman of the board of L. Antonelli Iron Works, Quincy; Joseph H. Littlewood, 83, proprietor of Joe's Barber Shop, Newport Ave., Wollaston, for 50 years; James A. Athy, 65, a principal financial backer of the Fore River Shipyard workers' bid to buy the Quincy Yard; Robert A. Gentry, 74, retired teacher and track coach at North Quincy high School and a founding director of the day camp at the Quincy YMCA.

JULY

The mayoral race heated up along with the temperatures as incumbent Francis McCauley and challenger Joseph LaRaia traded barbs regarding the resignation of Building Inspector Kenneth Johnson to take a more lucrative job in the private sector.

The loss of individuals such as Johnson "reflects the difficulty the mayor has in keeping qualified competent individuals," said LaRaia, a city councillor.

"It points up to the political interference of the mayor's office in managing the affairs of the city," said LaRaia, also a former Quincy mayor.

McCauley rejected LaRaia's charges and said, "Many of the people I have appointed have gone on to bigger and better things. Councillor LaRaia also had problems with department heads in his administration.

"However, instead of going on to bigger and better things, some of them went on to jail, others were forced to resign because of indictments and charges pending against them."

Johnson said he left his position after he was actively recruited for over a month.

"There was no political influence at all," said Johnson. "I just felt this was best for me."

The status of the auxiliary police, a volunteer group, which hadn't been allowed to perform its duties since late 1986 because of possible legal liability to the officer or city, couldn't be addressed on a city level, said City Councillor Michael Cheney after a City Hall meeting.

"There is no action that the City Council or mayor can take to change the current status of the auxiliary police," said Cheney, chairman of the council's public safety committee.

But that news didn't sit well with Tony Siciliano, chief of the auxiliary police, who was among those who attended the meeting.

"It's very, very upsetting," said Siciliano. "It seems like other communities have been able to solve the problem, but Quincy has not.

"The people in the city are the ones who are going to be hurt," he said.

Cheney said the problem would have to be addressed on a federal and state level.

The one-man patrol car system, recommended in a report of the Quincy Police Department last year, was put into effect.

But, two-man cars would still be used for certain sections of the city, and for certain situations.

"Statistically, one man cars have proven to decrease crime," said Capt. Fred Laracy, acting chief in the absence of Chief Francis Finn who was on vacation.

"Some people are for it, some are against it," he said.

"I feel it's worthy of a tryout. If we find that it is not successful, then we'll change it."

Benefits of the new system were reported to be increased police visibility, increased safety for officers who are more alert and better product output, according to Laracy.

State and local officials unified their efforts to "strongly oppose" solving Boston's trash problems by siting an incinerator on Quincy's Moon Island or at the closed General Dynamics Quincy Shipyard.

It was also unanimously agreed by the group to oppose construction of any type of incinerator by any group which purchased the yard, according to Mayor Francis McCauley, in whose office the meeting was held.

Discussion centered on Senate President William M. Bulger's derailing of Boston's plans to construct a trash-to-energy incinerator in South Bay.

Bulger said that he would reveal "sometime soon" his own "irresistible choice" for location of the 1,500 ton-a-day plant.

Though Bulger refused to elaborate on his choice which he said would be in a "less populous location" speculation focused on several sites, including Moon Island and the closed Quincy shipyard.

The vacant, 180-acre General Dynamics shipyard in Quincy was also among sites in nine communities being considered for the long-term disposal of Boston area sewage sludge by the Massachusetts Water Resources Authority.

Melanie Thomas said the closed yard was being considered both as a transfer station and for sludge composting and burning.

Mayor McCauley said he wanted to see the disposal site located outside Quincy.

Thirty orders dealing with zoning changes were signed by the mayor during a press conference at City Hall.

"These are some of the most important documents I will sign," said McCauley.

"No one here is against development, per se, but it has to be harnessed and channeled."

The zoning orders had been proposed by the City Council's Zoning Task Force established by Council President Stephen Mcgrath. Some were also suggested by Citizens Advocating Proper Planning (CAPP).

McCauley named retired Quincy Building Inspector Allan F. MacDonald and Mrs. Maureen Mazrimas, past president of Save Our Shores, to the Zoning Board of Appeals which had been expanded from three to five members.

Gov. Michael Dukakis nominated Rep. Thomas Brownell of Quincy as a judge in Plymouth District Court.

If approved by the governor's Executive Council, Brownell would fill the post being vacated by Judge George White who was taking early retirement.

Business and professional leaders, political figures and students attended a community breakfast rally to show strong support for keeping Quincy Junior College as a community college.

Groundbreaking ceremonies were held for QJC's new building being constructed by the Ricciardi Co. to replace classroom space used by QJC in the old Norfolk County courthouse which Ricciardi was purchasing for the nearby Presidents' Place project.

A representative of Kinney Systems told the City Council's Downtown and Economic Development Committee that his company painted over the graffiti in the Ross Garage but vandals replaced it the next week.

Councillor James Sheets suggested that the garage be blocked off after operating hours rather than left open as it is evenings and Sundays.

Work was underway by O'Connell Development Co. of Quincy on a $500,000 85-foot brick and granite clock tower at Marina Bay, Squantum, to honor all the men and women of Quincy who were missing in action or who died while serving in the Vietnam War.

City Fights MWRA Shipyard Purchase

AUGUST

The city went to court to try to stall the Massachusetts Water Resources Authority's planned purchase of the General Dynamics Quincy Shipyard for a reported $49 million.

City Solicitor Joseph (Jay) MacRitchie said that the city could seek an injunction against the purchase any time within the 10 days.

"The process was entirely improper," said Mayor Francis McCauley, who was among city and state officials shocked to learn of the MWRA's plans to purchase the shipyard.

The MWRA board voted 9 to 1 to purchase the yard for use in moving construction workers and materials to the Deer Island Sewage Treatment Plant.

Councillor at Large Joseph LaRaia, a candidate for mayor, said it was important to keep the pressure on the MWRA.

"We have a stake in the shipyard, the people adjacent to it and the city's overall economic future," said LaRaia, who urged the mayor to impanel a Blue Ribbon committee to open discussions with the MWRA's executive director.

Mayor McCauley had earlier established the Quincy Point General Dynamics Site Task Force.

City Council president Stephen McGrath suggested that the city consider taking the General Dynamics Quincy Shipyard by eminent domain.

"Clearly, neither General Dynamics nor the MWRA have dealt fairly with the city in regards to their recent announcement to convey the facility to the MWRA," stated McGrath.

Councillor-at-Large Patricia Toland agreed that the financial feasibility of acquiring the yard by eminent domain should be examined.

"Then, we, the city of Quincy, could lease it and control it," she said.

Later in the month, the city received written notice that the MWRA planned to sign a purchase and sale agreement for the yard in 10 days.

Lawyers for the city sought a preliminary injunction against the purchase of the yard, and pursued other legal action.

The city lost a valued department head and tireless worker in numerous charitable activities with the unexpected death of Richard J. Koch, Sr., due to natural causes.

A life-long Quincy resident, his name was well-known in the city even though he never held elected office.

Mr. Koch was executive director of Quincy Park, Forestry and Cemetery Departments.

The former Merrymount Park on Southern Artery was renamed the Richard J. Koch Family Park and Recreation Complex in the late 1970s.

Mr. Koch was equally known for his charitable endeavors which included founding the Koch Club in 1948. The organization runs activities for youngsters, awards scholarships, helps the needy at Christmas, and sponsors the Flag Day Parade once a year.

Mr. Koch was also one of the founders of the Quincy City Club, Inc. He was elected first president of the service organization in 1975.

He was involved in numerous other organizations over the years, such as the Muscular Dystrophy Association, United Fund, South Shore Association for Retarded Children, Boy Scouts, Heart Association, American Cancer Society and the South Shore Christmas Festival Committee.

"His heart was in it so much as far as helping others," said Ray Cattaneo, Mr. Koch's assistant director for 15 years.

"He never thought about himself.

"He was a tremendous teacher as far as what we are supposed to do in life."

The 11th annual softball doubleheader to benefit Muscular Dystrophy was dedicated in memory of Mr. Koch.

Preliminary elections were scheduled to be held in September in Wards 3 and 5 because of the high number of candidates for those city council seats.

A total of 27 candidates for various races filed nomination papers by the deadline.

John P. "Jake" Comer of Quincy was elected national commander of the American Legion at the national convention in San Antonio, Texas. He called it the "biggest honor" of his life.

A substance abuse testing plan was included in a three-year contract with the city ratified by the Quincy Police Betterment Association.

It was the first time that the city had included such a plan in negotiations with city unions, according to Personnel Director David Smith.

Drug testing language would be proposed in all contracts with city unions, Smith said.

John Beggy, 38, who was placed in protective custody for intoxification, died five hours later in a cell at the police station.

Police Capt. David Rowell said an autopsy revealed that Beggy had a fractured skull and that he died from complications arising from the injury.

Anthony (Tony) Siciliano, general foreman in the General Services Department of the Quincy Police Department for 15 years, was named in the Massachusetts Municipal Association's 1987 Outstanding Municipal Employee of the year.

David A. Kinnecom, 36, of Beach St., Wollaston, was appointed to the newly established $40,000 a year position of Quincy Traffic Engineer.

Remick's, a downtown Quincy landmark for over 90 years, closed its doors.

License Board chairman John Gillis commended Mrs. Lena Strout, proprietor of the Winfield House Restaurant which closed its doors after 50 years.

Actress June Lockhart, well-known for her role as Timmy's mother in the classic television series "Lassie," visited Quincy and received the Golden Paw Award from the Quincy Animal League.

Quincy's Brian Donahue signed with the Green Bay Packers of the NFL as a free agent, and former North Quincy High and Plymouth State College sensation Joe Dudek had high hopes of making the squad as a running back with the Denver Broncos of the NFL.

A granite monument honoring those who contributed to the permanent lights at Veterans Memorial Stadium was unveiled.

Announcing their candidacy for office were Thomas M. McDonald, 24 Vershire St., Ward 3 City Councillor; John McDuff, Jr., South St., School Committee; David F. Tilley, Jr., 66 Sachem St., Ward 5 City Councillor.

Stephen J. Durkin, 125 Colonial Drive, announced his candidacy for re-election to the school committee.

Deaths during August included Thomas E. Flaherty, 66, retired owner of an independent news agency in Quincy; Alfred F. Jago, 67, prominent in yachting circles; Helen L. Sorenson, 92, former Sunday School superintendent and chaplain of the Ladies Aid organization of the First Church of Squantum; Msgr. James J. Scally, 64, pastor of St. Ann's Church, Wollaston, for 13 years; Charles A. Bernazzani, 58, director of elementary education for the Quincy Public Schools; Sr. Mary Honorius, CSJ, (Catherine Toomey), a teacher at Sacred Heart School, North Quincy; Judge Paul K. Duffy, former member of the Quincy School Committee; Jeanne (Hussey) Gamble, 81, past president of the Quincy Women's Club.

RICHARD KOCH, SR., executive secretary of the Quincy Park, Forestry and Cemetery Departments and active in charitable and community causes for four decades, died suddenly in August. He was 64.

JOHN P. (JAKE) COMER, of Quincy, was elected National Commander of the American Legion in August, the first Quincy resident ever to hold that position.

SEPTEMBER

The Wards 3 and 5 City Council nominations went to Lawrence R. Chretien, Howard A.W. MacKay, Charles J. Phelan, Jr., and Kevin M. Burke in the primary elections.

Burke topped John F. Keenan by only four votes in Ward 5 in a photo finish setting the stage for a recount.

The punch card ballots were impounded for the recount.

Only 29 percent of the registered voters in the two wards turned out.

Chretien topped the Ward 3 race with 834 or 49.3 percent. MacKay was 422 and 25 percent.

Behind them were Thomas M. McDonald, 251, and William J. Reardon, 184.

Total vote cast in Ward 3 was 1,691.

Phelan was an easy winner in Ward 5 with 849 votes or 36 percent. Burke was 695 and 29.32 percent.

Keenan was right on Burke's heels with 691 votes or 29.19 percent.

Out of the running were Sabina Kavanagh with 96 votes and David F. Tilley, Jr., with 39.

Total vote cast in Ward 5 was 2,370.

There were no primary contests for mayor, city council at large, School Committee and Wards 1, 2, 4 and 6.

Lawyers for the city appeared in U.S. District Court, Boston, on various motions to limit the sale of the General Dynamics Quincy Shipyard to the Massachusetts Water Resources Authority.

MacRitchie said the city requested that the sale of the yard to the MWRA be limited to the 35 acres it had said it would need for a staging area to transport workers and materials to the Deer Island Sewage Treatment Plant.

Local officials feared the rest of the 185-acre yard could be used for a sludge treatment plant and-or trash incinerator.

The action in federal court followed Judge Thomas Morse's denial in Suffolk Superior Court of the city's requested preliminary injunction against the purchase and sale of the yard by the MWRA for a reported $49 million.

Later in the month, the city stepped up its court action by filing a complaint in federal district court seeking a determination that the environmental review process was flawed by the acquisition of the entire yard by the MWRA.

During a visit to Quincy for the blessing of a new school hall auditorium at St. Joseph's, Cardinal Bernard Law pledged his support to residents and city officials in seeking a solution to the sale of the yard that would best serve the community.

Sen. Edward Kennedy, who was also visiting Quincy, said it was one of his ongoing commitments to work with state and local officials to maintain a shipbuilding capacity at the yard.

Hundreds of protesters from Quincy, Braintree and Weymouth gathered for a tri-town rally at Clean Harbors and the Quincy Shipyard to protest environmental issues including the proposed purchase of the yard by the MWRA.

Other issues were the groups' opposition to Clean Harbors toxic waste plant in Braintree and the possible location of a Boston trash incinerator at the shipyard, according to Peter Kolson, vice president of the Quincy Citizens Association.

The negotiating teams from Quincy Education Association and School Committee reached a tentative contract agreement warding off a threatened job action by teachers.

North Loses Opener To Cambridge Rindge

The North Quincy boys track team lost to strong Cambridge Rindge and Latin, 54-29, in its opening meet, but coach Peter Chrisom Jr. was pleased with the fine performances of several boys, including some first time runners.

The Raiders will next face Brookline Jan. 5 at 5 p.m. at Cambridge.

"I saw some encouraging signs from several of our rookies, despite the obvious hardship of facing a strong team like Cambridge," said Chrisom. "I am also very enthusiastic about the performances of our upper classmen, especially Matt McNamara."

McNamara, a senior co-captain, won the shot put with a personal best toss of 50-1. Matt was the state class champion last spring as well as an all-scholastic guard this year for the football team.

North had only two other winners, Shawn Darcy winning the high jump at 5-6 and junior Brian Barrett winning the two-mile at 11:46.m

Darcy also took third in the 50-yard high hurdles. Also placing in the high jump was junior Brian Mahoney, who jumped 5-4 in his first meet ever.

Barrett led an inexperienced distance group which includes Andy Wohlrab, a sophomore, who placed third in the mile ahead of teammate Dan Kallenberg.

Freshman Pat Faherty placed second in the 1000 behind Cambridge's outstanding Rob Simuels, a top contender for the state title this year. North's Mahoney took third in the 1000.

Mike Oliva placed fourth and Jim Chou fifth in the 50-yard hurdles, both running for the first time.

The middle distance runners showed some promise as Quan Le took second and Jim Rayne third in the 300.

Freshmen Chris Dindy and Mike Campbell and juniors Chi Ching Young and Phillip Chen ran well in the 600, one of Cambridge's strongest events.

Chrisom also hailed the performances of first-time shot putters Scott Leonard, Mike Iaccobacci and Steve Kohler. "They are learning quickly and McNamara has helped make my job easier by training these young shot putters," the Raider skipper said.

Raiderettes Open With Win Over Cambridge

The North Quincy girls indoor track team opened its season with a 44-41 victory over Cambridge Rindge and Latin, giving the young Raiderettes a boost of confidence for the tough indoor season.

North's next meet will be against Brookline at Cambridge Jan. 5 at 5 p.m. First-year head coach Kevin Kelly will then bring some select runners to the Dartmouth relays.

"I was happy to come out with a victory, although I still have some questions about the roles of some individuals on the team," said Kelly. "Most of my veteran runners performed well, as expected, but many of the rookies kept me guessing."

The Raiderettes were led by junior Robin Guilfoy, who won the 50-yard dash and the shotput. "She wants to be league champion in both events, and I believe she can do it," said Kelly. Also doubling in the shot put and dash were freshmen Debbie Ramos and Nancy McCadden.

North scored early with a second place by freshman Tristen Mastrogiacomo and a third by another freshman, Claire Walsh.

Sherrin Quintiliani won the mile and Joanne Moriarty took second place, continuing their steady improvement. Both qualified for the state meet with their performances.

Freshmen Amanda Young and Rachel Marnell had their problems against state champion June Parks in the 1000, but gained valuable experience against tough competition. Young finished second.

Senior Caryn Collings won the 600 and led a young middle distance crew. Placing third was Annmarie Montgomery, who edged teammate Jennifer Flynn.

Junior Betsy Zadig was the lone North runner in the 300, placing second with a personal best time of 43.3 seconds.

Collings finished third in the high jump with a personal best jump of 4-6. Cambridge's Parks won with a Suburban League record jump of 5-6.

With both teams tied at 36 going into the next to last event, the two-mile, North turned to the experience of senior Bridget Toland and the availability of middle distance runner Julie Fitzgerald-Swan. Toland won the event and Fitzgerald-Swan took second to seal the victory for the Raiderettes.

North Swim Team Off To Good Start

The North Quincy boys swim team is off to a good start and last week improved its record to 5-0 with victories over Framingham South and Blue Hills Regional.

Bill Walker's Raiders will next host Newton North in their Suburban League opener Jan. 5 at 3:30 at the Lincoln-Hancock School pool.

North defeated Framingham South, 102-62.

Winning for the Raiders were Bradley Waltermire in the 200 freestyle (2:15.1); Derek Borek, 500 freestyle (6:20.29); Fred Cawthorne, 100 butterfly (1:13.3); Tom Ellis, diving (147.45 points); the 200 medley relay team of Harry Towle, Donald Howie, Bryan Ramos and Paul Nitschke (2:09.4), and the 400 freestyle relay team of Waltermire, Cawthorne, Borek and Chris Burke (4:09.8).

Placing second were Borek, 50 freestyle; Waltermire, 100 freestyle; Burke, 200 freestyle and 500 freestyle; James Peers, 100 backstroke and Kevin Heffernan, diving.

Taking third places were Paul Nitschke, 50 freestyle; Ramos, 100 freestyle; Cawthorne, 200 freestyle; Mark Nitschke, 500 freestyle; Ralph Willard, 100 butterfly; Chris Shionis, 100 breaststroke and Pat Noonan, diving.

Waltermire won the 100 freestyle and the 200 freestyle to lead the Raiders to a 112-55 decision over Blue Hills.

YMCA Strypers Swim Team In Division 1

The South Shore Y.M.C.A. Strypers swim team is starting its first season in Division 1 competition, having won the Eastern District Division 2 championship last year.

In the first meet against the Nashua, N.H., Y.M.C.A., the boys' B team (13-14), edged Nashua, 43-41, as the freestyle relay team of Mike Martorano, Richard Doyle, Richard Griffin and David Cangiano edged Nashua, 1:45.43 to 1:46.96 in the dramatic final event.

The boys E team (8 and under) won easily, 52-7, with strong performances from Paul Zukuaskas (14.5 in the 25-yard freestyle), and James Keyes (1:34.5 in the 100-yard individual medley).

The girls' C team (11-12) faced Melrose Y.M.C.A. and lost a certain victory due to a disqualification after winning the final event, the 200 freestyle relay, by 25 yards.

However, the B and E teams atoned for this loss by defeating Melrose.

Leading the way for the B team (13-14) was the 200-yard freestyle relay team of Kim Bray, Grace Davenport, Amy Galman and Lisa Pierce which won in 2:3.47.

Davenport also won the 50-yard freestyle in 28.94 and the 100-yard freestyle in 1:06.08.

The E girls won, 47-17, as Maryanne Blakie won the 100-yard individual medley in 1:30.46. The medley relay team of Meredith Curley, Annmarie Salerno, Mariann Blakie and Meaghan Powers won in 1:27.23.

Coach Nancy Keyes took a few members of the team to a United States-New England meet in Exeter, N.H.

Pacing the girls was Blakie, who won the girls' 8 and under 25-yard freestyle in 15.63. She also took second in the 25-yard butterfly in 17.04 and second in the 100-yard individual medley in 1:31.05.

Michelle Pierce, 10, received a medal for finishing eighth in the 50-yard freestyle (33.16) and seventh in the 50-yard breaststroke (43.14).

For the boys Keyes, 8, took three third places, the 25-yard butterfly (18.13), 25-yard freestyle (16.26) and 25-yard backstroke (19.39).

Karl Eherns, 8, also swam the 25-yard backstroke (24.06) and 25-yard freestyle (19.55).

Raiders Edge Malden, 3-1

North Quincy's hockey team improved its record to 3-1 with a come-from-behind 5-4 victory over Malden last Saturday night.

Kevin Jago's Raiders hosted Peabody last night (Wednesday) at the Quincy Youth Arena, will play Revere at Revere's Cronin rink Saturday night at 6:40 and will face Brockton next Wednesday at 6 p.m. at Brockton's Asial Rink.

North trailed, 4-2, going into the third period against Malden but scored three times to pull out the win.

Paul McGrath, who played his best game in three years, and Matt Furtado scored North's first two goals.

In the third period Joey Fasano and Bob Thomas scored to tie the score and Jay Rodrigues scored the winning goal with two and a half minutes left to play.

"McGrath was just outstanding and Casano, only a sophomore, played an excellent game," said assistant coach Rick Avery.

Earlier in the week North defeated Everett, 7-3, as Fasano had a hat trick, Furtado had two goals and two assists and Bill Dineen and Marty Feeney had a goal each.

Brian Mahoney, who has had a fine season in goal, had another good night with 22 saves.

Quincy Bows To Medford, 4-2

By TOM SULLIVAN

The Quincy hockey team dropped a 4-2 decision to Medford, one of the top teams in the state, last Saturday night as its record evened at 2-2.

Bob Sylvia's Presidents were scheduled to play Revere last night (Wednesday) at Revere, will host Somerville Saturday night at 7:50 at the Youth Arena and will be home to Waltham next Wednesday night at 6:40 in their Suburban League opener.

Quincy turned in one of its best efforts Saturday despite the loss. Ken Staskiewicz and Tim Mann scored the goals for the Presidents.

Earlier in the week Quincy defeated Malden, 5-1, paced by two goals by Paul Scola, who had a hat trick in Quincy's opening win over Everett.

"Medford is a real strong team and I think the boys did a fine job," Sylvia said. "They skated well and played excellent defense.

"The third line of Ken and Karl Staskiewicz and Joe Cotter has played well and each player has scored. I said at the start of the season that I expected a lot of scoring from Scola and our success depended on how the other players did on offense.

"Scola is still our biggest scoring threat, but Tim Mann, a transfer from Archbishop Williams, is playing well and Greg Chambers continued to play well in goal.

"These kids have a lot of heart and most of them have played for three years. They have played consistently well since the third period of our opener against Arlington and I feel we will do well in the Suburban League.

"I think there will be a real dog fight for the league title and I feel we can skate with any team. We still aren't scoring as well as I would hope, but I think we will start putting the puck into the net and give the other league teams a real battle.

"I hope we do continue to play well and maybe we can arouse more interest in hockey. Right now the future doesn't look bright with 17 of our 32 players seniors and no freshman team. But, if we keep winning, we might get some more boys out. I certainly hope so."

City, Teachers Reach Contract Agreement

tentative settlement with the city of Quincy," said Thomas Walsh, QEA president.

The membership was heduled to vote on the greement in October.

Meanwhile, nurses from Quincy City Hospital picketed in front of City Hall prior to a meeting of the City Council's Public Health and Hospital Committee meeting.

At the meeting, Sandy Eaton, chairman of the Quincy City Hospital Staff Nurses Chapter of the Massachusetts Nurses Association, complained about low pay and a shortage of nurses to cover the night shift.

Hospital director Mark Mundy agreed QCH nurses should be paid more, but said the institution's income was controlled by the government.

Mundy said he would work to solve the dispute with the nurses.

Tenants of Towne House Apartments at 141 Sea St. reorganized a former tenant organization, and joined forces with the nearby 151 Sea St. Tenant Organization owned by the same landlord, Franklin Simon.

A four-alarm fire at 151 Sea St. had left some 15 families homeless and caused an estimated $200,000 damage to the Merrymount apartment building.

Quincy's auxiliary police, which had voluntarily served the city since the late 1930s, announced it would transfer to Braintree by the end of the month.

A lease agreement for a permanent location for the homeless at the Broad St. site of the Registry of Vehicles was ready for the City Council's consideration. The registry was scheduled to move.

Special tribute was paid to the Quincy Sun pledge center and the late Richard J. Koch, Sr. during the Labor Day weekend Muscular Dystrophy Association telethon.

The Quincy Sun started its 20th year, and Radio Station WJDA celebrated its 40th birthday.

The Reverends Peter and Alicia Corea celebrated the 40th anniversary of their team ministry at Houghs Neck Congregational Church.

Mathias J. Mulvey was named Quincy's new building inspector, succeeding Kenneth Johnson who left to take a job in the private sector.

Paul Marshall, 20, and his brother, Chris Marshall, 18, were both drafted by teams in the national hockey league. They are sons of Louise and Norfolk County Sheriff Clifford Marshall.

North Quincy's Joe Dudek had high hopes of making the Denver Broncos of the NFL as a running back, but his hopes were dashed when he, along with several other candidates, were cut as the teams got down to the 45-player limit.

Deaths during September included Willard Crayton, 53, a former carpenter at General Dynamics Fore River Shipyard and a foster parent to more than 90 children; Anthony Caperci, 89, retired Quincy Police lieutenant who won a commendation for his valor; Michael C. McLarnon, 69, co-owner of the Hutchinson Oil Co., Quincy; Samuel F. Perkins, 72, author and guest lecturer at the Smithsonian Institution; Helen E. (Marchand) O'Rourke, 74, Quincy Public Schools teacher for 23 years before retiring in 1975.

OCTOBER

Mayor Francis McCauley announced a $10.1 million surplus and tensions escalated between the city and Quincy teachers who had been working without a contract.

The teachers felt that a portion of the surplus should go towards raises. School Committee member Frank Anselmo agreed.

But Mayor Francis McCauley said it would be "poor financial policy" to fund teacher raises, a recurring expense, with a one-time surplus.

He also said that if he dipped into the surplus for teacher raises, he would almost be obligated to do the same for other unions.

The 725-member teachers' union had earlier reached a tentative contract agreement, but that agreement was unanimously voted down when the city's surplus was announced.

They amounted to about $1,000 a teacher, he said.

"Now they (the city) have the money, and it is almost like waving a red flag," said Walsh.

After negotiating with the city until the early hours, Quincy teachers won a $912,000 increase over an earlier contract proposal and averted a threatened strike.

As part of the agreement, teachers were finally to receive the 1979 raises they negotiated but never received.

McCauley stressed that the increased money in the agreement did not come out of the city's $10.1 million surplus, but from general funds.

City Councillor Joseph LaRaia, a candidate for mayor, suggested that the surplus be used to take the General Dynamics Quincy Shipyard by eminent domain.

McCauley said that half of the surplus would be kept on reserve, and the other half would go for equipment and improvement to 10 city departments.

The items included such things as improvements to 14 schools, a new bookmobile for the library, pumper for the Fire Department and 11 marked cruisers for the Police Department.

John Keenan won one of two nominations for the Ward 5 City Council seat after a recount by hand of preliminary election ballots put him over the top by one vote.

Keenan had requested the recount after he lost the second nomination to Kevin Burke by only four votes.

Charles Phelan easily won the first nomination.

The recount brought Keenan's tally from 691 to 697, Burke's from 695 to 696. Phelan remained the same at 849.

"I never remember an election that was so close," said City Clerk John Gillis, who noted that the recount cost the city about $800.

MARINA BAY Clock Tower honoring the 46 Quincy residents killed or missing in action during the Vietnam War was dedicated in October in Squantum.

Ward 4 City Councillor James Sheets was sued for slander by the Ricciardi Co. of Quincy, prominent developers of such projects as the $54 million "Presidents' Place" planned for downtown Quincy.

The suit alleged that the slander took place at a Planning Board meeting May 11, 1987.

A 21-year-old Wollaston man was charged with the murder of Susan M. Paul, 16, a former girlfriend.

Kenneth M. Yesilermen of 19 Elm Ave. pleaded innocent to the charge in connection with the incident.

Miss Paul's body had been found in September near Pageant Field in Merrymount. She had been beaten to death.

The recently established AIDS Education Task Force held its first meeting.

"The committee is still in its beginning stages, but there was a lot of enthusiasm shown," said Health Commr. M. Jane Gallahue, committee chairman.

Major function of the task force, appointed by the mayor, was to educate those in the community about AIDS.

McCauley and his challenger clashed over a letter sent by LaRaia to parents of local school children that the average cost expended per pupil in Quincy was $500 less than the state average.

"We are on the threshold of another crisis in our city," said LaRaia.

But McCauley denied the charge and referred to figures from the school superintendent indicating the city is above the state average in overall per pupil standing.

McCauley said the city would continue its fight in court against the purchase of the entire General Dynamics Quincy Shipyard by the MWRA Authority.

A coalition of officials, including Sen. Paul Harold, was formed to endorse Spectacle Island as the location for the MWRA's sludge facility.

Rep. Michael Morrissey said he was opposed to locating a sludge incinerator on Spectacle Island. "I'm opposed to incineration in general," said Morrissey.

The City Council opposed the shipyard as a sludge facility, but supported Spectacle Island for composting of sludge.

Describing them as "champions of freedom," retired U.S. Army General William Westmoreland dedicated the Marina Bay Clock Tower that honored Quincy residents killed or missing in action during the Vietnam War.

Westmoreland and Thomas O'Connell of O'Connell Development Co., builder of the $500,000 brick and granite tower which overlooked Marina Bay, North Quincy, unveiled the named of 46 Quincy residents who died or were missing in action while serving in Vietnam.

John P. (Jake) Comer, national commander of the American Legion, was reunited with Quincy friends, family and municipal colleagues, during a brief but sentimental stop at City Hall as part of a whirlwind three-day homecoming.

The City Council authorized the mayor to enter into a lease agreement with the Interfaith Sheltering Coalition for a shelter for homeless at the site of the Registry of Motor Vehicles which was scheduled to move to Quincy Sq.

Demolition of the landmark Bargain Center in Quincy Sq. got underway with local officials taking part in ceremonies to make way for the $55 million Presidents' Place project.

Three Quincy men travelled to China with a delegation of specialists in occupational education as citizen ambassadors. They were Edward Roberts of Atlantic St., John Tompkins of

McCauley Edges LaRaia In Thriller

Holmes St., and Joseph Mazzarella, director of Quincy Vocational Technical School.

North Quincy's Joe Dudek, called back by the Denver Broncos during the NFL strike, rushed for 128 yards and scored the Broncos' first two touchdowns in the opening quarter of a nationally televised game. He lead the Broncos to a 30-14 victory over the Raiders. Dudek called it "A night I will never forget."

Deaths during October included John F. Franceschini, 64, chief negotiator for the Boston Ship Co.; Rose (Tratten) Thorner, 95, a founding member of Congregation Adas Shalom of Quincy; Wesley G. Angell, 80, retired head of the claims division of Mutual Fire Insurance Association of New England and trustee of Eastern Nazarene College, Wollaston; Nora A. Thomas, 95, co-president and founder of the former Quincy Syrian Bakery Co.; Susan K. (Bradley) Donovan, 92, one of the first women elected to the Massachusetts Legislature; Edward H. Libertine, 80, Quincy attorney since 1937.

NOVEMBER

Mayor Francis McCauley edged challenger Joseph LaRaia to win a fourth term in one of the closest elections in recent years.

Voter turnout was 52 percent.

McCauley's margin was a slim 474 votes as he polled 11,436 votes to 10,962 for LaRaia.

The win was virtually guaranteed for McCauley with a strong vote in Ward 2, Precinct 2.

LaRaia tallied only 21 more votes than McCauley - 621 to 600 - in an area that had been considered LaRaia country.

That gave McCauley a 331 vote margin with only Ward 6, Precinct 5, left to come in. That precinct, traditionally McCauley's, boosted him to a 474 vote margin.

It was the closest mayoral win since 1975 when LaRaia ousted Mayor Walter Hannon by 483 votes in a recount.

City Council president Stephen McGrath, Patricia Toland and newcomer Tim Cahill won the three City Council at large seats, finishing in that order.

Ward 4 incumbent James Sheets breezed by challenger Philip Baldassini 2,886 to 648 votes.

Charles Phelan Jr. took the Ward 5 City Council seat, defeating John Keenan.

The three incumbent School Committee members were all re-elected with Christopher Kennedy topping the field. Kennedy's vote of 13,079 was also tops on the entire ballot.

Stephen Durkin and Frank Anselmo polled 12,114 and 11,063, respectively, to nail down the other two School Committee seats.

Ward Councillors Michael Cheney (1), Ted DeCristofaro (2), and Thomas Nutley (6) were re-elected without opposition.

Later in the month, LaRaia requested a recount by hand of the ballots which had been kept under police guard since the election. But the recount was called off after a day and a half's counting of Wards 2 and 3 produced only an 11 vote difference.

A recount of the councillor at large race, requested by Ronald Iacobucci, got underway.

Iacobucci lost the third spot in that race to Timothy Cahill by 217 votes.

The community was stunned and saddened by the deaths of three young lifelong friends who were killed in a two-car crash early Thanksgiving morning in Wollaston.

Successive funeral Masses were held at St. John's Church, Quincy Center, for Richard A. Miller, Jr., William P. Marston and Timothy F. Tobin, all 22 of Quincy.

Matthew Tobin, also 22, severely injured in the same vehicle, was listed in poor condition and on the danger list in the intensive care unit at Quincy City Hospital.

Timothy Tobin, the driver of one of the cars, involved in the accident, was the son of Quincy Police Officer and Mrs. Timothy G. Tobin. Matthew Tobin, cousin of Timothy Tobin, was the son of Quincy District Court Clerk Magistrate and Mrs. Arthur Tobin. Tobin is a former Quincy mayor.

The occupants of the other car, Christopher Poole, 26, of North Weymouth, the driver, and Renee Levesque, 18, of Quincy, a passenger, were also injured.

Levesque suffered a broken arm and leg and was admitted to Quincy City Hospital. Poole recovered at home.

Fr. William McCarthy, St. John's pastor, eulogized Tobin as a courteous young man who "responded most willingly and kindly to any task he was called upon in the parish."

Assoc. pastor Rev. Daniel Graham eulogized both Marston and Miller as young men who had "serenity and an inner peace about (them) that was contagious."

Their lives "were short indeed, 22 years is all that they had to give," he said.

One of the hottest issues ever before the Zoning Board of Appeals drew a large crowd at City Hall as the Ricciardi Co. of Quincy requested a comprehensive permit for Summit View.

The project, proposed for West Quincy, would include 1,340 units, 536 of which would be low and moderate housing.

The comprehensive permit would mean that the developer would not be subject to local zoning such as height limitations. Six, 10-story buildings were planned.

Mayor McCauley said that police would step up ticketing of illegally parked cars overnight after they contributed to delayed snow plowing efforts in a recent snow storm.

McCauley said that those who violated the odd-even parking ordinance should be prepared to receive tickets.

The odd-even parking ordinance, in effect from Oct. 15 to April 15, called for parking on odd numbered sides of the street in odd numbered years such as 1987 for those with parking permits from the Police Department.

In 1988, parking would be allowed on even-numbered sides of the street.

In addition, no parking would be allowed on main arteries at any time, he said.

The mayor noted that the timing of the storm, one of the earliest on record, meant that many private contractors were not prepared to answer the city's call for help.

The storm also spurred a flurry of comments and suggestions to the Public Works Commissioner during the City Council meeting.

Councillor Thomas Nutley reintroduced a resolve proposing establishment of a 24-hour hotline at City Hall during and after snowstorms and other emergencies.

Councillor Michael Cheney suggesting purchasing new snow fighting equipment and installing a method of communication with private contractors hired to plow streets.

Mayor McCauley said the city had no plans to end the contract with Bay State Ambulance which was indicted after allegedly bribing a former Quincy City Hospital official to obtain the city's ambulance service contract in 1984.

"We'll look at the overall situation again if the ambulance service and its president are found guilty," he said.

His comments came during the council's consideration of a $1.6 million appropriation proposed by the mayor from the surplus account to the landfill. The appropriation was eventually approved 8 to 1, with Councillor James Sheets opposed.

The appropriation was to be used to bring the landfill, closed last spring, into compliance with Department of Environmental Quality Engineering regulations, according to Anderson.

Six people were driven from their homes in bitter cold temperatures after a four-alarm fire at a Quincy Center rooming house caused an estimated $100,000 damage, officials said.

"There is no question that it was an electrical problem," said Fire Chief Carl Valenti of the fast spreading fire at 12 Mechanic St. in a three-story structure owned by City Councillor Joseph LaRaia.

The membership of the Quincy Education Association overwhelmingly voted to ratify a three-year contract agreement with the city reached earlier.

Concerned Quincy officials invited representatives of the Mass. Water Resources Authority to tour the truck route it had proposed through the city to the Quincy shipyard to be used as a staging area for the Deer Island Sewage Treatment plant.

The materials would then be barged to the $1 billion Deer Island plant.

The Quincy Interfaith Sheltering Coalition's permanent location for the homeless was to be named after the Rev. William McCarthy, pastor of St. John's Church, Quincy Center, and longtime worker for the homeless.

"The official name will be the Rev. William R. McCarthy Interfaith Shelter - Fr. Bill's Place," said Nancy Powers, executive director of the QISC.

Cardinal Bernard Law celebrated a Mass of Thanksgiving at Our Lady of Good Counsel Church, Merrymount, which celebrated its 50th anniversary.

Topping off ceremonies were held for the $7.1 million addition and remodeling of the Quincy Police Station.

Nearly 200,000 people lined the 2.8 mile route for the annual Christmas Festival parade on the theme, "The Magic of Christmas."

Quincy and North Quincy tied 14-14 in the 55th Thanksgiving Day classic.

North Quincy's Joe Dudek was signed by the Denver Broncos to a 1988 contract.

The Montclair Men's Club honored Boston Herald sports columnist Tim Horgan with its John B. Gillooly Memorial Award and a framed cartoon commemorating the occasion.

Other deaths during November included Joseph P. McDonough, a retired lawyer with an office in Quincy; Vaughn Yerxa, 87, owner of the former Adams Theater in Quincy; Cyril B. Smith, 73, a former mayor of Winona, Minn.; H. Loverna (Staples) Mattie, 84, former owner of Loverna's Beauty Shop in Quincy; Felix Carracciolo, 77, a retired Navy commodore and head of new ship repair at the Fore River Shipyard during World War II; Kenneth J. Walsh, 72, a retired steamfitter and former Quincy Civil Defense director; John J. Ward, 84, a former assistant attorney general; John C. Whitten, 37, a lawyer and founder of Meets 'n' Sweets delicatessens and Ebenezer's ice cream and bakery shops; James V. Christie, 80, a former owner of the Clam Box and Powers food stand on Wollaston Beach.

DECEMBER

Mayor Francis McCauley announced that the city had entered into an agreement with the Mass. Water Resources Authority for an interim sludge facility at the Quincy Shipyard at least until 1995.

"We pressed the court case as far as we could," said McCauley, referring to the city's legal efforts against the purchase of the Quincy Shipyard by the MWRA.

The agreement was announced at a press conference also attended by MWRA executive director Paul Levy, Quincy DPW Commr. Paul Anderson and consultant David Stanley.

McCauley and Levy said the agreement would accelerate the Boston Harbor cleanup, provide the city with tax revenue as well as eliminate planned sludge processing activities at the MWRA's Nut Island Pollution Control Facility in Houghs Neck.

"The MWRA was planning to process sludge and transport the sludge by truck from Nut Island which is primarily a residential area," said McCauley.

"Under terms of the city's agreement with the MWRA,

Over 1200 Tour Historic Sites For 'Holidays In Quincy'

Over 1200 visitors toured Quincy's historic sites during this year's "Holidays in Quincy" festival held Dec. 3 to Dec. 6.

This biannual event is sponsored by the Quincy Historical Society, Society for the Preservation of New England Antiquities, United First Parish Church, and the National Park Service.

The sites decorated for the holidays included the Adams Academy Building, Church of the Presidents, Adams Mansion, and Josiah Quincy House. Garden clubs of Squantum, Wollaston, Germantown, and Braintree decorated the four historic sites with appropriate historic holiday wreaths, garlands, and trees.

The festivities began with an Around the Town Gala which included live musical performances at all four sites and refreshments at the Adams Academy. The proceeds from "Holidays in Quincy" will go to each of the four participating historic sites.

Only the Adams Academy is open for tours throughout the year. "Holidays in Quincy" provided visitors with a rare look at how Christmas must have been observed inside the Adams Mansion, Josiah Quincy House, and United First Parish Church many years ago.

"Holidays in Quincy" is again planned for 1989.

WEEK OF: December 31

BIRTHDAY THIS WEEK
You're generally business oriented, though the year ahead sees you taking up new artistic pursuits. Partnership activities are highlighted over the coming six months. The second half of 1988 may find you traveling to destinations you've long dreamed about.

AQUARIUS – January 21 - February 19
A lively week, but make a point of finding time to enjoy your own company. Writing skills are accented. Educational interest may lead to a moneymaking opportunity.

PISCES – February 20 - March 20
Assuming a middle of the road position is not for you, this week sees you taking a strong stand on something you fiercely believe in. Reconciliations are highlighted.

ARIES – March 21 - April 20
You may feel slightly restricted in a week that favors reflection and meditation. Mixed financial news requires careful planning. Loved one helps start the new year on a sweet note.

TAURUS – April 21 - May 22
A project that's lingered through 1987 now moves into high gear. The first week of the year is important for making career and health-related plans.

GEMINI – May 23 - June 21
Accent creativity in various areas, notably in career and academic environments. Relatives demand more time but it's time well spent. Long-distance communications improve.

CANCER – June 22 - July 22
Sentimental streak surfaces early in the new year. Old and new friendships are highlighted. Surprise news bulletin helps start the new year on an enthusiastic note.

LEO – July 23 - August 22
Trouble among friends should not affect you; if you're to help, it's important that you remain objective. Mental stimulation and educational programs are accented.

VIRGO – August 23 - September 22
Friendship circle is expanded as the new year gets off to a sociable start. Craft projects and hobbies are also spotlighted. Mechanical problems require careful attention.

LIBRA – September 23 - October 22
Loved one is particularly empathetic and provides a good sounding board. Relative may be under more pressure than you realize; your support here is most important.

SCORPIO – October 23 - November 21
Cooperative ventures prove unusually rewarding now. Family member is counting on your discretion. Co-worker or neighbor helps you out of a jam.

SAGITTARIUS – November 22 - December 22
Judgement is all-important. On the one hand, you may be oversimplifying problems; on the other, you could be making mountains of molehills. Last year's hard work pays dividends.

CAPRICORN – December 23 - January 20
Insurance and related matters may dominate much of the week. The calendar is filling up quickly as the year is off to a lively start. Your hunches are often strong now.

sludge will be processed at the Fore River Staging Area, which is primarily industrial.

"Sludge will then be transported in sealed tanker cars by the Fore River Railroad as soon as possible after sludge operations commence.

"The city will receive tax revenue from private companies on MWRA property from 1991, or before, to 1995 until permanent sludge processing facilities are established by the MWRA," he said.

"The MWRA has also agreed to sign a significant mitigation agreement with the city to compensate the city for the impact of MWRA activities upon the community.

Several officials criticized the mayor for not sharing prior knowledge of the agreement, and charged that one part of the city, Quincy Point, was sold out for another, Houghs Neck.

Ward 2 Councillor Theodore DeCristofaro, in whose ward the shipyard is located, said he was disappointed he had no prior knowledge of the agreement.

But McCauley said he had nothing to report until shortly before the agreement was announced.

Rep. Robert Cerasoli said that McCauley "sold out one part of the city for another."

The mayor said that the best interest of Quincy would be served if the city worked with the MWRA.

McCauley also said he didn't think the interim sludge plant would adversely affect a proposal by Cogentrix for a coal burning plant to produce steam and electricity.

The proposal had been presented to city officials earlier. A tie-in with efforts by former workers to return and build ships had also been suggested.

Mayor McCauley wrote to the License Board "strongly urging" that the hours be rolled back from 1 a.m. to 11 p.m. at Chevy's Belair Cafe, Parkingway, Quincy Sq.

McCauley said he took the action because of complaints by such parties as Kinney Systems, which operates the Ross Parking Garage adjacent to Chevy's, alleging drinking outside the establishment.

"Maybe this will do something to cut down the problems before they get worse," said McCauley.

Other incidents included a car being torched, two cars and two trash cans set afire, and a woman seriously beaten, according to published reports.

McCauley noted that similar action was taken in 1981 when the hours of a South Quincy establishment were rolled back because of problems.

The board continued the matter to January.

School Supt. Dr. Robert Ricci recommended to the School Committee that the Quincy Point and Sterling Middle Schools be consolidated next year to equalize middle school offerings.

That would mean that students, teachers and staff of Quincy Point Middle School would go instead to Sterling Middle School in South Quincy.

At a later meeting, he also made an alternative recommendation that Point Middle be merged with the Daniel Webster elementary school for kindergarten through Grade 8.

The requirements that staff members with AIDS or clinical evidence of HIV infection report their condition to the superintendent was dropped from school department policy by the School Committee.

The action was taken after Atty. Gen. James Shannon threatened to proceed with legal action if the policy was not rescinded.

Shannon said the policy, adopted in March, 1986, by the Quincy School Committee, not only violated the right to privacy as protected under state law, but also discriminated against employees on the basis of a handicap.

No case of AIDS (Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome) had been reported.

Ronald Iacobucci called off a recount of the councillor at large race which he lost by 217 votes and said he would decide whether to pursue the matter in Superior Court.

Iacobucci said the recount produced no significant change in the vote tabulation, but that he noticed a significant number of uncancelled ballots.

City Clerk John Gillis said that mayoral and councillor at large recounts cost the city a total of $23,738.84.

That broke down to $4,360 for the mayoral recount, $5,080 for councillor at large, and $14,298.94 for police to guard the ballots after the Nov. 3 election.

Gillis said he planned to propose legislation that would require a candidate who loses by a substantial margin to pay for the work involved if the election outcome doesn't change after a recount.

The Board of Registrars voted to allow Patriot Ledger publisher K. Prescott Low to continue as a registered voter at 13 Temple St., Quincy, the newspaper's address.

City Councillor Joseph LaRaia, who lost the race for mayor to incumbent Francis McCauley, had requested the hearing.

LaRaia questioned whether 13 Temple St. was Low's domicile.

Mathew D. Tobin, 22, the fourth victim of a tragic Thanksgiving morning car accident in Wollaston, died at Quincy City Hospital.

Teachers who had retired or resigned from the Quincy Public Schools told the School Committee it was unfair they would not receive the 1979 raises that were negotiated but until recently the city had declined to pay.

Police had a suspect in the brutal murder of Lois Quintiliani Damon in the Braintree convenience store she owned with her husband, but still did not have enough evidence for an arrest one year after the crime.

The last roadblock was cleared in the 10-mile Town Brook Flood Control Project and the final portion of the paroject was expected to be underway by the summer of 1988, said Sen. Paul Harold.

Many needy Quincy families and children had a happier Christmas and holiday season thanks to several Quincy organizations and residents who once again demonstrated the true Christmas spirit of giving.

Deaths during December included Msgr. Walter J. Leach, S.T.D., 81, former pastor of St. Ann's Church, Wollaston, from 1951 to 1969; Thomas McDonald, 66, an assistant district supervisor for the MBTA, Carolyn "Kay" A. (Guerra) Montilio, 69, who along with her husband founded and ran Montilio's Pastry Shop Inc.; Thomas J. Doherty, 24, a graduate student in chemical engineering at the University of Lowell; Paul J. Barry, 53, past president of the Quincy Youth Football League; Timothy J. Lynch, Sr., 66, a parking meter attendant in Quincy for the last 12 years; Kevin S. Murphy, 31, a Metropolitan police officer died of injuries suffered when the family station wagon, driven by his wife, was struck head-on. He was the son of Quincy Police Capt. William F. Murphy, Jr.

Fund Established For Wollaston Fire Victims

The Garrigan-Polito Family Fund has been established at Quincy Savings Bank for the four adults and four children who were burned out of their Wollaston two-family home in a four-alarm fire just before Christmas.

The Dec. 22 blaze caused more than $100,000 damage to the 10 Chapman St. house which was left unlivable, according to Fire Chief Carl Valenti.

Donations may be made at any branch of Quincy Savings Bank, or sent to 1200 Hancock St., according to Penny Mowri, a friend of the fire victims and one of the employees at Trans National Travel, Boston, who established the fund.

"Friends and neighbors have been exceptionally generous," said Mowri. "But it's not nearly enough to establish everyday living."

A fundraising dance is also being planned for late January or early February, she said.

Donations have already been made by the Quincy Firefighters Association which contributed $900 to Anne and Robert Garrigan to help replace Christmas gifts for their four children.

They are parents of Kevin, 7; Katie, 5; Michael, 2½, and Shawna, 3 months.

In addition, students from North Quincy High School contributed $1,000 to the family, according to Gene Macomber, dean of students at the school. He said that leaders of the drive were Chris Roffey, Ken Heily and Dave Bearon.

"Their hearts are broken, but not their spirit," said Mowri, of the Garrigans.

They are staying with family at 79 North Central Ave., Wollaston, she said and are seeking a duplex apartment.

Other victims of the fire were Ken Polito and his female roommate, Elizabeth Garrigan, sister of Robert Garrigan.

Polito is staying with a friend in Quincy, and Garrigan will be staying with her, said Mowri.

Elizabeth Garrigan also received $300 from the Quincy Firefighters Association.

According to Valenti, the fire was caused by a malfunction of the oil burner in the house.

"It exploded and caught fire to some combustibles around the furnace," said Valenti.

The building, owned by Peter Cakrida of 66 Willow St., Quincy, was evacuated prior to arrival by the Fire Department, said Valenti.

One firefighter, Paul Andrew, sustained a cut on his hand, and was taken to Quincy City Hospital where he was treated and released, Valenti said.

Mutual aid from Boston, Weymouth, Braintree and Milton covered the Quincy stations, he said.

Property Inspection Moves To South Quincy

The inspection, listing and measuring of the city's residential property for assessing purposes has been completed in the Houghs Neck, Germantown, Adams Shore, Merrymount, Quincy Center and Quincy Point areas, according to the Board of Assessors.

The inspections have begun in the South Quincy area, and will be followed by examination of the West Quincy homes.

In cases where entry has not been made to make the inspection necessary to correctly list and assess a parcel, the owner will be notified by mail that such inspection was attempted. He or she will be urgently requested to call or write the inspection team in order to arrange for a convenient time to make the inspection.

Failure to have the inspection made could result in an incorrect estimate of conditions now existing, which could be costly to a taxpayer, according to the Assessors Board.

The cooperation of the homeowners of the city is imperative so that the work may be satisfactorily completed by the end of 1988," said board members.

Free Program For Unemployed At QJC

Quincy Junior College has received a grant from the State Department of Occupational Education to conduct a fall program for unemployed, single adults in the South Shore area.

The program will begin Jan. 20 and will run through June 30. The hours will be Monday through Friday from 11 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Pre-registration days will be held at Quincy Junior College Conference Room, second floor, Room 15, 34 Coddington St., Quincy, Jan. 6, 7, and 13 at 1 p.m. Pre-registration will consist of orientation, application and group testing. 3 New Councillors

McCauley Takes 4th Term Oath Jan. 4

Mayor Francis McCauley said he would give a 10 to 12 minute extemporaneous address at inauguration ceremonies Monday, Jan. 4, at 10 a.m. at the Quincy Vocational Technical School gym.

McCauley, who customarily does not read from a prepared text, declined to give specifics of the address. But he said he would announce some council orders and legislative proposals.

He will be sworn into office for his fourth term by City Clerk John Gillis.

Gillis will also administer the oath of office to the nine members of the City Council.

Six members of the present City Council will begin new terms of office. They are Ward Councillors Michael T. Cheney, Theodore P. DeCristofaro, James A. Sheets and Thomas J. Nutley.

Councillor At Large Patricia M. Toland will be joined by two new councillors at large, present Ward 5 Councillor Stephen J. McGrath and Timothy P. Cahill.

Lawrence P. Chretien will succeed John J. Lydon, Jr. as Ward 3 Councillor, and Charles Phelan, Jr. will replace Councillor McGrath as the Ward 5 Councillor.

Councillor Toland, who will begin her fourth term as councillor at large after serving six years on the School Committee, is expected to be unanimously elected the first woman president of the City Council. Mrs. Jeanne Reardon is expected to be re-elected Clerk of Committees.

Mayor McCauley will swear in three members of the School Committee who were re-elected to four year terms in the November election. Christopher Kennedy will begin his fourth term, Stephen Durkin his second term and Frank Anselmo will begin his 27th consecutive year on the School Committee in 1988.

Anselmo, who has served continuously on the School Committee since 1962, is the senior elected official in Quincy city government.

His length of municipal service is exceeded only by that of the late Dr. Nathaniel S. Hunting, who served 36 years on the School Committee.

Mary Collins, who is presently serving her third term on the School Committee, reportedly has the votes to be elected vice chairperson of the committee. She would succeed Stephen Durkin, who cannot succeed himself. The committee is expected to re-elect Dr. Robert Ricci as secretary of the committee and Mrs. Tefta Burrelli, Clerk of the Committee.

Ceremonies will open with presentation of the colors by the Air Force, Jr. R.O.T.C. Music will be provided by the combined choirs and bands of Quincy and North Quincy High Schools. Fr. Joseph Downey, pastor of St. Joseph's Church, will offer the invocation, Rabbi Jacob Mann, will offer a prayer and Rev. Russell F. Metcalfe, pastor of the Wollaston Church of the Nazarene, will give the benediction.

The public is invited to a reception for the mayor and members of the city council and school committee Tuesday, Jan. 5, at 8 p.m. at the Neighborhood Club of Quincy.

Refreshments will be served and music will be provided by Paul Ricca's band.

Registry At New Location Jan. 19

The Registry of Motor Vehicles is expected to move to its new location at 76 Parking Way Jan. 16-17, and be open for business Tuesday, Jan. 19.

In addition to offering the public restrooms, the new location is over 2400 square feet larger, and will have three additional counter positions.

The RMV has arranged to have 18 parking spaces available for road tests and handicapped drivers. Residents may also take advantage of the 350-space parking garage located directly opposite the office's main entrance.

The new location also has a unique design. The interior is divided into two sections, with all registration procedures handled to the right of the office entrance, and all driver's license processing handled to the left of the entrance.

This arrangement is aimed at reducing customer confusion over which line to stand in for registrations and which for licensing, and eliminating unnecessary waiting for customers who mistakenly stand in the wrong line.

The building is owned by Messina Quincy Fair Properties Ltd. Partnership of Braintree.
